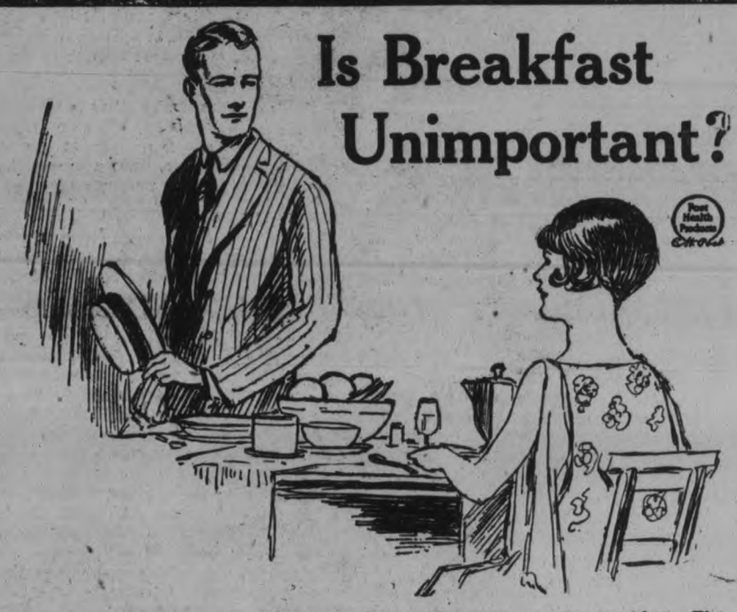
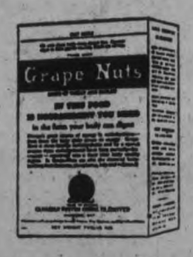
Is Breakfast Unimportant?





THE longest fast of the day precedes breakfast. The hardest work of the day follows it. Under such circumstances how can breakfast be of little importance?

Indeed, this first meal of your day is possibly the most important. For beyond the fact that you have not eaten for ten or twelve hours or more; beyond the fact that you must supply to your body anew the elements it needs for the day's work, is this fact—your bodily organs have been resting during the night and they are prepared to extract the maximum nourishment from the foods you eat at breakfast.

Make sure that maximum nourishment is there—that your breakfast contains the precious essential elements of nutrition, and in the right proportions.

But don't think you need be a food expert to do this.

A man who studied foods all his life has done it for you—originated one delicious food which gives you the five essential elements of nutrition—that food is Grape-Nuts.

The Vital Nourishment Your Body Needs is in this Food

Grape-Nuts is made from whole wheat and malted barley. It furnishes dextrins, maltose and other carbohydrates for energy; iron for the blood; phosphorus for bones and teeth; protein for muscle and body-building; and the essential Vitamin-B. One serving of Grape-Nuts with milk or cream supplies more varied nourishment than many a hearty meal!

And Grape-Nuts is so delicious! Its crisp, golden kernels are prepared by a special baking process which results in a particularly tempting, nut-like flavor. And the same process makes Grape-Nuts very easy to digest.

And Grape-Nuts is crisp—a food you like to chew, thus giving your teeth and gums the healthful exercise they need.

Make Grape-Nuts a part of your daily diet. It's very inexpensive—four teaspoonfuls costing less than one cent is sufficient for a serving. Your grocer has Grape-Nuts in wax-wrapped packages ready to eat right from the package. Or, if you wish, accept the free offer below,

PUBLIC SPIRIT NEEDED.

In the Voice of the People column today is printed a letter signed "Motorist," in which the writer objects to the proposed new traffic regulation in Peterborough on the ground that people will break the law. Because "there is not a shade of doubt that every minute and every hour of the day this law will be broken," says Motorist. "A more nonsensical measure has never been put before the Council." Which is about as nonsensical a manner of viewing a public question as any we have encountered.

Peterborough needs a traffic bylaw. The Council has been struggling with the problem for several years, ever since Motorist and four thousand others started to drive automobiles through the streets. And now, after much consideration and consultation with men who have made a study of traffic problems, the plan of stop streets has been practically decided as the best. This system is working well in other cities, and while it solves only one of the problems of traffic control, it is nevertheless effective in cutting down the toll of accidents.

Motorist declares traffic policemen or traffic signals are necessary to make the through street law effective, but this is absurd. It is very well known that at present Peterborough has no policemen for traffic control except at the very busy hours and at very busy intersections. The men who proposed the new regulation had this in mind, and certainly had no intention of adding to the burdens of the taxpayer by enrolling more policemen or erecting signals at every corner.

It is not the man who is imperfect in driving that is dangerous on the street, so much as the perfect driver. The man who is conscious of his limitations will take precautions at intersections that appear foolish to the perfect driver. It is the "perfect driver" that swings blithly into the current of traffic from a side street without regard to the other fellow —because the perfect driver knows he can stop his car or swing it clear.

The Examiner does not agree with Motorist on many points raised in his letter, least of all when he says the only way to stop accidents is to prohibit the use of automobiles on the streets. Precautions such as that proposed to be adopted in the city will aid materially in reducing the number of collisions. Common sense is needed, but just as important is the obeying of traffic laws adopted for the safeguarding of those who use the streets. If Motorist and others refuse to obey the law, the law is useless. It is just the same with other laws we have in Peterborough. Take the quarantine regulations, for instance. Smallpox cases are probably all quarantined, because the disease is so serious that a doctor must be called in, and he reports to the Health Officer. But chickenpox and measles, many people think, can be treated without the aid of a physician, and are never reported. There is one case in the centre of the city today where the offenders went the length of inviting friends to their house to visit the child said to be sick with cold when as a matter of fact she had chickenpox.

If the quarantine regulations or the through street bylaw are to be effective they must be enforced. If citizens have not the public spirit to obey the regulations that are made by those whom they elect to make such regulations, they should be compelled to observe them. To allow some to flaunt the law is to sin against the person who obeys it.

In Peterborough there are many, many good citizens who do their best to live within the law and to carry out the provisions made for the welfare of the city. To other smart ones these good citizens are "soft." No man should be allowed to set himself up against any regulation that is made for the community; the civic spirit needed by Peterborough if it is to progress will never be found in such men.

FILMING THE TRENT WATERWAY.

The plan now approaching maturity of advertising the attractions to be found along the route of the Trent Waterway is one that is to be commended as keeping pace with the march of progress.

Beginning at Midland, on Georgian Bay, one of the steamers belonging to the Department of Railways and Canals will carry a party from the Provincial Motion Picture Bureau over the route between Georgian Bay and Young's Point and films will be taken of the scenery of the itinary. From these pictures the Trent Waterway Development Association will have narrow gauge films made which will be suitable for transportation to places where the attractions of the district are being advertised.

The Trent Waterway Association, which has been the body that inspired the project, is resolved that the operations will not cease at Young's Point and will, if necessary, charter a vessel to complete the journey to the Lake Ontario end of the waterway at Trenton.

There are many reasons why the expedition should pay particular attention to Peterborough. This city is, with all due respect to other municipalities, the most important on the route. It is the gateway of the Kawartha Lakes, which constitute the chief charm of the entire waterway, and in the Lift Lock it possesses one of the stellar attractions along the route.

These films will be shown at the New York Motor Boat Show and other places where such showing is likely to be productive of good results. Peterborough ought to get her full share of the advantages that are likely to accrue.

ROOM FOR IMPROVEMENT.

Great commendation attaches to many citizens who take pride in their well-kept lawns and boulevards, but there is as great cause for regret in the failure of a few others to take any interest in the beautifying of their premises. Nothing is more disheartening to a good citizen than to have a next-door neighbor who allows noxious growths to run riot, detracting from the appearance of nearby well-kept lawns.

A walk about town this week will give more practical lessons than all the writing that could be done. On almost every street there are rows of well-kept, prettily-decorated lawns marred by one or two ragged and rankly grown patches of grass and weeds.

The independent citizen as well as the municipality has an important duty to perform in connection with the eradication of the weed nuisance. On some of the streets in the city at present there is sufficient evidence to justify the statement that this work has been neglected.

THE DOUBLE STANDARD.

A contemporary remarks on the "degradation" in which women of today are sunk through their "debauches" in smoking and card playing.

It is strong language to use, especially since the writer is probably a man who considers smoking and card playing his prerogatives. Many will wonder why he should deny to women the right to smoke—if they wish—or to play bridge—if they wish. Is individual freedom so far lost in these days of reformist movements that the old double standard is to be raised anew? Why should there be a double standard?

"It doesn't look nice" is no argument against women's smoking. It is not a question with these reformers of appearance or mode. They go to the mat on moral issues, and argue that there is a different standard of morals for men and women. But has not the woman the right to demand of her mate that he shall be as chaste, that his breath shall be as sweet and that his habits shall be as healthy, as he expects of her?

The argument for the double standard is not tenable in the brilliance of present-day enlightenment.

AS TO THE GUNMEN.

The unchecked orgy of crime committed by gunmen, which prevails in most of the large cities of the United States, is certainly a staggering thing. The latest illustration contained in a despatch from Detroit yesterday is one of the worst. Two automobiles, with a number of men in them, drive up to the door of a Detroit restaurant, enter the place, and open fire upon four men seated at one of the tables in the restaurant, killing two of them and severely wounding the other two, and also one of the waitresses in the restaurant. Then the murderers get back into their automobiles and move off, and so far have not been apprehended.

Such crimes as that would never be attempted if men who perpetrate such crimes had any idea that they were likely to have to pay a fitting penalty for them. And the reason why such criminals do not expect to pay the penalty is undoubtedly the conditions of the United States laws and courts. The laws and the judges seem to permit of endless appeals from one court to another; and many of the judges themselves, being elective, are beyond doubt either inefficient or are subject to unworthy impressions and act upon them.

Mr. Edward E. Gore, president of a commission which has been appointed in Chicago to report on the subject of crime, in a recent address on the subject said:

> "Until the community arises to the necessity of selecting the judges and other executive officers concerned with the punishment of crime by other than popular vote, there will never be any solution of the special problems of crime that are confronting this community."

Mr. Gore went on to charge direct political interference with all elective officials charged with administering justice. "The sheriff's office in this city," said Mr. Gore, "is conducted as a refuge for politicians and has done nothing substantial for the reduction of crime." He said it would be cruelly wrong to say that all of the judges on the criminal bench were influenced by politics, that many of them were upright, but that "also there are men on the same bench with no such conception of duty, no judicial temperament, no knowledge of law."

That seems to be pretty much the case in a nutshell of the comparative failure of criminal justice in the United States. The criminal finds it too easy to get away, too easy to get out of jail. There is no certainty of punishment, no certainty of completing a sentence. And the vital evil at the present time of it all is the principle of electing judges and all the other administrative officers of justice by popular vote for limited terms. This is something of which we in Canada should make certain to keep clear.—Ottawa Journal.

MUDDLING THROUGH.

The rejection by the coal miners of the peace plans of the bishops indicates how deep-rooted is the antagonism between miners and owners in Great Britain. While in some parts of England the miners are slowly trickling back to work, in other places the fourteenth week of the strike finds the same implacable resolution among the men to fight the issue to the end. This spirit springs from enmity of the owners, an enmity which has grown up through many years, and which can result in no ultimate good to the miners nor to the country itself. Owners and men are being left to fight out their battle between themselves; which will give in remains to be seen; it is to be hoped that the idea of co-operation which is leavening the remainder of industry will have its effect upon both parties.

Parliament has risen, but the members hold themselves ready to meet at a month's notice in case they may be called upon to renew the Emergency Act. It has not yet been found necessary to enforce the special powers given the Government by this Act to deal with the coal strike. The leaders of the men declare that special powers were never necessary, that the miners have conducted and will continue the strike in a perfectly legal manner. But the Government thought it advisable to possess the power to deal with disturbances if they arose. Britain is hoping for the best, and when the coal strike ends, looks forward to a boom in trade. She is not downhearted. As usual, she is muddling through—Hamilton Spectator.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

When we can see the person to whom we are talking by telephone, will it be alright to say, "See here, Central, you gave me the wrong face?"

Some politicians remind us of the little boy who cried because he couldn't catch the wasp.

There was some good ball in the C.G.E. ladies versus Kiwanians game on Saturday, and a great deal of fun. The greatest satisfaction, though, is in the giving of aid to those who need it.

Laws are made to be kept, not broken. There's no joke in disobeying the law ver if the offender is not caught.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 16.—(Canadian Press). — The export trade in Canadian spring wheat on the Montreal market Saturday was again quiet. There was some demand for American new crop winter wheat grades and a moderate amount of business was transacted. The domestic demand for cash grains was also limited but the undertone was steady.

The flour trade was without any new feature to note. Prices for spring and winter wheat grades were firmly maintained under a small enquiry.

A fairly active business was done in all lines of millfeed and the undertone to the market was steady. The demand for standard grades of rolled oats was limited and prices were unchanged.

The consumptive demands for eggs continued steady but the volume of business was disappointing for the season of the year. Prices were firm. The receipts were 1,166 cases.

The feature of the butter trade was the improved demand from English importers and a moderate amount of business was worked. The undertone to the market was firm. The receipts were 3,865 packages.

Extreme dullness marked the cheese market and prices were about steady. The receipts were 8,326 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAINS

CHICAGO, Aug. 16 (Canadian Press)—Wheat readily advanced in price Saturday and closed strong, 1-4 to 1 3-4 net higher, at about the top level reached. Good general buying, together with prospective falling off in the volume responsible for the upward swing of domestic arrivals, was largely responsible for the upward swing of the wheat market. Corn finished 1-8 to 7-8 down, oats unchanged to 1-8 @ 1-4 off, and provisions unchanged to 15c decline.

Almost from the outset wheat values moved up grade. Reports of threshing delay due to further rains in the American and Canadian northwest tended to give additional strength to the wheat market, and so likewise did some fear of frost danger in Canada. Cash wheat prices were firm in all directions.

Weather conditions generally favorable for the new corn crop had a bearish effect on the corn market. Oats sympathized.

Provisions were responsive to an upward trend in hog values.

STERLING EXCHANGE.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 16.—(Canadian Press).— Sterling Exchange rates were quoted here Saturday as follows:

Sterling demand $4.84 3-4.
Sterling cables $4.85 1-4.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

All letters must be signed by the writer, and must bear his address. A pen-name may be used for publication except in letters on political subjects, which must bear the writer's name for publication.

To the Voice of the People:—
Dear Editor:—

Regarding the new measure which is to come before the Council for ratification, re—through street bylaw, it is to be hoped that the City Council gives this matter very serious consideration before making it law.

There is not a shade of a doubt that every minute and every hour of the day this law will be broken. A more nonsensical measure has never been put before the Council. To expect or imagine that a motorist is going to stop when he comes to an intersection and sees the way clear is expecting something impracticable.

A motorist proceeding on the through street considers they have the rightof way over anyone on an intersection, and a motorist, if the traffic was continuous on the through street might sit all day at an intersection.

I drive a car and I haven't the least desire for the protection which this stop law proposes to give me. I believe in giving the right of way to the man on my right, providing we reach the intersection at the same time and are going at the same speed, and am prepared to follow the highway traffic act, and use common sense.

I have been driving a motor for seven years, without accident, and I feel that the stop law will be ineffective so far as saving accidents. The only way that accidents with cars will be stopped is by prohibiting their use on the street. It is an old axiom that "The fools will never all be dead," and so long as anyone can go and buy a car, go out on the street, and drive it, there are bound to be accidents.

I trust the good sense of our Council will be brought to bear before making this motor law, which will be broken, as I said, every hour. After dark, in fact at any time, a man is not looking down at the pavement to see its stop sign. He is watching both the motor and pedestrians, and in order to make that law effective, it will be necessary either to keep a policeman at each intersection, which would cost the city between $5,000.00 and $6,000.00 at the very least to instal.

The writer was in Lindsay a short time ago, and was amused at watching the operation of the stop law there. Anyone who knows Kent street knows what a law of that kind is nothing short of ridiculous. A man from the country might pause when coming to the intersection, but the regulars in Lindsay flaunted it entirely, and no wonder.

Yours very truly,
MOTORIST.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

(By C. N. Lurie.)

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

THE MISUSE OF "ALL."

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

It happens sometimes that in the use of the word "all" the speaker or writer fails to make his meaning clear. Indeed, sometimes the sentence in which the word is used conveys a meaning that is the exact opposite of the one intended.

For example, suppose we say, "All will not go." Does that mean that the entire body to which reference is made will not go, or that some of them will go and some will not? In the first case we should say, "None of them will go," which makes the meaning entirely clear, and in the second case we should say, "Some of them will go and some will not go."

When the meaning that is expressed by a word or a form of words is in doubt, it is well to consider carefully whether or not another word, or another way of expressing oneself, should not be substituted in order to make the meaning perfectly clear to the hearer or reader.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY.

ANOTHER REASON.

Living just as one should always conducting one's life in a noble and commendable manner, is not the easiest thing on earth. In fact, it is quite difficult as a rule. That is another reason why a good and righteous person deserves respect; he has ben accomplishing something which approaches the impossible.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

Even if it doesn't matter, a singer has been sent to Sing Sing.

If it wasn't for mice, some women wouldn't get any exercise.

About all a rolling stone gathers is momentum.

In some states it isn't against the law for cafes to use cream.

The best advice is don't depend on advice.

Women don't swear. Or at least, they don't have to. They can cry.

Gossip is like yeast. You put in a little and the works start.

Raising a family costs almost as much as it is worth.

One half the world can't see why the other half lives.

Money talks. And usually it says, "Let's buy an auto."

They don't burn much midnight oil. They park in a country lane.

The world's a stage. Bootleg places should be marked "Exit."

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

AN AUNT

Of all our folks, of all the rest,
Of course, a mother is the best,
And then a father, I suppose,
Then all the folks a fellow knows.
One person more should not be passed
(I sort of hate to put her last):
Another relative you want,
And ought to have, and that's an aunt.

She doesn't seem to think that boys
Can get along without a noise,
In fact she doesn't speak to you,
I guess, as much as mothers do.
And then she doesn't seem to care
What waists you rip, what pants you tear,
Of course, she doesn't have to buy
Your clothes—I guess that's maybe why.

She isn't quite your mother, no
And yet she's like a mother, though,
And cakes can make, and puddings stir,
Can nearly cook as well as her.
She lets you sleep till half past eight,
And doesn't scold because it's late,
But makes you just the nicest toast:
She's like your mother is—almost.

HAPPY MEN

By Dr. Frank Crane

"To do what you would rather do than anything else, and get paid for it: that is happiness."

The most fortunate man in the world is the one who is able to make a living from following a hobby he loves.

These are the Happy Men.

One such lives in France. He makes the famous Delaherche pottery. He is an old man with a long white beard who lives at Armentieres near the town of Beauvais, famous for its tapestries.

From his own garden he digs the clay which he moulds. As his fancy dictates he models objects during the year and only once fires his kiln.

Then he stays beside it for thirty hours without sleeping to be sure its heat is even. This, he says, is the secret of the superior glaze which sets his work apart.

He loves to do what he is doing and his pottery is rare, sought after by collectors, and brings a high price.

Another such man lives in an old farmhouse in New England.

His hobby is photographing snowflakes. He found that no two snowflakes have ever fallen to earth which were exactly alike in all particulars. Each is a rare specimen with an individual design.

Every winter is a source of continual joy, for he is fascinated by the new designs he studies and photographs.

And from this source of amusement comes also his livelihood, for his photographs have been used by laboratories and text books throughout the country.

Near New Orleans dwells another man who is numbered among the fortunate group.

His hobby is raising snails. His aquariums are his special source of fun in life. He would rather work with his snails than anything he knows. It is fun, not work.

But because the snails he raises are of value as scavengers in goldfish bowls he found a ready market for them and is able to make a living from his hobby.

J. Henri Fabre, another dweller of France, lived all his life in a strange world which few inhabit. It is the insect world. Since childhood he followed the ways and activities of the little folk in that realm.

His wonder and pleasure in discovering the habits and mysteries of bees and spiders and ants never abated. As an old man he was as fascinated with his investigations as he was as a boy.

And the books in which he recorded the happy hours he spent in following his hobby furnished the source of his income. They have sold widely and have opened up a new world to thousands.

DISLIKES BEING "PEERLESS."

LONDON, Aug. 16.—(Canadian Press).—Lady Zouche, of Haryngworth, regards herself as a peer, and would prefer not to be called a peeress.

"Why use the word peeress when there is no male to represent the line?" she asked. "We twenty odd women who happen to hold peerages in our own right are not peers by accident, any more than men are who happen to inherit a peerage. Why should I not receive the writ from the King, as my ancestors did before me, and be allowed to exercise the duties and privileges of my position?"

"I suppose she will have to give up her home"

WOULD the neighbours be able to talk like that about your widow?

Stop and think! What about the mortgage you are carrying on your home? Bit of a struggle to keep up the interest alone, to say nothing of the payments on the principle, isn't it?

How would your widow manage—with the children to look after too? Men are often careless in thinking about these things because there are many ways open to a man for earning money.

But to a woman—unused to business and hampered with children—there are practically none.

A small saving invested yearly in an Imperial Endowment Policy would provide a fund that would clear your home of all mortgage indebtedness and leave something over, if you died prematurely. If you live until the policy matures you can then utilize the funds yourself.

STATISTICS SHOW LARGER INCREASE

Number Employed During June Greater Than Other Years.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 16.—(Canadian Press.)—Reports on employment received by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics from firms with a minimum of fifteen employees in industries other than agriculture and fishing, showed a further large increase in the volume of employment at the beginning of July. The number of persons added to the payrolls during June was greater in the same month of any previous year of the record. Data were received from 5,898 firms, employing 850,718 workers, as compared with 830,019 in the preceding month.

The employment index number (the base 100 representing the number of employees of the same firms in January, 1920) stood at 103.7, compared with 101.0 on June 1, 1926, and with 96.8, 95.9, 99.5, 91.1 and 87.5 of July 1, 1925, 1924, 1923, 1922 and 1921 respectively.

Reports received from the offices of the employment service of Canada indicated a slight decrease in the volume of business transacted in June as compared with that of the preceding month.

At the beginning of July the percentage of unemployment among members of local trade unions was 4.1, as compared with percentages of 4.9 at the beginning of June, 1926, and 6.1 at the beginning of July, 1925.

HON. VINCENT MASSEY DECLARES

the Right Hon. Mr. Meighen in 1925 up to the present time was nothing more than political propaganda.

Hon. Vincent Massey.

The Hon. Vincent Massey congratulated the Liberal party of West Peterborough of having selected Mr. Duffus as the candidate of the party to contest the riding. He urged them to see to it that the riding slipped back to the Liberal party.

It was unusual in Canada to have two election within twelve months. It was a good thing that the people were able to shorten the term of a Parliament when necessary. This was a condition that prevailed generally among the countries of the British Empire. In most other countries, the Legislature was in office for a fixed period and could not be turned out by the people until it had run its course. There being no safety valve, government in these countries was frequently accompanied by log-rolling, intrigue and bargaining. This control over the Legislature was one of the things that marked the British institutions in the various countries of the Empire.

The Conservatives had charged that Mr. King in seeking a dissolution was attempting to evade a vote of censure. Mr. Massey, granting for the sake of argument that the vote was likely to carry, the request of Mr. King for dissolution was merely that he might be allowed to submit his case to the ultimate court of appeal—the electors. Was there anything cowardly in that? It had always been good Liberal policy to "Trust the people."

It was an important decision the people of Canada would be called upon to make. The results of their votes would set a precedent which would be quoted not only in Canada in years to come, but in every state of the British Empire.

Mr. Meighen had said there was no constitutional issued, that it was a red herring, a fiction of the imagination, a stupid idea—he had a new name for it every day. But it was natural for men who had broken the rules to think the rules were not of much importance. The British peoples were sensitive to constitutional issues. There was something in British characteristics that seemed to resent an infringement of their political rights.

Talk of the constitution seemed very high-brow. But the constitution was simply the rules of the game like the rules of football or cricket. Breaking the constitution was just like someone trying to put it over the umpire. And in this case someone had been trying to put something over the umpire—the umpire being the five million electors of the Dominion of Canada.

The events at the ends of the last session of Parliament had been in the nature of a one man show. Mr. Meighen was that one man. A series of events had happened for which Mr. Meighen, and no one else, was responsible.

Seven Offences.

Mr. Massey proceeded to declare that Mr. Meighen had committed seven offences against the people of Canada. He quoted the opinion of Hon. N. W. Rowell that Mr. Meighen by undertaking to form a government after Mr. King had asked and been refused a dissolution, had assumed the responsibility of the Governor-General's action and had proclaimed to the world that Canada was still a Crown Colony and that all the talk of England and the Dominion that Canada attained the full status of a nation was all humbug. "Are we not," asked Mr. Massey, "a free nation under the British Crown?"

Mr. Meighen, in agreeing to form a Government, deceived the Governor-General by representing that he would be able to carry on while he knew that, with the Liberals and Progressives uniting on a common programme, there was no possibility of the Conservatives surviving.

Mr. Meighen formed a shadow government of, himself out of the House, and Acting Ministers in the House, but who had never been sworn into office. These Ministers were Ministers without Portfolios. A Minister without Portfolio—he had been one himself—was described as a flat tire hanging outside the car waiting for a blow out. In this case there were six spare tires hanging outside the car—and the blow out certainly came all right. They formed a temporary Government and this Government had lasted sixty-five hours. This Government had been described by an outside impartial observer—the English paper, the Manchester Guardian—as "A makeshift government of dubious legality."

The manner in which parliament had been dissolved was an insult to the representatives of the people. The door was slammed in the faces of the members of the legislation that had been passed—such as the bill granting rural credits was scrapped. All the privileges of Parliament were ignored and the members came only to learn from the gossip of the corridor that parliament was dissolved and that they were no longer members of the House.

By carrying on a Government with only one Minister himself the others being only Ministers in name Mr. Meighen insulted the nation. Mr. Meighen's use of Orders in Council in order to raise over three fourths of the money required was entirely illegal. Only one quarter of the money had been passed before Mr. Meighn procured the dissolution of the House and he resorted to this device of using the Governor-General's warrant to raise the rest. This of course was perfectly legal when used in the way for which it was intended. But it was never intended that any Government should use this method in order to raise three fourths of the money that should be voted in the ordinary way.

Mr. Meighen had also permitted a campaign of slander to be carried on. At a loss for an issue to fight the election on the Board of Strategy had decreed that a campaign of whispering and scandal should be carried on.

Mr. Meighen said there was no constitutional issue. There was a constitutional issue and Mr. Meighen was the father of it and was trying to disown it like the fathers of other dubious offsprings. Last year Mr. Meighen raised the cry of blue ruin. It was no longer used for that dog would not bite. Mr. Massey quoted figures on employment on the building operations on railways and immigration as proof that the country was well ahead of the march of progress.

Concluding Mr. Massey said there were no disloyal Canadians. No party had a monopoly of affection for the British Crown or of love for British institutions and of esteem for the noble and gallant gentleman who represented the Crown in Canada, Baron Byng of Vimy.

W. A. Anderson.

Mr. Anderson said he had never entered any election more wholeheartedly as he entered the present one on behalf of J. J. Duffus. He thought it was very good of Mr. Duffus to open his campaign in Keene and in the township where he was born. At the last election, Otonabee did for Mr. Gordon better than most places in the riding but it could do better and he hoped that it was going to do better for Mr. Duffus.

Last year they had two lawyers to choose from. If they wanted to get away from lawyers, this was a good argument for their voting for Mr. Duffus. Mr. Duffus was still a comparatively young man. His opponent was an elderly man and the problems before the Dominion today called for young men and men of activity, for their solution. Mr. Andeson contrasted the two leaders. Both were men of great ability but of different ideals. He had read Mr. King's book on "Industry and Humanity". "Industry", said Mr. King," must exist for humanity, not humanity for industry." He knew the common people, and understood the problems of those who toiled. The Liberals had the better candidate in the contest, they had a better policy and they had a better leader. He urged them all to vote and work for the return of Mr. Duffus.

God Save the King concluded the gathering.

ALLEGE JEALOUSY IS THE CAUSE OF QUARREL THAT RESULTED IN DEATH OF PROMINENT FINANCIER

Grandson of C.P.R. Builder Is Charged With Slaying.

VICTIM PROMINENT.

Friendship of Slain Man With Other's Wife Is Mentioned.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—(Canadian Press.)—Jealousy is alleged to have been the cause of a quarrel between Alphonse Francis Austin Smith and John Thomas Derham, Friday night at Whitstable, near Canterbury, which had as its sequel the death of Derham in a nursing home, a few hours later and the arrest of Smith, charged with murder.

Smith is the grandson of the late Hugh Ryan, who, with Sir Frank Smith and Lord Strathcona, was instrumental in building up the Canadian Pacific Railway system. Derham was the grandson of Brigadier General Tyler, V.C., a noted General of the British army.

Owing to the wealth and high social standing and antecedents of those concerned in the tragedy, unusual interest has been aroused.

Smith's family history is connected with the early days of Canadian development, while he, himself, has had a stirring career. He was born in Toronto in 1889, the son of Frank A. Smith, and through his relationship to Hugh Ryan, a huge fortune was bequeathed to him through a trust, which eventually came to him. He was brought to England at the age of nineteen and after Eton and Cambridge, he joined the regular army. He soon resigned his commission and toured the world, spendig much time in the South Sea Islands. He fought in the great war with distinction.

Smith was always socially popular and a lavish spender. In 1912 he married Ruth Wynn, daughter of the late Robert J. Wynn, once United States' postmaster-general, and Consul General at London. The police of Tankerton, which is a fashionable suburb of the Seaside resort of Whitstable, were summoned just before midnight Friday, to "Stella Maris Villa," the residence occupied by Smith, his wife and family. They found Derham in a dying condition from a revolver wound in the abdomen, and Smith in a state of collapse, his face terribly bruised and blood streaming from two gashes in his forehead. The drawing room was in the utmost disorder, showing signs of a fierce struggle.

Derham was removed to a hospital, where he died, and Smith was placed under arrest. When informed that he was charged with attempted murder, Smith exclaimed, "Where is he? Where is the seducer?"

It is alleged that Smith was jealous of Derham's attentions to his wife and that the quarrel which ended so fatally occurred after the two men and Mrs. Smith had supped together at a local hotel. Derham is believed to have made a statement in the presence of a magistrate before he died, and that statement will be read at the inquest to-day.

It appears that the Smith family went to live at Herne Bay last Easter and there Mrs. Smith made the acquaintance of Derham, who was living with his mother nearby. According to current gossip, Derham began giving lessons in automobiling to Mrs. Smith whereby their friendship ripened and the two were constantly together. In the meantime, Smith had gone to live in London, but visited his wife periodically.

A few weeks ago Mrs. Smith moved into Stella Maris, where she resided with her children and two sisters. Smith joined them the beginning of the week, and on Friday the Smiths and Derham spent the evening together, supped at a hotel, and returned to the villa, where Derham and Mrs. Smith sat down to a game of cards. What followed will be revealed only at the inquest.

Derham married at Herne Bay in 1913, Consuelo, daughter of the Marquis and Marquesa, de Torre Heromsa, but had not lived with his wife for some years. Like Smith, he was educated at Eton, and Cambridge University, was in easy circumstances and well known as an athlete. She divorced him in 1922 and he subsequently married Catherine White, a pretty English woman, by whom he had three children.

Another peculiar aspect of the case is that owing to his lavish expenditures, Smith was involved in financial difficulties, and that these troubles in some way brought him into connection with William Cooper Hobbs, and Montahu Noel Newton, of the notorious "Mister A" case, the blackmail affair in which "Mister A." had turned out to be Maharajah Hari Singh of Jammu and Kashmir.

Finally the Trust Company, at Toronto, which had managed his father's family affairs, arranged for a money settlement affording him a regular income.

FEAR OF KILLERS FILLING OSAGES WITH WHISPERS

FEAR DISASTER.

Merchants and Citizezns Cringe Before Presence of Foot Hill Bandits.

BY BRUCE CATTON.
NEA Service Writer.

PAWHUSKA, Okla.—The country of the Osages is a country of whispers. The black shadow of the murder ring hangs over the wild hills, impalpable but effective, touching almost every phase of activity here.

Through all these whisperings the figure of William K. Hale, "king of the Osage Hills," who is under federal indictment for murder, moves dimly, with sinister meaning. Townspeople, from low to high, speak of him with bated breath. His influence and that of his associates is felt everywhere.

Hale is a mysterious figure, too. One of the biggest cattle men in the country, he seems to have remained aloof from politics, preferring to exercise his power through the widespread fear of direct action rather than by manipulation. Wild outlaws, half-tamed cowboys from the hill country, move at his bidding, and there are few people who care to run counter to their wishes.

For instance the story of the murders was common property here for two or three years. Everyone knew, apparently, what was going on and who was responsible: but no one did anything about it. The Osage people were not surprised by the revelations of the federal investigation.

Afraid to Talk.

A prominent lawyer in Pawhuska gave an illustration of the temper of the town. This correspondent asked him about Hale. He glanced about, kicked the door of his office shut, and said in a low tone

"You know, I don't want to be quoted on this. You never know in this town what's going to happen. I'd rather not say anything."

Then, loudly, he said

"Personally, I've always found Billy Hale a mighty fine man."

Here is another instance. A local photographer has pictures of Hale and Ernest Burkhart, who is under arrest with him. He was asked if he would sell them.

"I'd like to, but I just don't dare," he said. "When they were arrested some of the boys came to me and told me it wouldn't be healthy for me to give their pictures to the newspapers. I'd like to but I just don't dare. You don't know what sort of people these folks are."

A Kilehah street merchant spoke of the free and easy ways of the hill outlaws. Some little time ago, it seems, a group of them rode into town to rob a jewelry store. They spent the evening loitering about town, and told a number of people of their plans. No one did a thing about it, and on the following morning the store was robbed, according to schedule.

This is the class of men that follow Hale's banner. It is for this reason that officials in Guthrie go about in fear of a jail delivery, and have extra guards on duty.

Among the whispers that go about the town is one to the effect that Hale was not the real leader of the ring, after all: that a man, since removed to another state, was the real head of things and that Hale was only the "crown prince:" that a half-breed associate of the two acted as executive officer and had a prominent part to play in the squelching of a federal investigation in 1924.

Predicting the End.

The whispers about that investigation, which came to an abrupt end after months of work by Department of Justice operatives, are widespread. They even name the sums of money that are said to have been passed, name the men who are said to have paid and received—tell how the whole thing was done, in fact.

This much is admitted by everyone: the half-breed associate of Hale and the other man predicted ten days before the 1924 investigation blew up that it would fizzle out and the investigating agents would be transferred. This came to pass.

Influence was wielded at Washington, it is said—and it is even reported, on what seems good authority, that the recent investigation was halted so that the federal men could investigate these stories of bribery before proceeding farther.

WOMAN CHIEF IS "FLYING COP"

LONDON, Aug. 16.—(Associated Press).—Commandant Mary Allen, co-founder of the women's police service in London, has become known as Europe's "flying cop" since she is one of the most travelled police officials in the world. When possible she makes her trips by aeroplane.

Commandant Allen, who is credited with knowing more women crooks of all countries than any other woman in the police business, visited the United States two years ago, and has been pretty much on the go ever since.

She thinks nothing of flying to Paris, Berlin or other points in one day, on some important case in which a woman is involved, and back to London the next. The setting up of a women's international police commission was due primarily to efforts of Commandant Allen.

CANNING TRICK.

When pouring hot preserves or boiling fruit juice into a jar, always put a silver spoon into the jar before you pour in the hot liquid. This tempers the glass so it does not break.

By means of ultra-violet electric rays, bathers in a new pool planned in Germany will receive coats of tan, although they bathe at night.

FIGURES IN "MARGARET" PROBE

Principal Figures at Steamer Margaret Probe. At the UPPER LEFT is a photo of Sir Francois Lemieux, Chief Justice of Quebec, and special commissioner to conduct the customs enquiry, who last week disproved charges of a "joy cruise" aboard the customs steamer Margaret, with which the names of Hon. Ernest Lapointe and Hon. Jacques Bureau were coupled. The charges were brought by A. J. Doucet, former member for Kent, N.B., in the federal house. Next from the LEFT, is in the oval, is Capt. Alfred Lecouvee of the Margaret, who emphatically denied that any such cruise had taken place, as did also Messrs. Lapointe and Bureau. At the UPPER RIGHT, the three figures shown are, from LEFT to RIGHT: W. F. O'Conner, K.C., and R. L. Calder, K.C., who represented the customs department at the hearing, and R. P. Sparks, representing the Commercial Protective Association. The BOTTOM picture shows Senator Jacques Bureau, on the RIGHT, former minister of customs, and N. K. Laflamme, K.C., his counsel.

Frank Higgins has arrived at the Vacation Time of Life

In his garden, surrounded by his plants and flowers, he is reaping a reward of happy contentment for the years he spent amid the worries of business.

He is just past sixty-five, and looks forward to the years that remain, perfectly at ease—mentally and financially.

When Frank Higgins was a young man he made sure of this vacation. He arranged through "Paid up at 65" Insurance in the North American Life Assurance Company that at sixty-five he would be able to retire from business and live in comfort and independence. Throughout his life he enjoyed the perfect peace that came from knowing that his plan for the future was absolutely guaranteed.

You too can have this assurance. The attached coupon will bring you full particulars.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

The coral is today's talismanic gem. While it indicates a certain demand, nobility and leadership, it is believed to produce the unkind spirit of retaliation for fancied wrongs. Women who wear it will be noted for their pride and heartiness.

The agate is today's natal gem. It has magnetic qualities which draw to its wearer friends, fortune and happiness. Curiously enough, it was believed by the ancients to be a sure cure for insomnia.

Pink is today's lucky hue. It is a symbol of happiness and bodily and mental health.

Jonquils are lucky flowers today. They are appropriate for youth.

JACKSON PARK

sometimes, like the day, when, 'unbeknownst" to their elders, a surreptitious pair of scissors snipped off a few of the curls of the more fortunate members, as souvenirs for their little companions.

They worry over small things, like the chokecherries they have just eaten, when a lot of them go around sticking out their tongues for inspection as to a suspicious black color that might not agree with the milk, and they laugh over accidents. A little boy whose ear has been hit by the swing and made to bleed profusely is just as cheerful as the rest of the group, and they compare disabilities like cut fingers with admiring competition.

"Lord bless this food that now we take, and do us good for Jesus' sake" they pray with bowed heads before their lunch, and then the cups for the milk go round in a big dish pan. The boy in charge gets impatient over the finicky ways of some of the small women, who hesitate over rival merits in handles, and he commences to take them out and endow each member with a cup, regardless of his or her personal dislikes. The operation is carried through with despatch.

They are happy and cheerful and contented, these children who otherwise might not have opportunities for such healthful, innocent recreation and for such good food that brings their under-nourished little bodies up to standard weight in a short time. In surroundings of natural beauty, without much irksome restraint, playing as they will and eating good food, they are having a wonderfully good time, and their benefactors must enjoy the whole affair likewise, in watching these children improve in health and spirits.

Evening Examiner "IDEAL Fashions" by Jean Belle Hamilton

The Two-piece Frock is More Important Than Ever

This season the two-piece frock rules over a wider domain than ever, and on many days, the hours of its reign extend from morning to evening. Therefore, it must be practical, yet combine as well, a semi-formal charm for leisurely events. The model pictured here is a typical example of a sports costume that is smartly correct for either a morning of shopping, or an afternoon of bridge. The blouse slips on over the head and has a collar that may be worn buttoned high or turned back as illustrated. The front of the blouse has gathers at each shoulder and two patch pockets for adornment, the back being quite plain. The long set-in sleeves are gathered into tailored cuffs fastening with links. The string belt is a new detail and provides a soft bloused effect at the hip-line. Fulness in the skirt is attained by two box-plaits in the front. The Blouse, NO. 1347, is in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust. Size 36 requires 2⅝ yards 36-inch figured material; ⅛ yard plain. The skirt, NO. 1341, is joined to a body lining, and is in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust. Size 36 requires 1¾ yards 36-inch material; body lining 1 yard. Price 20 cents each pattern.

Our Fashion Book, illustrating the newest and most practical styles, will be of interest to every home dressmaker. Price of the book 10 cents the copy.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorncliff

SHE CHATS ABOUT AN UNUSUAL DAYTIME COAT.

Pam and I had a most thrilling afternoon yesterday. We were invited to a movie studio by one of the smart actresses of the day, who is a favorite client at Madame's shop.

Madame consented to give us some time off, but she said

"My dears, please don't be too much tempted by the life of the place, for I couldn't bear to lose my fashion models."

Of course this pleased us, for the ambition of many a fashion model is to aspire to a job in the movies or on the stage.

"Don't fear to lose me, Madame," Pam replied. Pam tried a job in a chorus once, but found it not as much to her liking as working with Madame. Of course, we work hard during our busy season, but all in all our work is far less demanding than a job on the stage would be.

Anyway, we sallied forth yesterday, and had a delightful time. We sat on the side lines and watched the young actress at work and commented on all the people we saw coming and going.

"Perhaps the director will see you and say, 'That's just the type I need for my new picture,' and sign you on for large sums of money," Pam suggested to me.

"Nonsense," I replied, smiling at Pam's imagination. "The best thing I can get out of this is the ideas here on clothes. I'm here to pick up thoughts on the work I'm already in, not to be signed on for a new job."

"If you will be so businesslike," Pam said, "look at the stunning coat on the young girl working now."

I looked up and saw the girl who was supposed to be going out for tea in the picture. Her maid had just assisted her into the smartest coat and hat I've seen in some time.

"Isn't that simply stunning!" I said. "It looks like a million dollars with that gleaming silver tissue collar, and I know it will film well."

This Smart Summer Afternoon Coat Exploits Black and Silver.

"It is a coat even Madame would be proud to have designed," Pam agreed.

The coat was soft black crepe, with horizontal bands of silver braid running through it and a soft silver tissue collar outlining the graceful neckline.

A silver fox fur piece and a gray stitched hat of medium large size completed the stunning outfit.

am being worn out at the bar and in the suits of my friends. Judge you, what must be my life when I find repose in toil, my solace in wretchedness and anxiety. Farewell."

The love between Pliny and Calpurnia comes as a refreshing oasis in a desert of corruption and seduction, and if Pliny had not written the volume of letters and a Panegyric on Trojan—the only works by which we know him—he would have a rightful claim to fame by his example of a Roman noble and faithful husband.

Like its masculine counterpart, Julius, the name Juliet had its origin in the Julian gens that preceded Roman civilization. Various legends are put forward to account for Julius and historians differ widely, but the generally accepted theory is that Julius is the diminutive for "dius," meaning divine and was evolved in the same manner that Zeus, father of the gods, came to be the Roman Jupiter. If such is the case Juliette may fairly be called a daughter of the Gods.

The name has been carried to all nations in various forms. She is Giulia in Italy and Julija in Russia. In Britany she is Suliana and Juliana in Spain.

Wednesday is her lucky day, according to all historical and mystical indications, and number five is her fortunate number.

HER OWN WAY by a Girl of Today

JUDY LOOKS AHEAD

I looked across the table at Joan and saw that her face was transfigured and I understood that she, too, had the great thrill and that her love had always contained that feeling of maternal responsibility without which any woman's love was dross.

I knew instinctively that what she had just passed through had broadened and deepened her character, and that now that Barry was gone there would come to her some time in the near future, when the hurt was but a scar, the knowledge that after all he had only been a wayward boy—a body who had perhaps loved her as much as he was capable. One who had not really meant to make her unhappy, but one of those weakling human beings whose first thought was for the bringing to himself that which he wanted at whatever cost.

Because she had had that mother feeling I knew that she would forgive him and come to look upon his wife and his child as something which he had given her to pet and care for.

It was her great mother tenderness which poured itself out an something unworthy, and I prayed a little prayer, "God grant that Lela and the child would make up to this poor little rich girl for her poverty in love."

I was glad that Joan was young, for I was sure that this episode would only broaden and sweeten her life in the end, that she would make some other man a better wife and bring up his children to more splendid maturity.

I looked at Jerry. Was it the trick of the candle light, or had the gaunt drawn lines really ironed themselves out of his face in which I only saw pathetic appeal. My hand stole over and rested on that one of his which was lying listlessly on the table.

"Come," I said, "let us all go back to the city and try and sleep away all our cares because tomorrow, you know, is another day. Another day which promises to be full of responsible undertakings."

"Where do you learn all this?" asked Joan. "One to look at you would think that you thought of nothing else than having a good time. And yet in the few days that I have known you I have learned from a girl of about my own age and of my own understanding more than I have learned all together in the years that have gone before."

"Have you also loved and lost?" she said as she looked at me quizically.

Jerry's hand tightened upon mine. "I don't know, Joan," I said honestly, "whether I have ever loved or not. If it is a sudden passion that makes one feel that one cannot live separated from the other, I have never loved. And not having loved, I cannot have a feeling that I have lost."

Jerry dropped my hand, and rising we all went down the piazza steps out into the moonlighted garden.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

PLINY AND CALPURNIA

Nearly nineteen hundred years ago there lived in Rome a lover whose beloved was his wife. Considering the morals of Roman society at that time, this was a remarkable occurence and as interesting as the heart missive of this love which has come down to us through nineteen centuries. Pliny was the faithful lover, a nephew and adopted son of the more celebrated Pliny, "the older," philosopher and author of the book "Natural History."

Pliny "the younger" was a Roman statesman and pleader at the bar who later became a favorite of the Emperor Trojan and was promoted to Consulship.

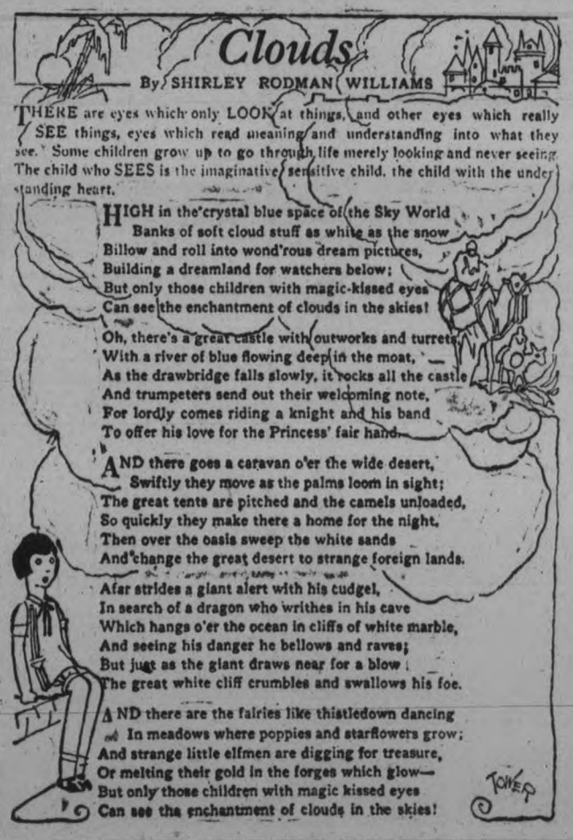
Calpurnia was Pliny's second wife, and judging from the three letters to her from Pliny which are preserved, their life must have been an idyllic one.

Separated from Calpurnia for a short time, Pliny writes her:

"You will not believe what a longing for you possesses me. The chief cause for this is my love; and then we have not grown used to being apart. So it comes to pass that I lie awake a great part of the night thinking of you, and that by day, when the hours return at which I was wont to visit you, my feet take me, as it is so truly said, to your chamber, but not finding you there I return sick and sad at heart, like an excluded lover. The only time that is free from those torments is when I

Clouds

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS



THERE are eyes which only LOOK at things, and other eyes which really SEE things, eyes which read meaning and understanding into what they see. Some children grow up to go through life merely looking and never seeing. The child who SEES is the imaginative, sensitive child, the child with the understanding heart.

HIGH in the crystal blue space of the Sky World
Banks of soft cloud stuff as white as the snow
Billow and roll into wond'rous dream pictures,
Building a dreamland for watchers below;
But only those children with magic-kissed eyes
Can see the enchantment of clouds in the skies!

Oh, there's a great castle with outworks and turrets
With a river of blue flowing deep in the moat,
As the drawbridge falls slowly, it rocks all the castle
And trumpeters send out their welcoming note,
For lordly comes riding a knight and his band
To offer his love for the Princess' fair hand.

AND there goes a caravan o'er the wide desert,
Swiftly they move as the palms loom in sight;
The great tents are pitched and the camels unloaded,
So quickly they make there a home for the night.
Then over the oasis sweep the white sands
And change the great desert to strange foreign lands.

Afar strides a giant alert with his cudgel,
In search of a dragon who writhes in his cave
Which hangs o'er the ocean in cliffs of white marble,
And seeing his danger he bellows and raves;
But just as the giant draws near for a blow
The great white cliff crumbles and swallows his foe.

AND there are the fairies like thistledown dancing
In meadows where poppies and starflowers grow;
And strange little elfmen are digging for treasure,
Or melting their gold in the forges which glow—
But only those children with magic kissed eyes
Can see the enchantment of clouds in the skies!

The Juvenile Game.

Eleven runs in the ninth inning, gave St. Andrew's juveniles the win in the second game of the afternoon. For eight innings Bill Howden had been setting them down with few hits and runs, pitching himself out of holes caused by his own wildness and his team mates' errors. In the final frame with an apparently safe lead of three runs he weakened, and his teammates backed up their errors of commission with some slack work that made it even harder to retire the visitors.

The visitors showed some heavy hitting and played well in the field. Their pitchers both did good work, although Ogden was inclined to be wild, being pulled at the end of the third for that reason. Shannon relieved him and allowed three hits in six innings. In the sixth he retired the side on strikes after Howden had singled and gone around on errors. Shannon won his own game with a single in the ninth which sent in the tieing and winning runs, scoring a few minutes later with one of the extra ones secured.

Beavis was the Rotary star. Starting in the centre field he moved in to first when Starr was hurt, and turned in a good game, saving his infielders from many more errors by good pickups. Then he changed places with Archambault, who had not shown to good advantage at third, and at that place Beavis made a fine catch to retire the final Oshawa batsman in the ninth.

Every other man on the team, except Austin and Barrie, who didn't play the whole game, made at least one error. The fine fielding which won the city league title was conspicuous by its absence, and only on rare occasions did the Rotary lads play up to their usual form. Their hitting was also below par, five being the total allotment.

Visitors Score First.

Rowden opened the game with a single. Baird was safe when Howden mussed up his sacrifice. Young struck out but Hubbell hit far into the right for three bases, sending home two runners. Gummow walked, and a fast double play, Howden to Starr to Kennealey, retired the side. The Petes got one back. Starr grounded to short. Rishea walked and reached third on two passed balls, scoring when Carver threw to left field in an attempt to stop him. Beavis is walked and reached second on a balk. Kennealey and Howden grounded out.

The visitors got two men on without a hit in the second but the next three fanned. In the third Hubbell doubled with one out, and reached third on an error by Richea. He scored when Starr stopped a throw with his elbow on a grounder by Gummon. The first baseman had to quit and Barrie went to centre field, Beavis coming in to first. Little singled but Carver fanned and Black lift ed to Rishea.

Rotary Takes Lead.

Rotary did nothing in the second, but took the lead in the third. Archambault struck out to start and Barrie singled. Rishea was hit and Beavis and Kennealey drew bases on balls, forcing in Barrie. The runners advanced on a bad throw by Carver, and after Howden had fanned, Beavis and Kennealey scored on a single by Walton. The batter reached second on the throw to the plate and took third when Carver hit him with his throw back to second. Clancy grounded to short.

The visitors had men on in the fourth and fifth but were unable to get hits off Howden to advance them. In the sixth they went out in order. The Petes did nothing in the fourth. Kennealey wasted a hit in the fifth trying to make a double of it. Howden scored in the sixth, when he singled, stole second, went to third when Carver threw to centre field, and kept right on in when Howden threw wild to third.

Oshawa scored one in the seventh, after two were out. Hubbell was safe on an error by Archambault and stole second. Kennealey was slow in fielding a wild pitch and the Oshawa slugger scored from second. Gummow was safe on an error by Johnston and Little grounded to Archambault.

The Rotary team also scored one in the seventh. Archambault walked and stole second. Barrie sacrificed and Richea went out on a hot ground er to Shannon, Archambault counting. Beavis grounded out.

Carver spoiled a double in the eighth by permitting Howden to nip him off second a moment later.. Black struck out, Shannon singled; Rowden was safe on an error and Baird popped to Archambault. The home team did nothing in the second half.

The Unlucky Ninth.

The ninth was a nightmare. Young started by grounding to Archambault. Hubbell was safe on an error by Walton. Gummow singled to Hubbell. Little hit to Howden and Beavis, expecting the play to be the second, neglected to cover first. Carver was passed. Walton missed Boack's grounder and Gummow scored, leaving the bases still full. Shannon singled, sending home the ti.. and winning runs. He took second on the throw to the plate and followed Black across on Rowden's single. Baird singled; Young was safe on a fielder's choice; Little flied to Walton, Carver walked, Black singled and Shannon lifted to Beavis. A passed ball, a wild pitch and an error by Kennealey occurred during this carnival of run-getting, and when the inning was over the score stood at 15-11.

Shannon started the home team's half by fanning Austin and Johnston. Archambault singled but Baird took Barrie's fly.

Cardinals Take Second Game of Series From the Cubs.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—(Canadian Press).—Brooklyn won both ends of a double-header yesterday, the first 4 to 1 and the second encounter 11 to 3, which was called at the end of the eighth to permit the two teams to catch a train for the west. Vance allowed the Braves only seven hits in the first contest, while heavy slugging by the Dodgers made it easy for Jess Barnes in the final.

The Cincinnati Reds celebrated their return home from a long eastern trip by defeating Philadelphia, 4 to 2, in a rather listless game.

The St. Louis Cardinals took the second game of the present series from the Chicago Cubs, 7-2, in a contest featured by the pitching of Rhem. It was his sixteenth victory of the season. Four runs were evenly divided, Gonzales and Wilson, for Chicago, and Bottomley and Bell, for St. Louis.

FRASERVILLE TEAM LOSES TO DUFFERIN

Construction Boys Victorious in Softball Game on Friday Evening.

BAILIEBORO, Aug. 16 — On Friday evening the Fraserville Dufferin Construction gang's softball team motored to this village and played the local boys a game of ball. Both sides were fairly matched, but owing to the fact that the home team had been accustomed to playing hard ball the visitors had the advantage over them and carried off the victory by a score of 6 to 5.

The score by innings was as follows:

Fraserville.... .... ..0 0 2 1 3—6
Bailieboro.... .. .. ..2 0 2 1 0—5

Umpires—P. Barnard at plate and D. Lang on bases.

On Thursday evening almost everyone in the village motored to Welcome to witness one of the best girls' softball games of the season, when the home team trounced the Welcome girls at the end of the ninth innings by a score of 5 to 1.

Both teams proved to be in good form for playing ball, and the game was a most interesting one throughout.

Although the local girls' team have played many games this season, they have yet to lose their first game.

YANKEES DIVIDE DOUBLE-HEADER WITH RED SOX

Ruth Knocks His 39th Homer in the Third Inning.

SCORES THREE RUNS

Eighth Inning Rally Hands Victory to the Senators.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—(Canadian Press).—The New York Yankees divided a double-header with the Boston Red Sox yesterday, coming out in front in the opener by 4-2 and losing the nightcap by 5-3. Babe Ruth produced his 39th home run of the season in the third inning of the first game, and also scored three of the Yankee runs.

Cleveland and St. Louis split, St. Louis winning the first, 11 to 7, while Cleveland took the second, 6 to 4. It was Uhle's 19th victory of the season.

The Washington Senators rallied in the eighth inning to score twice and break the deadlock, defeating Philadelphia 5-2. Five double plays featured the game.

Chicago and Detroit battled five scoreless innings when a heavy rain ended the game. Collins for the Tigers allowed one hit and Edwards of the White Sox two.

ELEVEN POWER MACHINES LAUNDER YOUR COLLARS.

Counting one man to a family and allowing him a clean collar a day, 22,608,744 collars are laundered every day in the United States. It takes 7,400 power laundries — aside from home washing—to keep the American man's neck covering clean.

In the well equipped modern laundry, as it is described in Popular Science Monthly for September, your collars are squeezed through suds four times and rinsed five times. A "spinning basket" whirls the collars nearly dry, after which a starch wheel puts starch into them from both sides. On a moving clothesline they are taken on a trip through a dry room. Then they are dampened on porous rubber rolls, which are kept moist, and left standing under pressure for half an hour for "mellowing."

Finally they are ironed. A polished metal cylinder irons the wrong side of the collar, making it slick so that a tie will slip through easily. The right side is ironed by cloth-covered rolls to give a dull finish.

In all, eleven machines are used in the most completely equipped laundries to wash and iron your collar.

Recruit Pitcher Holds Reading Down to Shut-Out Game.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—(Canadian Press).—By winning both ends of a double-header with Jersey City here yesterday, the Toronto Maple Leafs went into first place in the International League standings. The Leafs won the first game 8 to 0 and the second 4 to 1.

Newark defeated Buffalo, 8 to 1, in the opening game of the series. Donald Hankins allowed the Bisons only five hits in winning his thirteenth victory of the season.

Rochester and Baltimore split a double-header, the Chiefs winning the first 8-4, while Baltimore took the nightcap, 3 to 1. Shortstop Jones of the Rochester team broke his ankle sliding into third base, stretching a two-bagger into a triple.

Paul Kinney, a recruit pitcher from Colgate University, held Reading to four hits and Syracuse won 5 to 0.

MONEY SPEEDS UP.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—The $1 bill lives six months. During the last few years its span of life has been ebbing, the average life ten years ago having been 20 months. The anntual cost of replacement of wornout currency has mounted to $4,000,000 so the Treasury Department is taking steps to prolong the wild life the "case note" leads.

PILES GO QUICK

Without Salves or Cutting.

Thousands who have piles have not learned that quick and permanent relief can only be accomplished with internal medicine. Neither cutting nor any amount of treatment with ointments and suppositories will remove the cause.

Bad circulation causes piles. There is a complete stagnation of blood in the lower bowel and a weakening of the parts. Dr. J. S. Leonhardt was first to find the remedy and called his precription HEM-ROID. Dr. Leonhardt tried it in 1000 cases with the marvelous record of success in 98 per cent. and then decided it should be sold by druggists everywhere under a rigid money-back guarantee.

Don't waste any more time with outside application. Get a package of HEM-ROID from McDermid & Jury to-day. It has given safe and lasting relief to thousands and will do the same for you. (Advt.)

MAROONS LOSE TO WANDERERS AT FALL RIVER

Losers Handicapped by Absence of Five Regulars.

SOCCER MATCH

Will Compete With Teams in Series at Brooklyn.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—(Canadian Press.)—The Montreal Maroons, the first of the four Canadian elevens in Canada which will play in Brooklyn in the next four weeks, were defeated by the Brooklyn Wanderers to-day by a score of 5 to 0; the Maroons, formerly the Grenadier Guards, were handicapped by the absence of five of their regulars who were laid up with injuries sustained in a game at Fall River yesterday.

There was no scoring the first half, the teams battling on even terms throughout the period. Brooklyn secured six corners against the visitors' two.

The second half started with Brooklyn putting the ball in the Maroons' territory and five minutes after the start, Neufeld, one of the Austrian players, who was secured by Brooklyn this season, by some clever individual work, brought the first goal. This was followed soon after with another goal from the toe of Schoenfield, another Austrian player. These two goals spurred on the Maroons and they carried the ball into Brooklyn's territory. Their shots, however, were cleverly saved by Smith, the goal keeper, or were either wild of the mark. Neufeld again took the ball down and scored the third goal. The Maroons took the ball into Brooklyn's territory but Easton shot over the bar. Reynolds missed scoring the goal by a few inches. The fourth goal was headed in by Nelson, who substituted for Eisenhoffer, from a corner nick by Burns. Near the finish Nelson again scored, shooting from a distance of 15 feet.

The line-up:

Montreal — Brown, Pain and Clark; Reynolds, Parks and Ferguson; Gibbs, Easton, Renfrew, Johnson and Smith.

Brooklyn— Smith, Manson and McMillen; Drucker, O'Brien and McManus; Neufeld, Conrad, Shenfield, Nelson and Burness.

Referee: T. Cunningham.

Ulster United, of Toronto, play the Wanderers at Ebbetts' Field next Sunday.

GOOD SHOOTING BY E. MATCHETT

Son of Former Local Man Makes Fine Scores at Long Branch.

In a Saturday issue of a Toronto paper appeared two photos of Cadet Sergeant Elwood Matchett of the Hamilton Collegiate Institute, who has done some remarkable shooting at Long Branch ranges last week. Cadet Sergeant Matchett is the 16-year-old son of Mr. M. W. Matchett, formerly of this city.

Cadet Sergeant Matchett, in the LieutenantGovernor's Match, won the silver medal with a score of 118 out of 120, the winner of the gold medal being Q.M.S. J. Sadler of the 19th Alberta Dragroons, who had a score of 119. In the first stage on Wednesday, Sadler had 60 out of 70, and in the second stage on Saturday he put on a possible of 50 at 800 yards. Cadet Sergeant Matchett, who also had a possible of 50 at 800 yards, had 68 on the first stage on Wednesday.

In the City of Hamilton Match, eleven were tied for first place, nine were gradually eliminated amid rising excitement until Cadets Hunter and Matchett were left matching bull's eye for bull's eye. Finally Cadet Hunter shot an inner, followed by Cadet Matchett with another bull's eye, making him the winner.

In the McDonald Brier Match, Cadet Sergeant Matchett scored 67 out of 70.

The Hamilton Collegiate team won the Osler aggregate with an aggregate of 1,662. This was open to 3-yro teams of four of whom Cadet Matchett was one.

In the All Comers' Match he turned in a score of 304. He is in Ottawa shooting this week.

BILLY EVANS SAYS

Freak Styles.

When the spitball delivery was at the height of its popularity, some 15 years back, it played much the same role in the life of a pitcher as the knuckle ball does today.

The remarkable success achieved by such twirlers as Jack Chesbro, Ed Walsh and other noted twirlers of the old days caused every pitcher to feel that he must master the damp delivery.

A great many twirlers did go to the spitball strongly but, like the knuckle ball, because of lack of control, it didn't help their game.

Incidentally, the pitchers who didn't actually throw the spitter faked it by going through all the preliminary maneuvers.

Only a very limited number of spitballers are still doing business in the majors. Within five years, perhaps, it will be but a memory.

Smart Pitchers.

Smart pitchers are always experimenting in an effort to increase their effectiveness. It is most surprising the breaks certain pitchers can get on the ball through the use of perfectly legitimate methods.

I have never umpired an overhand pitcher who couldn't sail his fast ball. While the opposition invariably allege trickery, the result is achieved honestly through the manner of delivery.

When it came actually to doctoring the ball I never saw a pitcher in all my career who could make it take such uncanny dips as Eddie Cicotte.

While I was in Philadelphia recently, "Kid" Gleason dropped into the dressing room for a chat and we discussed Cicotte.

"There never was, or will be, anybody like Cicotte," said Gleason. "Why, he could almost make the ball talk.

"Give him some heavy oil on his glove and permit him to soil his hands and he would soon have in play a ball that would answer his every wish.

"I have seen him pitch fast balls all day to a team noted for its slugging ability and make them look like suckers.

"Cicotte was a magician as well as a pitcher."

Low-Ball Favored.

That pitching styles and methods run in cycles can be proved by the change from the high to the low ball.

Twenty years ago the high ball, no pun meant, was highly favored. Today a majority of the big league pitchers consider the low ball the hardest to hit.

Pitchers of the old school, twirlers of the Cy Young type, used the high ball perhaps 75 per cent of the time. They kept it inside and letter high.

I am positive the spitball delivery had much to do with the popularity the low ball now enjoys.

The spitball, to be effective, must be broken low, which makes the batter top the ball most of the time and hit weak grounders to the infield.

Inspired by this, twirlers who didn't use the moist delivery went to the low ball, so that it is now the most-pitched ball in the game.

Diamond Disputes Decided

by BILLY EVANS

Batter strikes out and starts for his bench believing the catcher has caught the ball. After going about 15 feet in the direction of the bench, he discovers the third strike has been missed. What is his status?

The general impression on such a play, is that the batsman is out the moment he starts for his bench on the theory that he has run out of line. That is erroneous.

The batsman in such a situation, upon realizing the ball has not been caught, has a perfect right to resume running to first and is safe if he can beat the throw.

In going toward the bench he has committed no crime, simply made the distance to first base that much longer.

C.G.E. LADIES BEAT KIWANIANS IN HECTIC TEN INNING GAME

Good Patronage of Fans Raised $240 For Charitable Purposes.

LOTS OF FUN.

Clowns Keep Stands in Uproar With Pranks on Players.

Saturday afternoon's game between theC.G.E. Ladies and Kiwanians was full of spills, thrills and comedy, ending very satisfactorily in a win for the girls by 24 to 23. A splendid crowd turned out to see the game, proceeds of which go to help the Underprivileged Child work of the Kiwanis Club, and about $240 was realized.

Miss Taylor was the outstanding star of the game, being at bat seven times and getting the same number of hits for a total of fourteen bases, a marvellous record for a girl off a man pitcher. Miss Langton tore back into deep centre to spear a line drive that looked like a home run. Misses Plunket and White were other fielding stars who were also quite effective with the bat.

Stage-struck at First

The C. G. E. girls were a little stage-struck at first, having never played against men before. There were some husky men in the Kiwanis team, too. Dr. John Craig looked like another Babe Ruth, and some of his team mates think he got easy pickings from the pitcher. Miss Vincent did not hit her stride until the third, and was probably not so fast as usual all through the game. She showed her usual splendid control, however, and deserved better fielding support.

The Kiwanians were instructed to dress like girls, but their ideas differed. Art Reynolds had a wig that transformed him so that few of his bank's customers would recognize the right fielder. John McKone, associating with stenographers so much as he does in the Business College, had a better idea of their dress than most, and appeared to good advantage in a flippant hat and red stockings.

Carl McLean pitched for the losers, and was hit pretty freely. Then, being manager also, he pulled himself out and took his battery mate, Mark Bredin, with him, letting Fred Scates and Harry Dugan, the clowns, finish.

The box score tells the story of the funny ten innings battle:

CORONER TAKES LITTLE EVIDENCE

Adjourns Inquest Into Shooting in Alleged Jealous Quarrel.

WHITETABLE, Eng., Aug. 16.—(Canadian Press). — The coroner's inquest into the death of John Adam Berham, alleged to have been shot by Alphonse Francis Austin Smith, a Toronto man, was adjourned this afternoon until August 30, without revealing any of the mysterious and sensational details expected which had attracted a large crowd. The coroner took only ssufficient evidence to establish the identity of the dead man as to permit burial of the body. The dead man's father, Walter Berham, attended the inquest, but declined to answer the questions asked by the coroner regarding the statements that his son is supposed to have made before he died. Mrs. Smith, formerly Catherine White, and wife of the accused man, was in attendance with her sister. She is Smith's second wife, and seemingly not more than 21 years of age. A jealous quarrel over her has been advanced by the police as the cause of the shooting.

HOW TO SWIM

by William Cunningham

THE CRAWL STROKE

The crawl, originally called the Australian crawl but since improved by Americans until its original form has almost been lost, is a stroke for speed swimming.

All racing swimmers use it and it has been proved by far the fastest known. A number of teachers instruct beginner s in the crawl, but I hold that it is so difficult of perfect co-ordination that a swimmer should be more or less expert in other strokes before he attempts the crawl.

The chief matter of interest to beginners is that the face is under water all the while except while breathing. It is this breathing businsss which makes the crawl difficult to teach beginners.

So the first instruction is to try the overarm stroke with the face under water and turn the head to inhale every four strokes of the hands.

HOUSE CLEANING IN FULL SWING AT BUCKINGHAM

Private Apartments of King and Queen Being Renovated.

SERVANTS BUSY.

Queen's Chinese Room Is Being Given Special Attention By Cleaners.

LONDON, Aug. 16. — (United Press.)—House cleaning is now in full swing in the State salons and private apartments of Buckingham Palace. This year Queen Mary did not remain to supervise the renovation of the apartments reserved for the private use of herself and King George.

The palace servants, however, are among the best trained in the world, and the rug beating, window washing and allied tasks of house cleaning, are proceeding with precision.

The King and Queen will return from their week in the north to find that their apartments have been completely overhauled. Particular attention is being paid to Queen Mary's Chinese room, which is among the most sumptuous in the world and one in which her Majesty takes great interest.

Many years ago the nucleus of the Chinese room was provided by the presentation to Queen Victoria of several valuable pieces of Chinese furniture. Since then many additions have been made to the collection. Queen Victoria expanded it considerably and Queen Mary has been even more interested.

The Queen's youngest son, Prince George, recently sent his mother some choice specimens of china from the Far East, where his naval duties had taken him. Buckingham Palace is one of the more unpretentious public or semi-public London buildings. It is huge and surrounded with appropriate grounds, but is of a rambling sort, unlike the former Czar's winter palace in Petrograd or the former Kaiser's palace in Berlin. Buckingham Palace was originally the town house of the Duke of Buckingham, from whom it takes its name.

In 1701 King George 3rd bought the palace from the Duke, and since then it has repeatedly been extended and altered. Queen Victoria in 1837 made Buckingham Palace the official town residence of the Sovereign.

CHANG'S FORCES CLAIM VICTORY

Fighting Is Resumed Near Pekin In Attempt To Capture Pass.

FENG IN MOSCOW.

PEKIN, Aug. 16 (Canadian Press).—An important victory was claimed yesterday by leaders of Marshals We Pei-fu and Chang Tso-lin's troops over the Kuomintung, the national armies of the Pekin Government, which the allied forces overthrew last April.

Flags flew in Pekin in celebration of the allies' claim of capture of Nankow Pass, key to the Kuomintung position in the mountains north and west of the capital.

Entrenched at the pass, twenty-six miles from Pekin, from which they were driven when the Government dominated by their commander, Feng Yu-hsiang, was deposed, the Kuomingtung have stubbornly resisted efforts to dislodge and disperse them. Feng abandoned his troops, going to Moscow, but able commanders replaced him, and the Kuomingtung have been reported well equipped and trained, with supplies reaching them from Russian sources through Mongolia to Kalgan, their base.

Communication is interrupted, and the meagre advices reaching here do not indicate how far the allies were able to press the victory they claimed.

Covered lawn tennis courts of regulation size are to be found on each of the six floors of an apartment building just completed in Paris, near the Invalides.

HEAVY HITTING OF DELORO NINE DEFEATS PETES

Local Seniors Are Beaten By Smelters in Exhibition Game.

SCORE IS 15-1.

Ralph Holds Visitors To Four Hits, While Winners Make 18.

MARMORA, Aug. 16.—The unexpected and inexplicable happened at Deloro on Saturday afternoon, when Manager Elliott's Black Caps notched a 15 to 1 victory over Shiner Johnston's nine. Only one error apiece marked a game lease expected to have such a result. The substantial margin obtained by the homesters was in the main due to their consistent heavy hitting. For once they undoubtedly excelled themselves and, as one put it, with regard to their fielding, horseshoe charm must have been theirs. Ralph, the southpaw, pitched throughout for the Smelters, maintaining good control. Lennox opened the pitching for the Petes, being relieved by Hardill in the sixth.

In the first innings it took only four consecutive balls to finish the visitors' stand. Hughes got a magnificent running catch. Deloro retired scoreless. In the second frame, after Peterborough had retired in order, Hughes with a double brought in J. Quinn and Brown. In the third Brown caught a long fly by Wolfe and scoring was again checked. Deloro added two more runs through a triple by Boudreau scoring Bond, the hitter making home an an error. A fifth run was added by the Smelters in the fourth. A neat double play by Peterborough in the fifth altered the prospect of a score.

In the sixth Deloro came back with seven runs, their hits being exceptionally well placed. Rose scored for Peterborough in the eighth. In Deloro's half, A. Quinn tripled with a terrific hit to centre field, Boudreau singled scoring Quinn, and Jack doubled advancing Boudreau to third. The latter scored on a sacrifice hit by J. Quinn. Brown bunted, bringing in Jack, this ending the scoring. Due to lateness in advertising only a small crowd witnessed the game.

FALL OF FRANC UPSETS FRANCE

Housekeepers Buy Up Foodstuffs in Fear of Further Decline.

SHOPS CLOSE.

PARIS, Aug. 14.—In one neighborhood at least in Paris the women are beginning to hoard sugar. The neighborhood grocers says that housewives have been storing it away against the day when, they fear, the government will impose wartime restrictions. The hoard is kept intact, ordinary needs being met with regular purchases.

The cause for the uneasiness is the opinion held oy many economists, government experts among them, that the time is not far distant when France will be forced to cut down on her outside purchases of sugar, wheat, and other such materials that she does not produce herself, or in suficient quantities to meet demands. They say that it is a question of too much money going out of the country, and that France must consume less and produce more.

The wheat crop this year was seriously damaged by wet weather occurring during the planting season, and in many cases the seed was completely killed. Much of this acreage was put into oats and barley. For this reason the wheat crop is expected to fall considerably short of normal, which would mean that a much greater quantity of wheat would have to be purchased abroad this year than in ordinary years. To avoid this necessity it has been proposed that the quantities of wheat flour in bread be reduced, and that barley and other such flours substituted.

This talk of putting the country on to wartime rations of products which must be purchased abroad, and issuing bread containing wheat-flour substitutes, together with the constantly mounting cost of living, has done more to bring home to the common man the seriousness of the national situation than all of the columns of political discussion in the newspapers.

Know Little Economics.

Like the great bulk of the population in every country the ordinary Frenchman knows little of economics. The franc may go up or down in relation to the dollar or the pound and it means nothing to him so long as he has enough francs to pay his bills. So far he has had plenty of money. There has been no unemployment in France for five years and the government report for July 15 showed approximately 12,000 jobs going begging. The only class of labor for which there is not a greater demand than a supply is clerical help. The laboring man's wages and farmer's return have also been forced up as the value of the franc has declined and living costs mounted. The common man has had no complaint against the situation.

So little is the decline of the franc understood among the mass of people that there are even Frenchmen who will argue that the franc has not lost value but that the pound and dollar have gained. In the country districts and villages which have little or no direct contact with international commerce, a franc is still a franc, although it has not as much value as before the war, the same as a dollar in the United States is a dollar, although it is worth only about 65 cents on the basis of the 1913 dollar.

But now that there is talk of food rationing and issuing bread containing wheat-flour substitutes, the common people are beginning to be aroused. Prices are also soaring to the point where many people are becoming badly pinched. From now on it may be expected that the mass of people will take more of a hand in the French political situation than they have up until this time. And the French population can be a dangerous force when it starts to move. It is beginning to realize that every time the value of the franc goes up the cost of living goes up.

Food Prices Rise.

It is almost impossible now to keep track of food prices, they rise so steadily. Gasoline has been increased six per cent. to a total of 300 per cent over pre war prices. Fares on subways, buses and street cars have recently been increased 25 per cent.

"Six months ago I could give my wife 15 francs for the day's food," said a Frenchman in moderate circumstances. "Now I give her 20 francs and sometimes when I come home for dinner there is only soup."

People who have francs have been spending them as fast as possible in order to get value out of them before they lost more of their worth. An American woman who desired to buy damask table linen with the rate of exchange so much in favor of the dollar went to one of the largest Paris department store but could only fined one tablecloth left.

"Have the Americans bought them all?" she asked the clerk.

'No, it is the French," was the reply. "For the last week they have been cleaning us out of nearly all our valuable linen."

Bargain Sale Stopped.

Another one of the large department stores suddenly stopped a bargain sale when the franc started a downward swoop. Many of the luxury shops have closed their doors with the excuse that the proprietors are taking vacations. The explanation in both instances is that there is no desire to sell out merchandise at present prices which may cost a great deal more to stock later.

The Americans are blamed every time the franc declines, speculation by New York bankers being charged. This coupled with the unpopularity of the American debt-funding program is intensifying the hatred of America which has been mounting during the last year. It has been accentuated by the parade of the mained soldiers and the posters which appear on the billboards under the auspices of various patriotic and political societies. The most recent one demands to know who was the victor in the war and then cites figures purporting to show that the payments demanded by the United States from France considerably exceed the sums France will receive from Germany. They also declare that no sign the debt agremeent would be to put France in bondage to the United States for 62 years.

There is no resentment against England, although a debt settlement was recently negotiated between France and England, but this can probably be explained from the fact that England has maintained all along that she only intended to meet payments to the United States and that she is willing to cancel all debts under a general agreement. English newspaper attacks on the American debt collection program are reprinted in the French newspapers.

The feeling against Americans which has been confined to more or lelss polite hostility during the last six months has now reached the point of minor demonstrations. Stones have been thrown at tourists and there have been a few direct clashes between individuals.

Notwithstanding the serious internal situation, the surface of French life remains active and fairly gay. The cafes and restaurants have been doing big business. The race courses are crowded every Sunday and fete day, even though admissions have been increased from 40 to 50 francs, and to the pelouse from 3 1-2 to 5 francs. The factories are all running, particularly the automobile plants which are behind in their orders. French youths are affecting wide-bottom trousers and a queer French adaptation of the Charleston is being danced in the cafes and dancehalls. The serious national situation has not yet marred social life.

New Aerial Dreadnought Is Built For British Navy

FELIXSTOWE, Eng., Aug. 16. United Press. — British navy is developing an aerial dreadnaught, which will be used in manoeuvres with the fleet.

Work on the new war machine is being conducted secretly. It is said to be one of the largest airplanes, not needing a mother ship to carry it, which has yet been constructed.

A machine gun, said to be able to fire 1200 shots a minute, was tested recently by the New York National Guard. It throws ball shots and kills at 2000 yards.

SETTLEMENT IS TO BE DISCUSSED

Empire Parliamentary Conference Will Take Matter Up.

MANY PROBLEMS.

MONTREAL, Aug. 16 (Canadian Press).—Emigration problems in the Old Country and immigration problems in the British Dominions will form one of the outstanding subjects to be discussed when parliamentarians from the British Empire gather in Australia. The Right Hon. Arthur Henderson, who is the chairman of the British delegation, the members of which arrived in Montreal last night, foresaw plenty of work with regard to this matter when interviewed here.

Both from the point of the Mother Country's interests in regard to the distribution to the Dominions of trained emigrants and the Dominions' interest in securing the type of settlers desirable in the respective parts, this discussion was expected to be of vital importance.

Mr. Henderson said he was aware of the necessity for Canada of obtaining agricultural workers who would settle on the soil, and not skilled workers who would cause over-congestion in the cities. It did not follow, he said, that certain English and Scottish Labor men, for example, young miners, could not become most desirable immigrants for Canada. There was a great opportunity by means of a training system for overseas settlers.

Threatened Split in Party Is Healed Without Outside Candidate.

BRADETTE TO RUN.

COCHRANE, Aug. 16 (Canadian Press).—At a meeting or representatives of all the local Liberal organizations of the riding of North Temiskaming it was unanimously decided to support Joseph Bradette as official Liberal candidate in the forthcoming Federal election. The meeting held on Saturday afternoon at Cochrane was for the purpose of discussing proposals which had been submitted by which it was hoped to heal the split in the party ranks by arranging the candidature of the Hon. Vincent Massey in this riding. Speaker after speaker declared his fealty to the official Liberal nominee and pledged his support to Joseph Bradette. It was unanimously agreed that the proposals to run Mr. Massey in this riding did not have the support of the rank and file of the Liberal party. In a statement issued to the Canadian Press, Mr. Bradette said this morning, "I am in the fight to the finish. Saturday's meeting showed conclusively that all factions of the Liberal party are again united, and it is my intention to carry the riding if possible for the Liberal party."

Mr. Bradette denied that any pressure had been brought to bear on him to withdraw from the field, either by the Hon. P. J. A. Cardin or the Hon. Vincent Massey.

Valentino In Hospital After Sudden Operation

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Rudolph Valentino, screen star, collapsed suddenly yesterday in his apartment at the Hotel Ambassador. Several hours later he underwent operations for the removal of gastric ulcer and appendix, which also had become affected. Late last night he was still unconscious at the Polyclinic Hospital, and in a serious condition. It was believed, however, that he would recover.

Mrs Valentino and his valet, it was said, were the only persons in his apartment at the time of the collapse. The screen star suddenly gasped, put his hand to his body, and fell in a faint.

Dr. Meeker, assisted by Dr. Durham, performed a double operation about an hour later. At the hospital, persons in charge would say only that the operations had been performed, and that Mr. Valentino had not yet come out of the effects of the anaesthetic.

BISHOP REPEATS HIS STATEMENT

Says Nobody Who Kisses Papal Ring Can Be President.

ATTITUDE CRITICIZED.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—(Canadian Press.)—Bishop A. W. Leonard, of the Methodist Episcopal church, president of the New York Anti-Saloon League, reiterated here on Sunday his recent statement in connection with Governor Al Smith's Roman Catholic faith that no governor who kisses the Papal ring can get within gunshot of the White House.

Bishop Charles Fiske, of Utica, N.Y., took exception to this attitude in a sermon at Paul Smiths, N.Y., in a church not far from the summer White House in which he characterized Bishop Leonard's declaration as "un-American in spirit."

ROTARY HEARS OF CONVENTION

L. A. Potvin Tells of Addresses at International Meeting.

AT DENVER.

Echoes of the Rotary Convention held in June at Denver, Col., were heard this afternoon at the weekly luncheon of the Rotary Club in the Empress Hotel, when Rotarian Louis A. Potvin gave an interesting description of his journey to the convention city and of proceedings held there. Denver Mr. Potvin described as a pretty city a mile high, surrounded by mountains and surrounded by lakes, which were invaluable for irrigation purposes. The arrival of Miss Rotary and the 35 nations was a fitting prelude to the inspiring addresses that were heard on the following day.

Mr. Potvin told of the impression made by an address on business methods from Rotarian E. Flynn of St. Paul. Discussing the question, "Do high ethical standards pay?" Mr. Flynn declared that before there could be world-wide peace, there must be industrial peace. Before there can be industrial peace, business has to be put on a basis of integrity and fair dealing such as was advocated by Rotary. He compared business to sport and urged every man to be a good sportsman.

One of the maxims which Mr. Potvin brought home with him was, "The biggest thing in all the world is business, and the biggest thing in business is honesty."

Mr. Potvin also referred to an address on Rotary service, given by Kendrick Guernsey, one of the new directors of Rotary International. Taking as his subject, "Developing the individual in community service," Mr. Guernsey defined patriotism as taking an active interest in all community activities. Patriotism did not consist merely of flag waving and then sitting idly by letting the other fellow do the work.

The convention also listened to an address on boys' work by Paul Rogers, who urged his fellow-Rotarians to be pals to their boys and to start early. The problem of the delinquent was one for trained men. Addresses were also given on military training or physical training, religious instruction and educational and vocational training.

Mr. Potvin promised to relate at a later date his experiences on the homeward journey.

Past President Vincent McElderry, on behalf of the club, presented last year's president, Jack Seels, with the past president's badge, and eulogized Mrs. Seels' work in connection with the activities of the club, adding a tribute to Mrs. Seels for her labors on behalf of Rotary Annes.

YARD ENGINES MEET ON TRACK

One Is Entirely Derailed While Tender of Other Leaves Track.

DAMAGE SLIGHT.

Two C. N. R. yard engines, engaged in shunting operations, were derailed, one partially and the other almost completely, by a collision on the Lakefield line, between Antrim and Edinburgh streets, shortly after 11 o'clock this forenoon. Unknown to the engineers, the two engines were working on the same section of the line and No. 7139 pulling half a dozen cars, collided with light engine 7143, which was fortunately standing still.

The impact was comparatively slight but the buffers of 7139 were smashed, and the engine was thrown off the rails, damaging the track for a distance of 20 feet. The light engine escaped with less damage, some of the wheels of the tender being knocked off the rails and a headlight being destroyed. This afternoon a gang of men was on the job, repairing the damage.

On account of the blocking of the line, the noon train for Lakefield was unable to proceed and passengers were taken by motor bus to their destination.

THE STOCK MARKET

Wheat Prices Open Weak With Conflicting News

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 16.—(Canadian Press.)—Wheat prices opened weak to-day with a firm undertone, but the initial gains failed to hold. Foreign buying, which was in evidence appeared to be more than counter-balanced as a result of local speculative selling. Opening at 1-4 off to 5-8 up, wheat receded all around to a little below Saturday's finish.

Corn, oats and provisions were easy, corn starting at 3-8 decline to 1-8 advance and subsequently showing a moderate general setback.

Liberal arrivals of wheat in Chicago to-day was the factor that tended to give some prestige to-day to the selling side of the wheat market, besides the fact that the domestic spring wheat movement is getting under way was pointed out as of a good deal of significance regardless of the material falling off in winter wheat receipts as a whole.

On the other hand, to-day's European advices told of trans-Atlantic harvest operations being delayed by wet weather with only nominal quantities of wheat destined to Great Britain from North America and merchants' stocks.

Price Movement Upward Has Tendency To Slacken

NEW YORK, Aug. 16 (Canadian Press).—The main price movement in to-day's stock market continued upward although an increasing tendency to take profits and put out short lines was noted. Buying orders were spread over a broad list, the heavy buying of rails which sent nearly a dozen issues in that group to new peak prices during the morning being followed by a revival of activity in high-priced industrials, with U.S. Steel Common touching a new record high at 158.

Widespread predictions of a big oil market this week to be based on the expected decision of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey directors to retire the preferred stock and increase the dividend on common, were dealt a staggering blow when only the regular common dividend was declared and no action taken toward calling in the preferred. The traditional "selling on good news" brought about a break of 8 points in Dupont on the announcement that the quarterly dividend had been increased from 2½ to 3½ per cent., and a meeting of stockholders called to vote on a proposal to increase the authorized common stock from 1,500,000 shares of 1,000 par to 5,000,000 shares of no par and to issue two shares of the new stock for one of the old. While the directors of the U.S. Steel Corpordtion do not hold their next quarterly meeting until October, Wall Street was flooded with reports that a 40 per cent. stock dividend would then be declared. Independent Steels also rallied despite reports of a falling off in building construction in many large centres. Banks called about $20,000,000 in loans during the morning but call money was in plentiful supply around 4½ per cent.

Trading Weak at Toronto Confined To Narrow Range

TORONTO, August 16. Canadian Press. — Trading on the Toronto stock exchange to-day exhibited a slightly weaker tendency with prices lower in the leading stocks. The market was confined to a narrow range.

Brazilian traction was the active leader with a turnover of nearly 1500 shares. It closed 1-8 off at 111 5-8; B. C. Fishing, next in activity, suffered a decline of 2 1-2 to 72 1-2, while Consolidated Smelters dropped 2 1-4 to 234. Canadian Pacific sold off 1 point at 165. International Nickel gained 1-4 to 37 1-2. The bank stocks were fractionally stronger, Imperial gaining 3-4 to 204 3-4 and Royal 1-2 to 251. In the mining list McIntyre lost 10c to $25.00; Nipissing gained 20 to 5.60, and ome was unchanged at 11.25.

WAITE-MONTGOMEY-ACKERMAN

On the Waite-Montgomery property drilling has been completed for the present and a large body of copper and zinc ore has been outlined. It is unlikely that mining will commence until the completion of the railroad and of the Horne smelter, where the ore will probably be sent for reduction. In the meantime buildings have been erected to house a force of 75 men, and prospecting for further ore bodies is being vigorously prosecuted by magnetomotric observations.

On the Amulet claims a shaft is being sunk on a new ore body discovered during the past winter, and is now at a depth of about 100 feet. Exploratory drilling is also being carried on.

Much interest is taken throughout the district in the development of the Towagamac (Alderson - Mackay) discoveries in Boischatel township. In addition to the three large veins of disseminated ore previously found, drilling during the winter has established the existence of a large lens of almost solid copper sulphite some 50 feet thick. The presence of all these veins was first indicated by dip needle observation. The efficiency of this method of prospecting is becoming increasingly recognized, with the result that magnetic observations are being systematically made on almost all the properties throughout the district.

IN MEMORIAM

McILWAIN.—In loving memory of our dear daughter and sister, Ethel, who passed away August 16, 1923.

In the cemetery softly sleeping
Where the flowers nod and wave,
Lies our dear daughter, we loved so dearly,
In her lone and silent grave,
Our hearts are full of sorrow
And tears have dimmed our eyes,
But we shall meet you once again
In the home beyond the skies;
Farewell, dear daughter, your life is passed,
We loved you dearly to the last.
In life we loved you, dear daughter,
In death, we do the same;
And Christ shall bind
That broken link, when we meet again.

NICKLE CANNOT PREVENT BAIL

Attorney-General Says Decision Rests in Magistrate's Hands.

BUILDING UP CASE.

TORONTO, Aug. 16 (Canadian Press).—Hon. W. F. Nickle, Attorney-General of Ontario, stated today that no "instructions" had been issued from the Attorney-General's department requiring that bail be granted or refused in the case of the Ontario residents who are charged with manslaughter and with offences under the customs act in connection with various deaths which have occurred in the province from the drinking of poison liquor.

"I have no jurisdiction to instruct the magistrates what they shall do about bail. Of course, I have the power to ask the Crown Attorneys to oppose the granting of bail, but in the final analysis the matter rests entirely in the hands of the magistrates," the Attorney-General said.

Hon. Mr. Nickle stated that there were no new developments in the investigation, but that the province was not relaxing in the work of prosecution and officials were engaged in the task of building up a case on the evidence before them.

FRENCH CABINET MAY MOVE TO CANCEL ALL THE WAR DEBTS EXCEPT GERMAN REICH BONDS

Comment on Clemenceau's Note Said to Have Given Idea.

BRITISH IN FAVOR

Proposal is Made in Open Letter to Massachusetts Lawyer.

PARIS, Aug. 17.—Inquiries in London and Paris showed beyond the shadow of a doubt that a proposal for cancellation of all war debts and all reparations except $4,000,000,000 of German railroad and industrial bonds would get an excellent reception in England and France. Indeed, in France, where large efforts are about to be made to reconcile the public to ratification of the American and British debt agreements, there is a belief that Premier Poincare may make some such proposal before the end of the year.

Strangely enough, it is Senator Borah's comment on Clemenceau's letter to President Coolidge which appears to have given impetus to this idea. Senator Borah's statement that if war debts are cancelled reparations should also be annulled is regarded on this side of the Atlantic as a sort of challenge, and there are evidences of willingness to take it up. It is believed over here that after study the American Government would not be willing to have all reparations cancelled, since that would leave competing German industry free from all the burden of liquidation of the war, whereas the United States along with England, France and Italy would still bear the burden of the domestic debts contracted for the conduct of the war.

Proposal by Bunau-Varilla.

An open letter by M. Bunau-Varilla to Mr. Peabody (the Massachusetts lawyer who recently wrote a plea for debt cancellation to President Coolidge) published in the Figaro yesterday is sure to find a prolonged echo in France, for it represents the opinion of many leading citizens.

Under this proposal all international war commitments would be cancelled except the 11,000,000,000 gold marks of German railroad bonds and 5,000,000,000 gold marks of German industrial bonds provided in the Dawes plan. There is no doubt about Germany's being able to bear the burden, since the interest on the railroad bonds comes from the revenues of the country's common carriers, which have no other commitments, having been transformed into a reparations corporation, and from industries which had a far greater amount of indebtedness wiped out by the fall of the mark.

It is considered that the receipts from the sales of these bonds should go to the Allies in the proportion arranged for the receipt of reparation payments. France would then receive about $2,000,000,000 against the $4,000,000,000 or $5,000,000,000 she has spent on reconstruction.

There are even some suggestions that France's receipts from the sale of these bonds be given to the United States if she will agree to a general wiping out of war indebtedness.

Jacques Bardoux in the Avenir suggests that Premier Poincare go to Geneva next month and announce to the world the French plan of debt arrangement. He says:

"The delegate of France should mount the tribune and asks the league to aid in pulling down the last bars which block the road to peace. France should propose that all war debts be annulled except the 16,000,000,000 marks of the German railroad and industrial bonds, and that these be given to the American treasury.

"This suggestion should have the support of the Anglo-Saxons and certainly of all South America. Even Borah, it appears, would be favorable and the world could not stand rejection. No country could afford to oppose a movement favored by all humanity. No State could carry isolation that far."

In France one finds a disposition to admit that there is little

Eastern Coast Of England Crumbles Before The Sea

DUNWICH, England, Aug. 17.—The "tight little island" becomes tighter each year. The silent incessant warfare between the sea and the coast has again been brought into prominence by the serious erosion of the coast of Essex, making necessary the reconstruction of the London & North-Eastern Railway between Frinton and Walton. The line is to be placed farther inland, but until this work is completed the present line will continue to be used.

Other parts of the East Coast are being eaten away by the sea. At Dunwich the sea has worn inland so far that the remaining portion of the famous Dunwich church tower has been removed for preservation, and the rest of the told town lies beneath the waves. At Holderness the land is fighting a losing battle with the sea. Parts of southeast England are disappearing, and Sussex is losing some 400 acres every years. A Selsea a boarding house that was built only a few years ago now stands derelict, the waves having encroached into the garden.

REPORT THREATS OVER TELEPHONE

Prominent Citizens Receive Ominous Warning From K.K.K. at Winnipeg.

ARE INVESTIGATING.

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 17. — (Canadian Press).—Ominous warnings of death and threats of violence over the telephone, purporting to come from the Ku Klux Klan, have been reported by several Winnipeg aldermen and other prominent citizens.

The latest report comes from Alderman J. Blumberg, who yesterday disclosed that he had been aroused early Saturday morning and told over the telephone that he was marked for destruction by the K.K.K. An hour later a doctor called at the Blumberg residence and announced that he had been told something serious had happened.

S. Hart Greene, a criminal lawyer, had a similar experience. He was warned he had only two more days to live. Alderman J. McDiarmid and Barry have reported to police that they received threatening warnings by telephone and abusive notes signed "K.K.K."

The authorities are investigating.

The pain in the stomach, which made him faint in his apartment at the Ambassador Hotel or Sunday afternoon, and caused Dr. Harold Meeker to rush him to the Polyclinic Hospital for an immediate operation was found to be not only advanced apendicitis, but also gastric ulcers, which had burst. Dog Has Appendicitis Operation Is Successful

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Aug. 17.—Dog lovers of this section and veterinary journals of the country are showing keen interest in the result of an operation for appendicitis performed recently by Dr. G. B. Huse on a pedigreed lemon and white pointer dog owned by George E. Wright of this city. The dog had been subject to fits, and all possible treatments, including X-ray photographs, were resorted to in an effort to diagnose the cause. All failed. Mr. Wright ordered the animal killed but Dr. Huse prevailed upon him to allow an operation, which showed the dog to be suffering from an inflamed and enlarged appendix. That was two weeks ago, and to-day the dog is strong and husky. His owner refuses to sell it for $1,000.

ACTING PREMIER GIVES ADDRESS AT CENTENARY

The "Key" Indicative of Freedom, Hung From Miniature Balloon.

OFFICIAL OPENING.

Speeches Made By Clergy and Officials of the City.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 17 (Canadian Press). — Ottawa's centenary celebrations officially began yesterday, when Sir Henry Drayton, acting Premier, declared them open. The "key" indicative of the freedom of the city to all the visitors floated from a miniature balloon, and addresses were delivered by Archbishop Emard of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Ottawa; Rt. Rev. Dr. Ingram, Anglican Bishop of London, England; Rev. G. A. MacDonald, chairman of the General Ministerial Association of the city, and Mayor Balharrie. On the platform, amid the great gathering of men and women prominent in the religious, political and official life of the capital were a native son, Thomas Barry, born here in 1826, the year Bytown, which afterwards became Ottawa, was founded, and a native daughter, Mrs. William Caldwell, born here in 1830. The massed bands of the local regiments, the Queen's Own of Toronto and the 22nd of Quebec played "Home, Sweet Home," and the thousands present, many who had travelled far to participate in the 100th anniversary, joined in the singing.

Last evening the Queen's Own and the 22nd detachment united with the local troops in a "tattoo," after which the visiting units entrained for their homes. In the afternoon the rudder international trophy motor boat races on the Ottawa River resulted in the United States boats piling up a commanding point lead over the Canadian competitors.

Addressing a luncheon tendered officers of the visiting battalions by the Ottawa garrison, Major-General J. H. MacBrien, chief of staff, said it was the duty of every good Canadian to come to Ottawa for some purpose at some time or another, and "it is especially fortunate that two splendid regiments are our guests to-day." The luncheon was attended by more than one hundred military, naval and air force officers and half as many guests.

Little Girl's Story Throws Fresh Light On Triple Tragedy

Six-Year-Old Ethel Barnes Saw Brothers and Cousin Jump From Skiff and Drown in Waters of Otonabee.

BOAT FOUND FLOATING NEAR BANK WITH THE OARS STILL IN ROWLOCKS

Further particulars have come to light regarding the circumstances which led up to the drowning tragedy in the river Otonabee at Chester street yesterday afternoon in which Allan and Leonard Barnes, aged 11 and 9, respectively of 28 St. James street, and Bertie Cookman, aged 10, of Monaghan Road, lost their lives. Ethel Barnes, the little sister of two of the victims and cousin of Bertie Cookman, the only known eye witness of the tragedy told The Examiner which drifted away from the bank and they leaped out and disappeared. G. E. Cookman, former provincial constable, uncle to Bertie Cookman had drawn up the skiff well on to the bank a short time previously as he was leaving home to come to the city.

At 2.55 Inspector Reid in the Police Department received a call from Miss Scott, a guest at the Cookman home, who said that a short time previously she had seen three boys in a boat, that she could no longer see them, that she feared something untoward had befallen them and that she felt that a constable ought to be sent to investigate the matter.

Detective Sergeant Meagher was taken to the spot by Humane Society Inspector R. C. Smith, Detective William Carey, also hurried to the scene, County Constable F. Pratt and P. C. Thompson also rushed down carrying hooks and pikepoles.

Thirty Minute Search

After 15 minutes' search, they located the first body, Allan Barnes. When another fifteen minutes had elapsed the searchers were rewarded by the recovery of the two younger boys.

Fire Chief George Gimblett was speedily on the scene with his men and the pulmotor. Everything possible was done to resuscitate the boys, but in vain and Dr. A. G. Howson pronounced life extinct in each of the bodies. County Constable Pratt took charge of the corpses, and reported the fatalities to the Coroner, Dr. T. W. H. Young, who had been called away on another case.

Acting on the instructions of Dr. Young, Constable Pratt had the bodies removed to Comstock's Funeral Parlour.

After viewing the bodies and hearing the constable's report the Coroner decided that no inquest was necessary.

Ethel Barnes' Story

Ethel Barnes, 6, a younger sister of the two Barnes boys, was at one time thought also to have been drowned until she was discovered in Mr. Cookman's house where she related sobbingly and incoherently, the story of the events of which she appears to have been the sole witness. According to her story, the boys got into the boat, which drifted from the bank and tilted slightly, and the boys, in a panic leaped out in the effort to reach the bank only fifteen feet away. Little Ethel says the boys did not make any outcry, but simply jumped out to sink immediately.

Previous to Ethel's story becoming known, the belief was current in many quarters that the boat had been upset.

On learning that the boat was still afloat Constable Pratt set out to discover it, and found it floating near the bank, having been driven by the wind some distance up stream. There was no water in the box and the oars were still in the rowlocks.

It is believed that none of the boys was able to swim, but even if they had been able to, they would have found considerable difficulty in making their way through the tangled growth of weeds that rendered still more dangerous the waters of the Otonabee that have taken such a heavy toll of life this season.

Efforts at Resuscitation

The large crowd of onlookers who watched attentively every movement of the men who labored long and hard to recall the little lads back to life fluctuated between hope and fear and watched eagerly for encouraging signs from the faces of the rescuers. Doubt succeeded hope and merged into despair when Chief Newhall was heard to remark gravely, "It is the old story over again.—Too late." A sigh went up from the crowd when Dr. Howson pronounced life extinct. The bereaved mother of the two boys came out and learned of the dread tidings. She stood for a moment and by gestures rather than speech, asked if both were dead. When the full realization of the terrible truth came over her, she bent down and tenderly fondled the locks of her little son who had crossed the bourne into that undiscovered country whence no traveller returns. Every woman in the crowd was sobbing, and even some of the stalwart policemen and firemen gave evidence of being under severe emotional strain. A sympathetic neighbor gently led Mrs. Barnes away from the scene.

Alfred Barnes, father of two of the victims, is employed in the brass department of the C.G.E. Works. Mrs. Cookman is a widow.

Some years ago, Allan Barnes became deaf as a result of an attack of diphtheria and was sent to the school for the deaf and dumb at Belleville. He was spending his summer holidays at home when tragedy overtook him. The two younger boys attended May's school in North Monaghan.

Mrs. George Cookman, aunt of Bertie Cookman is at present on a visit to the Old Country with her two children.

The three boys will be buried tomorrow. They will be taken from their homes at 1.30 to the Salvation Army Temple where a service will be held at 2 o'clock. The Rev. J. D. Richardson will officiate at the home of the Barnes boys and may also take part in the service in the Temple.

CAMPAIGN TO TEACH SWIMMING BEING STARTED BY ROTARY CLUB

Will Arrange To Have Teachers at Pools and Beaches.

TAKING SURVEY.

List of Non-Swimmers in Peterborough Is Being Compiled.

Shocked by the number of drowning accidents in Peterborough and district during the present summer, the Peterborough Rotary Club announces today the launching of a campaign to give every one in the city a chance to learn to swim.

"Every one a swimmer by 1927" is the slogan of the campaign, and through the use of the pools at the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. and the employment of swiming instructors at the civic bathing beaches, it is the hope of Rotary directors that the slogan may be converted into a reality.

"We are convinced that the number of drowning accidents can be very materially reduced by a more general knowledge of the art of swimming, said President C. H. Rogers of the Rotary Club in informing The Examiner of the decision to immediately inaugurate the campaign. "The public, we believe is appalled at the loss of life through such accidents and people are prepared to co-operate with us in carrying out our programme."

A survey of the city with a view to ascertaining the number of non-swimmers is already under way and an opportunity will be placed before every person who cannot swim to learn before the end of the present summer.

Armies Of Caterpillars Alarm British Parliament

LONDON, Aug. 17.—London's plague of caterpillars has attained such proportions that it claimed the attention of Parliament, even in the rush of the last day's session. Captain D. H. Hacking, Under Secretary for the Home Office, replying to the question of an alarmed member, said that thousands of gallons of spray were being used in the royal parks to rid them of the pests, which are damaging trees and dropping on the necks of park visitors.

Hyde Park experienced a plague of caterpillars which dropped on to the chairs and occasionally made a good shot down one's neck.

SIX MILD CASES OF SMALLPOX IN PETERBORO'

One Case of Measles and One of Chickenpox Also Reported.

WATER POLLUTED.

Report on Conditions of Bathing Beach Will Be Prepared.

Routine business was transacted at the monthly meeting of the Board of Health, held this forenoon in the City Buildings. There were present: Alderman W. J. Hancock (chairman), Acting Mayor Nagle Phelan, Dr. T. W. H. Young, Medical Officer of Health; Plumbing Inspector A. G. Metheral, and Sanitary Inspector C. S. Stapleton.

The report on contagious diseases showed six cases of smallpox, all of mild type, one case of measles, and one of chicken-pox.

The question of the pollution of water around Lake Street Bathing Beach was raised by the Sanitary Inspector, who asserted that the water was unfit to be used by bathers. The chairman and Dr. Young were asked to investigate the matter and to bring in a report.

The purchase of a gate and a new fence for the Isolation Hospital was agreed upon. The chairman intimated that 46 tons of coal had been purchased for the institution at spring prices. It was decided to instruct J. Shaughnessy to remove the boiler house in connection with his slaughter house to a more suitable position, to be designated by the Sanitary Inspector, the work to be completed by September 20.

Two applications were granted for installation of sanitary conveniences and connection with the sewage system.

It was also agreed to send a notice to a resident of East City with instructions to have sanitary conveniences installed and connections made with the sewage system.

PAUL SMITHS, N.Y., Aug. 17.—(Canadian Press).—While the petition of the Knights of Columbus, asking that the United States intervene in Mexico to protect Roman Catholic churchmen in their religious dispute with President Calles was not referred to directly, it was reiterated to-day at the summer executive offices in behalf of President Coolidge that the Washington Government has no authority under diplomatic usage, international law, or treaty rights to interfere in the purely domestic affairs of Mexico.

Whenever the rights of United States' citizens in person or property have been infringed, it was added ,the United States' government will do what it can to see that these rights are duly respected.

SEARCHING SMITH TOWNSHIP FOR AGED FARMER JOHN TIGHE, NOT SEEN SINCE YESTERDAY

SEEN ONLY ONCE.

Neighbor Thinks He Saw Man Standing in Lane Yesterday.

John Tighe, 81, disappeared from the residence of his son Howard on the 5th Line of Smith yesterday morning and has not been seen since, despite the fact that numerous neighbors and friends have been searching the surrounding countryside in an attempt to locate the unfortunate man. County Constable Frank Pratt visited the farm this morning, and on hearing the particulars, organized several parties, giving them instructions, he himself leaving for the village of Bridgenorth to sift out a rumor that Mr. Tighe had been seen in that neighborhood. He learned that a man answering to the description furnished to him had been seen in the neighborhood of B. McManus' farm about noon yesterday, but since that no person has apparently seen him.

Took Customary Walk.

Howard Tighe, a son of the missing man, and who lives on the family homestead, told The Examiner that his father got up yesterday morning and, as was his usual custom, had some breakfast and then went back to bed. After resting a while he went out for his customary walk and was last seen around the house about 10.30 a.m.

At noon there was no sign of his father, he said, but no alarm was felt by him, as he thought he might have called on some neighbors. However, when supper time arrived and no word had been received, he began to feel anxious, and after calling on some friends to ascertain if his father had visited them, and on learning that he had not, the son got in touch with County Constable Pratt. His father, he said, was wearing black overalls, a brownish grey sweater and a cap when he left the house. He was about six feet in height and had heavy grey hair and whiskers. He was also of a very nervous disposition, he said, and was inclined to shake quite visibly at times.

B. McManus, a farmer living on the Chemong Road adjacent to the Patte and Wolff fox farm, told The Examiner that he knew the missing man quite well. About noon yesterday, he said, he saw a man who looked like Mr. Tighe, but was uncertain as he was some considerable distance away. The man was gazing around and stood in the same spot for some time, and then went off in the direction of the road. Mr. McManus said that he thought nothing more in connection with the incident, as it is quite a common occurrence for people to come up the laneway as it is also the entrance to the fox farm.

The Rev. W. Tighe of Ottawa, another son of the missing man, left the homestead yesterday morning to return to that city after spending a holiday at his home, and the father was around the house at that time.

The missing man was well-known

SEEK OFFENCE IN COFFIN HOAX

London Papers Wonder If Frank Power Can Be Punished.

NO EXPLANATION.

LONDON, Aug. 17 (Canadian Press).—British newspapers today were raising the question whether any legal penalty could be imposed in connection with the discovery that the coffin delivered at Waterloo Station and alleged to contain the body of Lord Kitchener was empty.

Some of the papers say that the police and Home Office officials are studying the affair to determine if anything punishable has been done. Frank Power, who was responsible for the story that Kitchener's body was picked up off the Norway coast, has given no explanation regarding the empty coffin.

The Star today quotes Frank Power, British newspaperman, as denying that he hoaxed anybody with reference to the packing case alleged to contain the body of the late Lord Kitchener, which was found empty yesterday.

That some one tampered with the "Kitchener casket" was intimated by Power in an interview attributed to him by The Star The paper quotes Power as saying concerning the empty shell inside the casket: "It obviously cannot be the shell which contained the body and which I placed in the coffin in Norway."

RECOVERY OF BODY WAS DIFFICULT JOB

Dr. Young and County Constable Pratt Perform Gruesome Duty.

Considerable difficulty attended the labors of Dr. T. W. H. Young and County Constable Frank Pratt in their successful effort last Saturday to recover the body of G. H. Rodgers, who was drowned with A. Winslow and two dogs on November 14 of last year. Winslow's body was found in May of the present year.

Late on Friday night, Wesley Rodgers, uncle of the drowned man, telephoned Peterborough from Clarina, informing the authorities that a body which was believed to be that of his dead nephew had been seen floating in Coshamogabag Lake.

Early on Saturday the constable and the doctor set out for Clarina. From there they took a small Ford truck and a rough box and they made a fifteen mile journey across a broken, rocky country to the lake. Then they floated the rough box across the lake. The body was in a terrible condition, with much of the ears and limbs eaten away and with the teeth fallen from the gums and lying in the mouth of the dead man.

After the body had been identified, chiefly by means of the clothing, by Wesley Rodgers, who was the last to see his nephew alive, it was put into the rough box and towed back to the car in which it was conveyed over the very trying roads to Clarina, where the Coroner gave a certificate for burial. The corpse was interred in Norwood Cemetery last Sunday.

MAN IS KICKED BY FARM HORSE

Loyola Flynn is Knocked Unconscious by Blow in Stomach.

NARROW ESCAPE

KING'S WHARF, Aug. 17.—Mr. Lyola Flynn met with a serious accident on Saturday morning and very luckily escaped being killed when he was kicked by a horse. He was watering a bunch of horses when they all started kicking. Mr. Flynn tried to part them when one of them kicked him in the stomach. He was unconscious for two hours and medical aid was at once summoned and every thing possible done. It was thought at first to be serious but he is resting nicely now and hopes to be around again in a few days. He thinks he had a very narrow escape.

The recent occasional rains were a benefit to the gardens and buckwheat. There are some wonderful fields of buckwheat through here. There is very little alsike and the weather is very unfavorable for saving it. Fall wheat in general is not so good as last year but Mr. W. C. Herlihey has a field and by the look of it and the way it handles he expects it will yield 40 bushels to the acre.

The apple crop promises to be good but in a few places the high wind blew them off.

Raspberries are a good crop here and are selling for $1.50 a pail. The crops in general lok splendid.

ONE chord struck upon a Heintzman & Company instrument will reveal the remarkable tonal quality that has gained for our pianos their enviable reputation.

If you admit a lack of that musician-like appreciation that would enable you to distinguish between the true and the false in tone, rely upon the judgment of famous musicians such as Melba, Tetrazzini, De Pachmann and Hambourg. Worthy of their high approbation, it must be worthy of a place in your home.

DECORATION DAY HELD AT MILLBROOK

I.O.O.F., No. 308, Decorate Graves of Fallen Heroes on Sunday.

MILLBROOK, Aug. 17.—The annual Decoration Day Service, under the auspices of Millbrook Lodge, I.O.O.F., No. 308, took place on Sunday, August 15, the brethren with a number of representatives of Golden Sheaf Rebekah Lodge, No. 176, gathering at the Lodge rooms at 1 p.m.

Headed by the Citizens Band, under the leadership of G. A. Duncan, members of the Lodge paraded first to the Soldiers Cenotaph in the town hall square, where a service was held, Brother R. I. Fallis, N.G. being in charge. Brother Vernon R. Hunter, P.G., acted as chaplain, Brother A. J. Henderson, P.G., spoke briefly, and Brother Bruce Elliott placed a handsome sheaf of flowers on the base of the memorial in loving rememberance of his brother, Bert Elliott, and on behalf of the local Lodge, thus honoring the memory of one of its members who paid the supreme sacrifice on November 13, 1917.

The Presbyterian cemetery was the next objective, a number of cars conveying the members of the Rebekah Lodge to this point where many interested friends and onlookers had previously gathered for the service.

The order of the Decoration Ceremony was:

Selection, "What a Friend We Have in Jesus," by the Band.

Hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee," the Band leading the singing.

Opening address, by the Noble Grand, Brother Reg. I. Fallis.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Brother V. R. Hunter, P.G.

Reading of the names of departed Brethren, by Brother H. R. Armstrong, P.G.

Address by Rev. Thomas Dodds, of Islington, from the text, II Samuel 1:23: 'Saul and Jonathan were lovely and pleasant in their lives and in death they were not divided." Mr. Dodds emphasized the value and lasting qualities of friendship, and of the other two virtues, love and truth, which make up the three links of Oddfellowship, and urged cultivating the friendship of Jesus of whom Thomas A. Kempis says: "Brother, make a friend of Jesus, who when all else shall fail, will never leave you, nor suffer you to perish in the end."

The Master offers an understanding and ready sympathy to those who sorrow for loved ones gone before because He once stood by an open grave, and it was there that He gave a message of hope, promising a life beyond these scenes of time the believer on the Saviour passing into the Father's presence there to abide in joy forever more. "In thy presence is fulness of joy and at Thy right hand are pleasures forever more."

While the band rendered another selection the committee in charge, Brother H. R. Armstrong, P.G., convener, decorated the graves of the brethren interred in the Presbyterian cemetery.

A closing address by the Noble Grand, the singing of "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," and a final prayer by the chaplain, concluded the service.

Committees had been previously appointed to visit the diferent cemeteries in the district and place flowers on the graves, those in charge being: Presbyterian, Brother H. R. Armstrong, P.G.; United church cemetery, Bro. H. A. Fallis, P.G.; St. John's and Ninth Line cemeteries, Brother V. R. Hunter, P.G.; Frazerville, Brother E. L. Armstrong, P.G.; Centreville and Bailieboro cemeteries, Brothr J. H. Ibister, P.G.; Fourth Line cemetery (Rebekah Lodge), Sister Irene Fallis, P.N.G.

There have been four new names added to the list of deceased members during the past year: Sister Sarah Bentley, interred at Cherry Valley, near Picton; Sister Eunice Bingham, buried in the Prince Albert cemetery, near Port Perry; Brother J. D. Fair, P.G., laid to rest in the Presbyterian cemetery; Brother L. Hudson, a member of a Toronto Lodge, whose remains were laid in the Fourth Line cemetery. Brother Walter Green, who is buried in Little Lake cemetery, Peterboro, retained his membership in Millbrook Lodge, No. 308.

The graves decorated on Sunday included:

Presbyterian cemetery—Brothers T. A. Kelly, P.G.; W. S. Given, P.G.; John Hicks, P.G.; R. McMahon, P.G.; William O'Brian; Ed. Kerr.

United church cemetry—Brothers W. W. Gillott, John Bateson, Harry Dunford, P.G., Robert Follis, Edward Richardson.

St. John's cemetery— Brothers Thomas Hutchison, John Tinney, H. M. Wood, F. Ritson, B. Van Homreigh, William Leach, P.G.

Ninth Line—Brother Stanley Grandy.

Frazerville—Brother Bert Elliott, Killed in action, November 13, 1917, Brother David Baxter.

Driver Of Booze Hearse Makes Poor Undertaker

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 17.—Two Federal prohibition agents yesterday saw a motor hearse approaching from Melton Road. The hearse was proceeding slowly—almost too slowly—and the driver looked far different from any other hearse driver the agents had ever seen before. For one thing, he was whistling. For another thang, his sleeves were rolled up,exposing an arm tattooed with the face and tresses of a blonde, and his necktie contained a diamond pin. He was smoking a fat cigar and one foot was cocked up on the dashboard of the hearse.

"Whoa," said the agents to the driver, "wait a minute."

But the driver didn't wait. He jumped over the side of the hearse and ran into a field. "Let's look into this matter," the agents said. They opened the back door of the hearse and saw 100 cases of Canadian beer and a big fresh cake of ice.

WEDDING BELLS.

GRAY—HISLOP.

MILLBROOK, Aug. 17.—A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at St. James' Anglican Church, Stratford, on Wednesday, August 11, at high noon, when Eleanor Elizabeth, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hislop, of Stratford, became the bride of Dr. T. W. Alvin Gray, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Wentworth Gray, of Millbrook.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Canon Armstrong, rector of the Church of the Redeemer, Toronto, assisted by Rev. Canon Cluff, rector of St. James' Church, Stratford.

The music was provided by Mr. Norman T. Ives, organist of the church, who played softly throughout the ceremony.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, after which a dainty wedding luncheon was served. Later in the afternoon Dr. and Mrs. Gray left for a short honeymoon, and upon their return will sail from Quebec for England, where they expect to remain for about three months, leaving then for their future home at Haifa, Palestine. Some time ago Dr. Gray volunteered for medical mission work in the Near East, and will be superintendent of the hospital at Haifa, working under the mission board of the Church of England, Canada.

The bride and groom will spend a few days with his parents in Millbrook when en route to England.

A Message to Mothers and Housewives
You are vitally interested in the future of your Sons and Daughters

Do you picture for him the Proprietorship of a Business—a successful Merchant, a Grocer, Butcher, Baker, Confectioner or Druggist—owning his own establishment? Do you see him as a prosperous citizen, active in church, educational and social affairs, supporting the activities of the boys and girls of your community?

And do you picture for her a place as a helpmate to such a worthy citizen?

If you would help your sons and daughters to become an influential part of your community, help keep success in the field of business open to them. Make it possible for them to enjoy, in their own home town, the fruits of their enterprise.

You can do this by supporting the Independent Dealers of your Community. They share your taxes, support your institutions and work hand in hand with you for mutual welfare.

MONDAY'S TRAGEDY.

Community sympathy will go out to the relatives of the victims of yesterday's triple drowning accident, another in the long list of such tragedies that have saddened the present summer.

That three youngsters, two from the same family circle, should meet death together because of childish panic when a shout for help might have saved them is a shock to the citizens of Peterboro.

Out of the sadness and gloom of the tragedy, as out of the darkness of other similar accidents, comes the warning once more of the need of eternal vigilance, of the necessity to be careful always.

Upon parents there is a heavy responsibility, the weight of which increases as changing conditions swell the possibility of accident.

That responsibility is the education of their children to be careful.

It cannot be done by spasmodic warnings.

No opportunity of impressing upon youthful minds the danger that lurks on the city street, the peril that lies in wait in river or lake should be lost.

The menace of the water has always been with us; the motor car threat is a modern development that requires persistent and consistent propaganda to combat it, and the home is the place for such propaganda to be used effectively.

WEDNESDAY'S VISITORS.

Merchants are being asked to co-operate with the local Kiwanis Club in creating a favourable impression of Peterboro among the 200 Kiwanians from all parts of Eastern Ontario who will attend the inter-city meeting and picnic here tomorrow.

This co-operation, so far as the city's business establishments are concerned, can best be effected by decorating the business streets with flags, the G. W. V. A. plan making this possible with a minimum of trouble.

Kiwanians are representative citizens of their various communities, and Peterboro would benefit by their taking home a favourable report of what they see during their visit to this city.

First impressions are often lasting, and the sight of flag-adorned streets greeting tomorrow's visitors as they arrive in Peterboro will dwell in their memory long after they have returned to their homes.

And looking at the matter from another angle, the Kiwanis Club has done so much for this community in various ways that this opportunity to reciprocate should not be allowed to go by default.

Let the visiting Kiwanians see that Peterboro is a lively city with a lively appreciation of what Kiwanis has accomplished here.

WHERE DO THEY EXPECT TO GET?

The campaign announced by the Anti-Cigarette League of the United States "to stamp out the use of tobacco in any form" is the kind of foolishness from which sincere and thoughtful friends of prohibition might well pray that their cause be saved.

To attempt to force further restrictions upon the people of the United States when the prohibition of liquor is under trial would be to utterly destroy any chance of educating the public to the value of attempting to throttle the liquor traffic.

Everything depends upon such education.

Prohibitive measures introduced before public opinion has been prepared to receive them offer scant hope of success.

How in the name of common sense, when millions of people across the border are resentful over what they regard as the curtailment of their personal liberty by prohibitory laws against the sale of liquor, can anybody expect the slightest chance to cultivate public favour for a prohibitory law against the use of tobacco?

Those who are behind such a campaign are merely, as a contemporary aptly expresses it, "placing another hurdle in the path of their prohibitionist brethren without any hope of getting anywhere themselves."

A STONEY LAKE MENACE.

From Stoney Lake comes the usual mid-season crop of complaints that regulations in regard to the carrying of lights by power boats are being largely disregarded, and that the practice is inviting accidents.

The chief offenders are the owners of the popular outboard motor type of boat, and it is claimed that the majority of these craft travel Stoney Lake waters at night without even a light showing, while the usual navigation lights are seldom displayed.

It is true these boats are noisy enough to give warning of their approach.

The difficulty is that when two or three of these small power craft are humming in the same neighborhood at the one time occupants of canoes and skiffs are at a loss to know the exact whereabouts of the bigger craft and are in danger of being run down.

Several very narrow escapes have been reported recently, and so flagrant is the disregard of the regulations concerning lights that it is almost miraculous that serious accidents have been averted.

Perhaps most of the offenders do not realize the peril in which they are placing other people.

Possibly many of them are ignorant of the regulations in regard to lights.

Their attention should be called to the law by those responsible for its enforcement before an accident places tragic emphasis on this warning.

SELECTING CANDIDATES.

Canadians have at the present time a good opportunity of comparing the system of selecting political candidates by means of conventions composed of delegates elected from all parts of the riding, with the costly and cumbrous system of the primaries which exists in the United States. Excepting for a few charges of packed conventions made by disappointed politicians here and there, the Canadian system of nomination and voting in conventions is generally considered satisfactory. Not so the primary system in the United States. It is openly charged that it is a method that, by reason of the huge expenses involved, puts the nominations in the hands of wealthy and powerful interests.

The recent investigations into the Illinois primary election showed, after two days' inquiry, that expenditures of more than $800,000 had been made. Compared with the nearly $3,000,000 spent in Pennsylvania's three-cornered fight, this is not staggering. The $500,000 used in a vain effort to re-nominate Senator McKinley does not seem large when set against the $1,800,000 used in an equally vain effort to re-name Senator Pepper.

Senator McKinley's own personal contribution of $350,000 to his own cause sets a new record for candidates. That other Illinois candidate, Samuel Insull, sets a new mark by having spread his money through at least three camps and for not less than four causes. His admitted $183,000, however, far from matches the $300,000 tossed by Joseph Grundy into the Pennsylvania struggle.

It is expected that these revelations will hasten the end of the primary system. What happened in Pennsylvania and Illinois happens in a greater or less degree in every State where wealthy men are candidates, and where powerful interests are determined to control. It is said that organizers absorbed money by the barrel. There was no proof that votes had been actually bought, but watchers had to be paid. Headquarters, travel, circulars, printing, advertising and other expenses, in which there is nothing actually wrong or illegal, soaked up a golden flood. Both Republicans and Democrats are demanding the abolition of the primary elections as detrimental to the discipline and welfare of party government.—Brantford Expositor.

THRIFT.

(An Editorial for Young People.)

It is said that the good old habit of saving up for the rainy day is passing, and judging from the evidences of extravagance which are to be found on every hand, it would seem that there is considerable truth in the assertion. Pleasure, dress, luxuries of every kind make altogether too heavy demands upon some modest incomes, and the consequence is that life is one round of anxiety. Excitement and "show," which are obtained at the cost of peace of mind, are paid for much too dearly; yet such so-called pleasures are about all some people think about. "When in Rome do as Rome does," so runs the old maxim, and it represents the general tendency of people all over the world. We are all of us imitative, and when we see our neighbors apparently finding it easy to "do the grand," we naturally want to do so ourselves. Are we not just as good as they are? If they can put on airs, so can we. And so it comes about that the present generation is accused, rightly or wrongly, of improvidence, and serious observers are shaking their heads and wondering where it is all going to end.

Let us look upon another and much pleasanter development of modern life, however. If the grown-ups are reckless in the way they get rid of their money, young people cannot always be charged with the same offense, if school bank accounts are to be taken as a reliable indication. Here we have proof that parents—these school savings come, of course, from parents, for the most part—are not unmindful of the benefits of thrift to their children. Their own personal example may not always be entirely good, but they know that there is only one way to accumulate money, and that is by saving it. Wages are better today than they used to be, and it is possible to spend more and still save in proportion. It may be that the critics are judging too much from appearances, and appearances, we know, can be very deceptive. However that may be, there is one thing absolutely sure. The exercise of thrift will bring happiness and prosperity, while extravagance is bound to bring the opposite. Thrift does not mean miserliness, but the systematic putting away of a proportion—however small—of one's income. Before the earning age savings are necessarily limited; but the habit, once acquired, stays through life. That is the whole secret of prosperity—to acquire the saving habit early enough. It is an unfailing recipe for success. Take no notice of those who would ridicule you out of such a habit. There is nothing to be ashamed of in being careful; but it is a proper subject of pride to be so. —Hamilton Spectator.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The election campaign ends four weeks from today, which may be an intimation to some people that the contest has started.

One redeeming feature of hot weather political meetings is that the speaker usually suffers more than his audience.

What Canada needs for a political campaign in the dog days is a refreshing slogan along the lines of "Keep cool with Coolidge."

The log of the Margaret will never prove a best seller. It utterly fails to live up to its advance notices.

It can at least be claimed for 4.4 beer that anybody after drinking it can still say "constitutional issue" without the least difficulty.

The Peterboro Industrial Exhibition directors are not worrying about the fact that the election takes place during the Exhibition. The political show is but a one-day affair, while the Exhibition lasts all week.

CHICAGO GRAINS

CHICAGO, Aug. 17 (Canadian Press).—Announcement of an unexpectedly big increase of the United States wheat visible supply total did much to pull wheat values downward yesterday. According to Chicago Board of Trade figures, the increase was 10,976,000 bushels over last week's total. Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, 1 3-8 to 1 7-8 net lower with corn 7-8 to 1 7-8 off; oats 1.4 to 3-8 down and provisions showing 7 to 55c decline.

Despite the fact that foreign buying of future deliveries here gave the wheat market considerable initial strength, prices soon began to show an unmistakable downward trend.

Something of a rally toward the last in the wheat market resulted from disclosure that 595,000 bushels of wheat had been disposed of here to reporters since Saturday's close. On the other hand Canadian carry-over of wheat on July 31 was officially reported as 35,655,000 bushels against 26,482,000 bushels a year ago. Further rains both in Canada and the American northwest, however, tended to cause more or less apprehension about delay to harvesting of spring wheat. Besides, European advices told of trans-Atlantic harvest operations being hindered by wet weather.

Corn prices receded owing chiefly to additional rains over the corn belt and on account of reports indicating that old corn in the hands of Illinois and Indiana farmers are of liberal amount.

Oats declined with corn.

STERLING EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, Aug. 17 (Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

Sterling demand $4.84 3-4.

Sterling cables $4.85 3-8.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Aug. 17 (Canadian Press).—The only business reported on the Montreal grain market yesterday for export account was the sale of a few loads of barley, but the volume of business on the whole was small.

Owing to the further weakness in the Chicago market for corn local spot prices for car lots were reduced another cent per bushel with No. 3 yellow offering at 87 1-2c per bushel, ex-store. The tone of the market for Canadian Western oats was steady, but the demand showed no improvement.

In sympathy with the renewed weakness in the Winnipeg cash wheat situation, the tone of the local market for spring wheat grades of flour was weaker and millers generally reduced prices 20 cents per barrel, which makes a total reduction of 40 cents per barrel this month to date, and now they are 60 cents per barrel below a year ago.

The undertone to the winter wheat flour situation was steady owing to the small supplies available on spot and the continued light offerings from Ontario millers.

A fair amount of business was worked in millfeed and prices were unchanged. Business in standard grades of rolled oats was small but the feeling was steady.

Prices for all grades of eggs were firmly maintained under a fair enquiry. The receipts were 1,688 cases.

The demand for butter was limited and the volume of business was small. The undertone to the market was firm. The receipts were 2,077 packages.

Extreme dullness marked the cheese trade, but values were steady. The receipts were 8.025 boxes.

The tone of the market for beans was steady under an improved demand and a moderate amount of business was done with sales of car lots of choice white hand-picked at $2.25 per bushel, and smaller quantities at $2.35 to $2.45 per bushel.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

HENRY FORD ON COST OF IDLENESS.

The world's biggest problems could be solved tomorrow if the nations could be set to work. For four years of feverish "war work" the world is now paying the price of the most colossal idleness it has ever witnessed. Leagues and treaties, council and courts have not turned any wheels of industry, have not led the people to their sources of wealth. The greatest hero that could arise in Europe today would be the man who could lead the people to work, for out of land and labor come peace and prosperity. Honest work is the truest pacifist, because it is also armed with potential strength against those who would destroy its peace.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

(By C. N. Lurie.)

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

"ALL" OR "ALL OF"

According to some of the best authorities on the use of English we should not use the expression, "all of," as in the sentences, "I saw all of them," "all of the boys were there," etc.

Omit the word "of:" say, in the sentences quoted, "I saw them all," "All the boys were there."

Dr. Fernald, in "Better Say," writes: "'He drank all of it.' 'Better say, 'He drank it all.' 'All of' is a popular idiom to emphasize the totality of that which is referred to; as 'How many of those men did you see?' 'I saw all of them.' 'How much of this shall I take?' 'All (that is, the whole) of it.' But the best literary usage omits the 'of' as needless, preferring 'I saw them all,' 'Take it all,' etc."

WHAT YOU DON'T KNOW

By Dr. Frank Crane

John S. Ford in "A Literary Workshop," says:

"There should be a university for the elderly, with an elective course for those old enough to know what they do not know and wise enough to know what they ought to know."

The rarest thing in the world is to find a man who knows what he does not know, or, rather, to draw the line sharply between what he knows and does—not know.

Perhaps this is the truest test of wisdom.

The trouble with most of us is that we think we know a lot of things that are merely suppositions. The man who does not know a thing, who knows that he does not know it, and who does not pretend to know it, is a rare bird.

A true scientist is known by the quickness with which he says, "I don't know."

The man with the fumbling mind, the average man, accepts a lot of things as facts which have not been proved.

Of course there are often a number of things that nobody can know and quite a number of things that anybody can know. It is in the borderland between these two points that confusion lies. From that borderland come most of our prejudices and ignorance and our stupid intolerance.

Much that is called faith is due to assuming the truth of things that cannot be known. It is much better to call our ideas about things mere opinions and not knowledge.

Science is constantly making inroads into the realm of the unknown, ever bringing unknown things into the region of the known. But there will always exist a vast sea of the unknown that cannot be reduced to exact information.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

All letters must be signed by the writer, and must bear his address. A pen-name may be used for publication except in letters on political subjects, which must bear the writer's name for publication.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—When Mr. Meighen astonished all Canada by declaring at Hamilton and then following it up in other places that Canada would take part in no more wars for the Empire until the question of doing so had been referred to the people in an election, he made a most serious blunder. First of all, his declaration means that the Empire may be in the deadliest peril, but so far as Canada is concerned, we do not yet know what we shall do about it. What would we think of a Canadian who said he would not fight in defence of Canada? Yet that is what Mr. Meighen says of the Conservative party in its relation to the Empire. Surely he is not representing loyal Canadians in making such a statement. Is it any wonder that the British people and its government remarked, "Well, if Canada does not wish to take part hereafter in the defence of the Empire, we can get along without her." I do not often blush, but I blushed for very shame at such a statement. But you will ask, "What is the Liberal policy in that regard?" It is stated by the Hon. C. A. Dunning, Mr. King's Minister of Railways and Canals, at Pembroke, August 9. He says:

"We will fight for the Empire, not because some one makes us, but because we want to. Loyalty must be based upon love for what we are to be loyal to. We must love to be loyal. Compulsion or force is foreign to loyalty. We must be bound by the invisible bonds of loyalty."

There is no selling Canada and the Empire for a few votes there. Just think what it would mean if Mr. Meighen were elected and a fearful war such as predicted by Field-Marshal Foch should break out. Have we lost our nerve? Will we too sell out the British Empire for a few votes? If Mr. Meighen wants to refer the question to the people at an election, why not at this election? I doubt if such a thing has ever happened in any country worth the name in the whole world ever before. Who would vote in support of such a policy? Is it any wonder that the Most Worshipful Master of the Grand Black Chapter of British North America repudiated Mr. Meighen's statement. The Worshipful Master said at the meeting of the Grand Lodge at Ottawa on June 22: "I now register vigorous dissent from the policy proposed by the Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, M.P., leader of the Liberal-Conservative party, in a speech delivered at Hamilton on November 19, 1925, and later repeated at other points, to the effect that in the event of the Empire becoming involved in any future war, it would be best not only that Parliament should be called but that the decision of the Government, which of course would have to be given promptly, should be submitted to the judgment of the people at a general election before troops should leave our shores." Like the referendum on Federal prohibition, I suppose which you will remember never came to and end. Nor in any reference to the question since has Mr. Meighen made the slightest change in his war policy. Rather has he emphasized it. He will find that he cannot sacrifice Canada to his petty ambition. Many Conservatives in this riding agree with me that it is utterly impossible to support Mr. Meighen under such conditions. At first I had hoped that Mr. Meighen would, when the campaign got under way, and he was faced with the necessity, repudiate any suggestion of deserting the Empire on the possibility of it at any time, but he did not. I fully expected that Mr. Peck would reject such a policy, and I was prepared to support him. But not a word for the Empire from Mr. Peck. He endorses Mr. Meighen's "war" policy. As I have now to make a choice between Mr. Meighen and the Empire and my King an my country, I do so. I need no election to setttle my views on that point.

HOPE FOR RELIEF FROM CONGRESS

Have Forlorn Hope That Government Will Enact Milder Regulations.

MEXICO CITY QUIET.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 17 (Canadian Press). — While the religious situation continues apparently without change, the depression caused by the economic boycott appears to be increasing. Some continue to cling to what seems a forlorn hope that Congress, which convenes on September 1, may enact milder religious regulations. But Congress is impotent unless President Calles approves its acts.

Congress is expected to do as the President desires; hence, unless Senor Calles himself yields in his religious stand, or loses political power, neither of which is indicated at present, Congressional relief can hardly be looked for.

Since the clash Sunday, at the suburb of San Angel between Catholics assembled at the Church of San Jancinto, and the police in which several persons were slightly injured, there have been no incidents around Mexico City.

Belated despatches from Saltillo say that on Thursday Catholic women assembled in front of the Cathedral jeered a passing parade of workmen and others supporting the Calles policy. Sharp words were exchanged and the paraders rushed into the church, driving the women before them. Soldiers finally arrived and restored order.

INVESTIGATION PROVES THAT STORY OF THE FINDING OF BODY OF KITCHENER WAS ONLY A HOAX

British Newspaperman Responsible for the Tale—Has Since Disappeared.

HAD ASSUMED NAME.

Home Office States the Coffin Had Never Contained a Body.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—(Canadian Press.)—The British nation yesterday found itself the victim of a hoax of a particularly unpleasant character, when the investigation of the Home Office revealed yesterday that the coffin brought from Norway to the accompaniment of much newspaper publicity and purporting to contain the body of the late British Field Marshal, Lord Kitchener, was empty.

Frank Power, a British newspaperman, was responsible for the story that he found Kitchener's body in Norway, which he brought to London and delivered at the Waterloo Station. Officials from the Home Office and Coroner Oddie were present when the case was opened this morning, with great secrecy and shortly afterwards, the Home Office issued the following statement:

"The packing case, alleged to contain a coffin and human body which on Saturday night was removed by the police from an undertakers' on Waterloo Road, to the Lambeth Coroner's Court, was yesterday morning opened in the presence of Coroner Ingleby Oddie and Sir Bernard Spitsbury (noted pathologist). The packing case was found to contain an empty coffin. The coffin was new and obviously had not contained a human body."

The government recently made public a detailed statement which had convinced a majority of the people of the groundlessness of many of the published Kitchener myths. But such myths die hard, and many persons still entertained doubts respecting the fate of the National Hero. These doubts should finally be set at rest after yesterday's revelations.

In the meantime, the police are looking for Frank Power, originator of the hoax, who seems, for the time being at any rate, to have disappeared.

Powers' real name is declared to be Arthur Vectis Freman, and he is said to have been a student of criminology. He has already admitted, in his last press statement Sunday, that although he began in a bonafide spirit, his investigation into the sinking of the H. M. S. Hampshire, on which Kitchener was voyaging when he perished, he had later accepted an offer from a moving picture promoter, with a view to recouping himself for the heavy expenses of his investigation.

What view the authorities will take of the affair is not known, but Powers' strange activities are the subject of general denunciation by the newspapers.

Not in many a year has England been so shocked and distressed, for the memory of the great soldier is held sacred in every household in the land. Even while the coffin was resting in the mortuary, surrounded by sacred emblems and treated with all respect, some of the newspapers attacked Power's action.

The Daily Mail declared: "It is a ghoulish act thus to exploit the fame of one of the greatest of England's soldiers," and the Morning Post said: "It is repugnant to decent feeling that the disinterred coffined remains of the dead should be carried about here and there at a private person's caprice and without any sanction of authority. The dead were without note the offence would be rank."

Apparently nobody dreamed of the contingency that the coffin would, as the Home Office states, be absolutely empty.

Leading members of the Kitchener family, when questioned, said: according to the Westminster Gazette, that they desired to make no comment on the affair. The paper adds: "Scotland Yard does not intend to pursue the matter further."

INQUEST INTO DERHAM MURDER REMAINS SECRET

Coroner's Jury Adjourns After Brief Testimony Is Submitted.

TILL AUG. 30th.

Victim's Father Refuses To Divulge Son's Death Statement.

WHITSTABLE, Eng., Aug. 17. — (Canadian Press). — The detailed story of the killing of John Adams Derham, with which Alphonse Francis Austin Smith is charged, will remain a secret untill August 30. The coroner's inquest into the tragedy which took place at the Smith residence, Stella Maris villa, Friday night, was adjourned after a brief testimony was submitted yesterday.

Derham's aged father brought an abrupt end to the hearing by declining to divulge his son's alleged death statement. The coroner did not press for answers, saying he would wait until both sides were represented by counsel, and the crowds filed out into the crooked littlle Whitstable main street with the Smith-Derham case as much a mystery as ever.

Mrs. Smith, who is reputed to have been the cause of the quarrel between her husband and Derham arrived at the inquest with the elder Derham. She appeared very young She is Smith's second wife, they having been married after his first wife, formerly Miss Futh Wynne, daughter of a former United States postmaster general, divorced him. Jealousy over Derham's attentions to her is belivede to have led to a fight between Smith and Derham after the three had supped together at a hotel and returned to the Smith residence

Mrs. Smith was dressed in black and wore a black toque and scarf She conversed with the elder Derham most of the time and left the parish hall in his company.

No reference was made to Smith's first wife or to his antecedents during the proceedings. He said his parents were at present living in Vancouver, B. C. Prominent London lawyers have been retained for his defense.

Although Smith is credited with once having an income of $750, 00 a year, he had recently been in somewhat straightened circumstances, and the house where he and his family lived and where the tragedy occured is a most unpretentious "middle-class" villa.

It appears that he got an occasional financial windfall, and it was in celebration of one of these that the Smith's and Derham had a dinner party, which was followed by the killing.

After the last general elections (October 29, 1925) the Conservative strength was 116, the other parties as shown above. Four Liberal seats were rendered vacant, one through death and three by resignation. Subsequent by-elections returned Liberals so that party standing was unchanged.

Don't think your teeth are naturally off color and dull. You can restore them to amazing whiteness in a new way leading dentists advise.

Run your tongue across your teeth and you will feel a film. A slippery coating that covers them, hides their color and invites tooth and gum troubles. Ordinary pastes and dentifrices will not successfully remove it.

That is why, in old days, so many smiles were ruined by ugly teeth and toneless gums. Now, thanks to modern science, there is a way to combat that film.

Just obtain a tube of the dentifrice called Pepsodent at your druggist's. Clear off that film tonight; clear white teeth are beautiful. Note the amazing difference in your smile.

Marvelube MOTOR OIL

Conquers the Highways of the Air

PILOT ROBERT PEEL, Border Cities, Ont.

A Striking Tribute to Marvelube Quality

In commercial aviation, the proper lubrication of the motor assumes vital importance. Success—even life itself—often depends on the quality of the oil in the engine, for a stalled or faulty motor is too often fatal.

In selecting Marvelube Motor Oil as a lubricant for his aeroplane motor, Pilot Robert Peel, commercial flyer and veteran of seven years in the R.A.F. and U.S. Air Service, did so because indisputable tests convinced him of its absolute superiority.

His letter, reproduced here, sums up his final opinion of Marvelube after testing it for 100 hours (7,200 miles) in the air.

Border Cities, Ont.
July 12, 1926.

Imperial Oil Limited,
56 Church Street,
Toronto, Ontario.

Gentlemen:

After using your Marvelube Oil Extra Heavy in our aeroplane I would like to tell what a difference there is in running motors using Marvelube Oil.

I am running a water-cooled, eight cylinder, V. type, 90 H.P. Curtis engine, which turns up 1,600 R.P.M.

Since using your Marvelube Extra Heavy have flown over 90 flights, approximately 100 hours, averaging between 72 and 75 miles per hour.

After flying with Marvelube Oil Extra Heavy my observation has been that the motor only makes half the noise and turns up much faster. The motor gets away immediately, does not gum up in bearings and cause friction and carbon when starting.

I say this oil is free from carbon and can prove it to any one who will come to our field and see the motor stop after a flight. If there is carbon in a hot motor, the motor will not stop when the switch is shut off. The motor will give a few explosions, perhaps in a backward direction, which is very hard on bearings and crankshaft. After using Marvelube have noticed that the motor will stop directly when switch is turned off, which is saying a lot for this oil in a hot motor.

Many spectators have remarked, since we made the change to Marvelube Oil Extra Heavy, that we must have repaired our motor because it does not throw oil.

You see the rings in an aeroplane motor can not be as tight as in a car, so if your oil has not got a body to it there is sure to be oil burning in the exhaust pipe which throws out smoke.

While using your Marvelube Extra Heavy the water temperature has never risen above 72° Centigrade and the motor meter on radiator has never risen above the white line.

Have flown as long as fifty hours without changing oil, and after fifty hours flight I took your Marvelube Extra Heavy out of the aeroplane crank case and it looked so good that it seemed a shame to throw it away, so put it in my Dort Six car, 1922 model, and have used it ever since. The car operates very smoothly, my oil gauge staying at six pounds pressure.

Your Marvelube Oil seems to have all of the necessary characteristics to properly lubricate an aeroplane engine and am writing this letter to you in the hope that my experience may be of value to other aeroplane or motor car users.

Yours truly,
Pilot Peel.

Good Engineering Practice

All automotive engineers agree that it is important to always have the oil system flushed out with a light grade of oil (not coal oil) before refilling your engine with fresh oil—and also to avoid speeding up your engine for the first few minutes after the new oil is put in.

Another important point is to always secure the exact grade of Marvelube that is specially recommended for your particular car. Our Chart of Recommendations should be your guide. There are six grades, one for every make and model of automobile.

BELGIANS WANT BIGGER SHARE OF PRODUCTION

Hold Up Signing of Agreement For European Iron Trust.

AN INTERRUPTION.

German and French Iron Masters Confident of Settling Question.

PARIS, Aug. 17.—A serious hitch has halted the negotiations for a European iron trust at the moment when the agreement was said to be on the point of being signed by delegates from France, Germany, Belgium and Luxembourg. According to some reports, the negotiations have even been broken off entirely and the German delegates have left Paris. The reason given is Belgian dissatisfaction with the proportion of production allotted to her.

From an official source, however, the correspondent learns that negotiations are only interrupted and almost certainly will be resumed within a short time.

The seriousness of the trouble is admitted, as well as Belgium's discontent and refusal to accept the conditions offered, which the Belgium iron masters consider utterly unsatisfactory in view of Belgium's iron capacity.

The French delegates say they hope, nevertheless, to come to an understanding with Belgium before long. They declare they never expected complete organization of the trust before the middle of September and they still think it possible to conciliate this differing of interests by that date. The darkest secrecy is being maintained concerning the details of the trust.

Germans Confident.

BERLIN, Aug. 17. — Industrial circles here were confident that the great pig iron combine now being negotiated between German, French and Belgian iron and steel magnates is on the eve of being realized. According to reliable information in both Berlin and Essen—the latter is the centre of the German industry —the only question still unsettled is the quota of the Belgian manufacturers and the sales prices, on which there is a disagreement with Germany. All the differences between Germany and France are said to have been settled.

According to my informant the combine provides, first, that Germany, France and Belgium shall not compete with each other in the sale of pig iron in their respective domestic markets. Luxemburg and Lorraine, however, in view of their connection with Germany before the war, have been given a quota of the German pig iron business—Luxemburg two and three-quarters per cent., and Lorraine three and three-quarters per cent.

In order to stabilize the pig iron industry each country has been given a quota reported to be based on its national production of pig iron for the first quarter of the present year. It is understood that representatives of each national group in the combine will meet monthly to discuss the question of revising the quota from time to time.

In connection with the production quota a financial pool will be established. Into this pool each producer of pig iron will pay one dollar per ton for pig iron produced up to the limit of his quota and four dollars per ton for each additional ton. Then producers who do not turn out the tonnage allowed them will be paid from this pool four dollars per ton for each ton they are short of their quota.

There is also to be a price fixing agreement covering the domestic markets of members of the combine. So far the arrangements do not include any agreement regarding foreign marketing of pig iron, but technical observers here believe that if the combine works successfully that will be its logical and inevitable development.

The great firm of the Krupps is not a member of the combine but as it produces and itself consumes practically all the pig iron passing through its hands, its abstention is not considered likely to affect the working of the International Trust. In addition it is understood the Krupps have agreed not to take any competitive action against members of the combine.

Some American technical observers here believe the successful operation of the trust will force American iron and steel interests to seek an agreement with the European manufacturers and that Great Britain will be brought into the agreement also.

CHINESE CANCEL RENEWAL OF TRADE TREATIES

Pact With Belgium, Which Expires Oct. 29, Is Abrogated.

NEW ONE OFFERED.

No Extra Territoriality Allowed and Customs Equality Required.

GENEVA, Aug. 17.—China, following up the threat made by Chao Hain Chu, her Minister to Rome, who is representing her at Geneva, has taken the first step to carry out his denunciation of unequal customs and tearing up of extra-territorial treaties despite the heaviest pressure the big powers have been able to bring to bear.

It is learned that the special treaty committee has officially notified Belgium that abrogation of her commercial treaties and extra-territorial rights will be effective October 29. Spanish and Portuguese treaties will be the next to go, and British, French, Dutch, Italian and American pacts will follow as the date for extension arrives.

Furthermore, China will offer Belgium an opportunity to sign a commercial treaty similar to the model document negotiated with Austria, which recognizes absolute customs, equality and tariff reciprocity. If Belgium refuses to sign a treaty—and Great Britain is known to be exerting pressure upon Brussels not to enter any treaty negotiations except in conjunction with the other powers—China will initiate a trade boycott against Belgium's lucrative glass, railroad equipment and iron trade, the same as against the British and Japanese.

On the other hand, if Belgium will accept commercial treaties and the abrogation of her extra territorial rights, as has been done by Germany, Austria, Persia and Finland, then the Chinese will extend most favored nation privileges to Brussels pending revision or denunciation of the remaining unequal treaties.

Will Register Treaty

Negotiations for favorable commercial treaties with Turkey, Lithuania, Latvia, Hungary and Russia are under way. The Austrian treaty will be registered with the League of Nations in October, three months after the date of ratification, when it becomes effective. It is the model on which future treaties are to be based.

The treaty with Germany is the only one heretofore deposited with the League. It permits China to dictate import duties, but the schedules being maintained are similar to those placed on Japanese, British and American goods to enable the Germans to compete with them successfully.

It is pointed out in League circles that Pekin's action is entirely legal as long as denunciation of the treaties is made within three months before their expiration. Heretofore the powers have succeded in delaying abrogation of treaties until it was too late for the Chinese to do anything about it, thus automatically extending the unequal treaties 10 to 20 years in some cases. The dilatory tactics of the Pekin customs conference, which the Chinese declare is similarly motivated, have been frustrated by this decisive action. All diplomatic agencies in Europe, as well as League circles, have been informed of the Chinese denunciations and future plans.

NEW CAPITAL TO BE DRY CITY

Australian Government Will Permit No Liquor Selling in Canberra.

BORDER TOWN BOOMS.

CANBERRA, Australia, Aug. 17.—(Canadian Press). — Canberra, Anstralia's new capital, is to be dry.

The area of the district set aside for the new Federal capatal covers 900 square miles and the Govrenment supervises all leases and the sale of ground. It w : decided when the reservation was given its boundary lines that no alcoholic drinks should either be manufactured, sold or consumed within the confines of the district.

Owing to the liquor restrictions in the city of Canberra, the town of Queanbeyan, across the border just inside New South Wales, has been experiencing a building boom.

Queanbeyan, about 7 miles from the new capital, has a race course and there has been a great deal of speculation in ground positions for restaurants and saloons. Land in some of the principal thoroughfares was sold as high as £58 per foot at the first auction conducted by the Government.

Presentation Made.

A pleasant social event took place in the Sunday School room of Grace Presbyterian Church on Tuesday evening in honor of Miss Celia Hunter, whose marriage to Mr. G. Martin, of Mount Clemens, Mich., takes place at Mr. S. H. Hunter's summer home, McCracken's Landing, this month.

The pastor, Rev John Riddell, read an appropriate address, and two of the younger girls, Ruth Thorndyke and Vanita Ingram, on behalf of the numerous friends of the bride-to-be, presented her with a handsome mantel clock.

Suitable reply was made by the recipient of the gift, and all joined in singing, "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow." Miss Hunter has been a faithful member of the choir of Grace Church, and has assisted with other organizations, so that her departure means a vacancy which will not be readily filled.

Before the enjoyable gathering was brought to a close those present formed a circle round the guest of honor and sang, "Auld Lang Syne."

Miss Celia and her aunt, Miss Emma Hunter, have left for McCracken's Landing this week.

HAS NEW SCHEME.

Abolition of the two-party system in Canadian politics, curtailment of the power of the Prime Minister to precipitate a dissolution of parliament and the fixing of a stated term of office for a government—three or perhaps five years—were advocated by George G. GOLDEN WEDDING IS CELEBRATED

Mr. and Mrs. Firman Haig Are Guests at Surprise Party.

HAVELOCK, Aug. 17.—A half century ago, Friday, August 13th, 1876, in the village of Brighton, Ontario, the marriage was solemnized of Miss Adelaide Vandell and Mr. Firman Haig.

On Friday, Mr. and Mrs. Haig, who are among the oldest cottagers at Round Lake were taken by surprise when called upon for an afternoon to be spent at "Point Breeze", the summer home of Dr. Russell of Toronto. On their arrival they found about sixty guests awaiting them and everything in readiness for the anniversary of their golden wedding. A dinner was served at six o'clock, the dining room being beautifully decorated in gold as befitted the occasion and this was further carried out in the table decorations of flowers, with the "bride's cake" iced in gold occupying the centre of the table. When the dinner was concluded, Mr. and Mrs. Haig were presented with a purse of gold.

Dr. Morgan and Dr. Russell, both of Toronto spoke of the esteem in which Mr. and Mrs. Haig were held and more especially referred to the many pleasant functions that had taken place during the camping seasons at Round Lake, which were suitably replied to by Mr. and Mrs. Haig.

Games of soft ball were engaged in on the recreation grounds of Dr. Russell which were gayly decorated with pennants and flags. After the darkness came on the guests were entertained by a moving picture show entitled, "Heart in Exile."

Both Mr. and Mrs. Haig are 71 years old there being only two months difference in their age. The husband was born on the second of May 1855 in Haldimand and his wife on the tenth of March 1855 in Cramney.

After their marriage the young couple resided on a farm near Colborne until 1886 in which year they moved to Havelock where Mr. Haig has been employed by the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. as yard foreman for thirty-eight years, receiving his pension about two years ago. In these years he has seen many changes take place in Havelock. He saw the first churches built and the gradual growth and changes that forty years bring to a small village. He has always taken a deep interest in municipal affairs and at present is a member of the village council where he has served several terms in the beginning of his residence here.

Seven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Haig, five of whom are living. One daughter, Mrs. William Page, and two sons, Mr. Benjamin Haig and Mr. Peter Haig, who are C.P.R. engineers, reside in Havelock. Mrs. John Howley of London and Mr. Firman Haig, Jr., of Boston, Mass., are others.

In February 1924 the first break in the family circle of seven occurred when Mr. Elmore Haig of Toronto passed away suddenly at the home of his parents and a few months ago death claimed the youngest of the family, Mrs. Thomas Page.

Members of the family present at the anniversary on Friday were: Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Haig, Dr. and Mrs. Norval and son, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Haig, Misses Norma and Edna Haig, Mr. Blake Haig, Mr. and Mrs. William Page, Miss Adelaide Page and baby Jean Page, Mrs. Firman Haig, Jr., Boston, Mrs. John Howley, Master George Cousins, Miss V. Howley and Miss M. Howley of London, Mr. Thomas Page and baby Mary Page of Havelock.

Those of the family who were unable to be present: Mr. Firman Haig, Boston, and Misses Olive and Doris Haig of Havelock.

Guests from Havelock and vicinity: Mrs. A. Anderson, Mr. L. Anderson, Mr. R. Bonny, Mr. and Mrs. T. Cook, Mrs. Edward Myers, Mr. and Mrs. James McCutcheon, Mr. and Mrs. H. Williams, Miss Minnie Williams, Mrs. Henry Wing, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Wing and family.

Guests from outside points: Dr. and Mrs. Russel, Dr. and Mrs. Morgan, Rev. and Mrs. Aikenhead, Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson, Mr. and Mrs. Maitland, Mrs. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Norris, Miss Louis Russell, Master John Russell, Miss B. Russell, Mr. Walter Norris, Miss Eva Harrison and Mrs. Carter of Toronto; Mrs. Brodie of Winnipeg; Mrs. Jamieson of Montreal; Mr. and Mrs. Fairman of Trenton.

Mr. and Mrs. Haig have many warm friends who join in good wishes for many more years of wedded felicity.

Sixty Years of Service to Canada and Canadians

From a pinch of living insignificance springs that exultant shout of glory which men call a maple tree. From the brain of Robert McLaughlin, a farm lad whittling axe helves for his neighbors, sprang Canada's greatest automotive industry, General Motors of Canada.

A Canadian institution, founded by a Canadian, staffed by Canadians, employing Canadian workmen and using Canadian materials, General Motors of Canada has been for sixty years a paramount factor in the Dominion's prosperity and progress.

It sells to Canadians through Canadian dealers and, in addition, distributes Canadian-built cars wherever the flag of Britain flies.

It uses lumber from Canadian forests and steel made in Canadian mills from Canadian ore, smelted by Canadian foundrymen. It purchases from Canadian sources vast quantities of brass and copper, of wire and glass, of nickel and fabrics, oils, paints and Duco finishes—and all that heterogeneous mass of materials which enter into the making of a modern automobile—and which have entered into the building of a total of more than 325,000 General Motors of Canada cars and trucks.

Building cars to suit every purse and purpose, to meet every need and condition of Canadian life and travel, General Motors of Canada is one of the great institutions that is acquiring for Canada a higher and yet higher place at the world's council table.

Now at the height of its sixty years of service to the Dominion, it is helping to make Canada an even greater Canada for Canadians.

SOCIAL AT ZION IS GREAT SUCCESS

Annual Garden Party in Simpson's Grove is Well Attended.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, Aug. 17.—The annual garden party of the Zion United church, held in Mr. John Simpson's grove on Thursday evening last, was a decided success. Although the attendance was a little smaller than some years, probably duet o the fact that two socials had already been held during the week, a total of $352 was realized.

All the booths did a flourishing business and were readily sold out. The Zion ladies lived up to their justly famous name for splendid cooking, and with the aid of some new tables and equipment were able to serve the crowd in first class style.

Musical entertainment for the evening was supplied by the Northumberland Regiment Band. Their excellent rendering of a number of old-time melodies at the close of the programme was especially acceptable to the crowd. It is needless to say that everyone present thoroughly enjoyed the evening's entertainment, a good deal of enjoyment being derived from the comfortable surroundings. Simpson's grove is a great natural beauty spot and is an ideal location for the garden party which is held there every year. The glorious pines overhead and the pine needles under foot make those within almost disregard any freaks of the weatherman.

Before the social a soft ball game was played on the adjoining school grounds between English Line and Petherick's. The latter were victorious by a score of 17 to 11. The lasted only four innings as some of the visiting team were late in arriving. After being apparently badly beaten with the score 10 to 2 against them at the end of the second, the home boys came to life and hammered Maybee's offerings for 15 runs in the last two frames, holding the visitors to one counter. Roy Fry's homer was a big factor in the win as well as some extra base hits. Meiklejohn, playing his first game at third for the locals turned in an errorless game with four put outs. Diamond, of the visitors, injured his leg in the first inning.

The teams:

English Line—Maybee, p; Blakely, 1b; Little, 2b; Craighead, c; Dewey, cf; L. Fry, lf; Haig, 3b; Begg, rf; Rannie, ss.

NOT INTENDED TO MERGE LINES SAYS MEIGHEN

Rumored That He Would Amalgamate Railways Despicable Politics.

PENSIONS A SHAM.

Liberal Senators Helped Defeat Bill, He Says—Will Have New One.

NEW WESTMINSTER, Aug. 17 (Canadian Press Despatch).—"That kind of politics is beneath contempt. It is despicable to the last degree." Premier Meighen in such words here yesterday referred once again to "rumors" that he proposed to amalgamate the Canadian National with the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The same rumor, Mr. Meighen said, had been spread in the last election, and was successful in "stealing" the votes of many thousands, and in determining the result in some doubtful counties.

"The fabrication has been revamped in this campaign," Mr. Meighen went on, "and the man who has introduced it is no other than the Leader of the Opposition, Mr. Mackenzie King. I don't need to say more. My pledge cannot be more specific. We have no thought of it. We never had. It is a fabrication from the first word to the last."

Mr. Meighen spoke of old-age pensions. He declared that the Old-Age Pensions Bill of the King Government was a sham from the first word to the last, as had been 80 per cent. of all legislation put in the statute books by that Government.

It had sham written right across it in red ink, Mr. Meighen added. The Senate said it was a sham and defeated it. He never had much confidence in it, Mr. Meighen proceeded, but he did not oppose it, knowing that if he did so he would be held up as opposed to old-age pensions.

"I have never interfered with Senators in discharge of their duties," Mr. Meighen proceeded. "I would rather they had passed the bill so the people would know what a sham it was; indeed some of the Liberal Senators walked out to make sure the bill would be defeated.

"We will introduce an old-age pension measure," Mr. Meighen continued, "but we will get the provinces together and get them to agree to something we can put into law and not have the measure stand there as a dead letter."

Mr. Meighen warmly repudiated reports that the Conservative party has shown animosity to returned soldiers.

"We tore our party asunder to stand by the soldiers in France," Mr. Meighen warmly added. "Read the speeches of Mr. King's allies in the Province of Quebec," Mr. Meighen went on, "and say if it sounds well for Mr. King to come to New Westminster and try to paint the Conservative party unfair to the soldier and paint himself as guardian of the soldiers' rights and of British institutions in Canada."

TWO BIG PLANTS ARE CLOSED DOWN

River Undermines Pillars Supporting Power House at Soo.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. Aug. 17.—The Union Carbide Company and the Michigan Northern Power Company of the Soo, Michigan, shut down completely yesterday and will remain closed for about six months, thus throwing about 500 men out of work.

This drastic step was found necessary after an investigation showed the foundation and pillars supporting the immense power building to be seriously menaced by the rushing water of the power canal, and parts of the stone work had been washed away. The Union Carbide was built by F. H. Clergue as part of the original power development in the two Soos.

FAIR PRIZE LIST IS NEARLY READY

Attractive List of Awards For Exhibition at Campbellford.

COMMUNTY PICNIC.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 17. — Mr. J. N. Stone, secretary of the Seymour and Campbellford Agricultural Society reports an attractive list of special prizes for this year's fair. Mr. Stone and other directors have been busy during the last two weeks completing and compiling the prize list, which will be printed and ready for distribution in a few days. In the meantime considerable work has been done at the exhibition grounds, effecting changes in the arrangement of the stands which will afford additional convenience for the public. The stand for the officials in charge of the races has been moved, and it is planned to have the judging ring in front of the grand stand, in order that an unobstructed view will be provided for the spectators. New hog pens are being erected, the exhibits building improved and other alterations are in prospect.

Community Picnic

The big local event scheduled for this week is the community picnic on Friday at Crow River bridge. A programme of sports will be started at 2.30, including a tug-of-war between Seymour East and West teams; and two softball games, Hydro vs. Clerks, and Petherick's Corners vs. Seymour West.

The Northumberland Regimental Band has prepared a fine concert for the evening. With good weather it is expected that a large crowd from town and countryside will attend.

Mr. A. D. Bennett has settled down in full possession of the furniture and undertaking business which he bought from A. G. Watson, who has retired to his 50-acre farm on the Hastings Road. Mr. Dalgleish is remaining as Mr. Bennett's assistant.

Mr. M. E. Maybee, M.P., was in town Monday and met many of the local Conservative stalwarts, and went on to Hastings in the afternoon. He told The Examiner he had not yet definitely arranged his meetings in the ridings, because of the present activity of the farmers. It is likely that he will defer his speaking tour for a week or ten days.

The Brethren of Springbrook held a baptismal service at Crow River Bridge on Sunday afternoon with an attendance of more than two hundred. Two new members were baptised by immersion, Rev. Mr. Garrett of Foxmead officiating.

A bottle of suspected moonshine was seized in a car by Constable Light on Sunday evening and sent to Belleville for analysis by Chief Brown yesterday.

BULLET IN BACK CAUSE OF DEATH OF PUBLISHER

DEAD TWO DAYS.

Found in Office By His Employees on Monday—No Signs of Fight.

MONTREAL, Aug. 17—J. Ontonio Beaudry, 49, well-known Montreal business man and published of "Le Prix Courant," a Montreal weekly review, was found shot to death in his office yesterday. It was at first thought that he had died a natural death, but an examination at the morgue led to the discovery of a bullet in his back.

Medical evidence showed that Beaudry had been dead since Saturday. A revolver, out of which one shot had been fired, was found in the pocket of a coat identified as his hanging on a hook in the office. The police were informed that the revolver belonged to the dead man. No clue as to who did the shooting was found by the police, who are now certain that the shooting could not have been done by Beaudry. There were no signs of a fight and no blood on the victim's chair.

Mrs. Beaudry's uneasiness over the failure of her husband to some come over the week-end led to the discovery of the body. On her request employees entered his private office and discovered Beaudry dead sitting in his chair.

Questioning the employees of the plant, the police learned that all workers had left on Saturday at 12.30 o'clock with the exception of Beaudry, who said he would lock up the place himself as he had some one to see. Who this person was the detectives were unable to learn.

Examination of the premises showed that the shot had been fired probably from the office door at Beaudry's back and that the assailant had walked out of the building by the front door on Notre Dame Street.

The detectives were unable to learn anything that might lead them to suspect any person of having animosity against Beaudry. In the rear of the office was found Beaudry's automobile containing his golf clubs in their bag.

An inquest will be held by Coroner McMahon.

DUNNING OPENS MARITIME TOUR

Addresses Meeting at Moncton, Telling Benefits of Liberal Rule.

RAILWAY ENTITY.

MONCTON, N.B., Aug. 17 (Canadian Press).—Hon. Charles Dunning, former Minister of Railways, opening his Maritime campaign here last night, defended Liberal rule in Canada, pointing and declared that among its benefits were an increase in the trade of the country and the return of the Canadian dollar to par.

Next he took up charges in connection with the customs investigation, and said that the late Hon. George Boivin had dismissed the chief customs officer at Montreal following the investigation conducted by Inspector Duncan. The inquiry, he said, did not catch a single smuggler.

Honesty in Government, said Mr. Dunning, could only be obtained by voting for honest men in all constituencies.

In regard to the Liberal railway policy, he said: "I have nothing more to say here than in any other province. The Canadian National Railways is one entity so far as entity is concerned from coast to coast."

PRAISE OF RUSSIA IS REPUDIATED

Eddy's Views Are Dictated By His Emotions Says 'Y' Official.

CHICAGO, August 17 (United Press). — Repudiating Sherwood Eddy, international Y.M.C.A. worker, as an evangelist whose views are "dictated by his sympathies and emotions," William Francis, president of the Chicago Y.M.C.A., said that the national organization should not be held responsible for Eddy's praise of Soviet Russia.

Eddy, in Moscow, recently declared that "Soviet Russia stands as a challenge to nations swollen by selfish capitalism."

"Mr. Eddy is wealthy and a volunteer Y.M.C.A. worker," Francis said, "and has the temperament of an evangelist. His views are dictated by his emotions, not by his reason."

YOUR JE WEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

The opal is today's talismanic stone, bringing its wearer good luck and brilliancy of mind. The superstition that it is unlucky should not be held against it on this day.

Today's natal gem is jade, believed by the Chinese to endow its wearer with long life and the power to enjoy old age.

Green is today's fortunate hue. It signifies change, wherein defeat is cast aside to make room for hope and achievement.

The tea rose is the fortunate flower on this day. It indicates a happy home life and perfect trust.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorncliff

SHE DESCRIBES A BLUE CREPE SATIN UTILITY FROCK

Gaby always looks well in her clothes, and I think one reason she never fails to have the proper dress for the proper season is that she does such careful planning ahead.

For instance, today she said to me: "I've been lying awake nights thinking about a new dress I must indulge in. I want something I can wear now, and which will be equally good far into the Fall.

"Don't waste good sleep over it," I admonished. "Wait until you have to be up late at night on a party, and then your sleep won't be wasted. Let's plan the frock now."

Gaby smiled at my philosophy and assured me she was ready for a late dancing party whenever the invitation was forthcoming. She added that her two best beaux were out of town.

"Now about this dress," I began. "Of course you'll want something that you can wear to the shop, and which will also be presentable when you go to tea with either or both of your two best beaux."

"Right," Gaby answered. "Of course we have to look our best coming to and from the shop, which means a dress gets pretty hard wear, and then it also has to be presentable when we go out to luncheon or tea."

"What material are you considering?" I asked, knowing that Gaby was sure enough of her own good taste to need little advice from me.

"After much pondering I have about decided on crepe-satin," she replied.

"Very good," I agreed heartily. "I understand it is the forthcoming early Fall materail."

"I like it, and I think it combines the advantage of being very good-looking with the fact that it can be worn late into the Fall. I hate a cloth dress when the September days are still hot enough to be wearing something cool, and still I like to be in step with what's smart for the season."

"Then you couldn't make a wiser choice," I agreed.

This Frock of Blue Crepe Satin Is Designed or Practical Wear.

"How about navy blue?" Gaby queried. "Try what colors I will, I think it is my most becoming," she added.

So the dress is to be navy blue, like this sketch we designed together. It is made on the dull side, with the cunning jabots and the hem edged with strips of the shiny side.

HER OWN WAY by a Girl of Today

A QUEER COINCIDENCE

It was a strange ride back to the city. Joan had left her town car at the hotel and we were going to drop her there. Jerry did not speak at all. He seemed perfectly engrossed in his thoughts, and by his face I knew that they were not pleasant. And I—well, I was trying to make myself think that I loved Jerry—I was telling myself that surely no girl ever had a more splendid, devoted sweetheart.

I think we were all glad when we arrived at the Blackstone. Joan started to get out of the car quickly, but I held her back a moment to say: "Before you go out to your house tonight, be sure that you phone to Mr. Elkins to make an appointment to meet him tomorrow morning."

"What if he will not see me?" she asked. She had always had these engagements made for her and I felt that she would not know what to do if he refused to see her.

I, too, got out of the car, and told Jerry that I would go in and help Joan make her engagement.

Jerry followed me rather reluctantly. He didn't relish the idea of standing in a telephone booth consuming the time that he might have spent with the girl he was fond of.

He called up Mr. Elkins' home, however, and was told that Mr. Elkins, Sr., would talk to no one, because he was quite ill.

"Will you please let someone come to the phone that I can talk with," said Jerry impatiently.

I took the receiver from him. I saw he was too unhappy to be polite.

"I would like to talk to Mr. Elkins," I said.

"Which Mr. Elkins?" interrupted an impatient voice.

"Joan," I whispered excitedly, my hand over the mouthpiece of the phone. "I am sure that it was your stepfather that answered this time."

"Nonsense," broke Jerry. "Even if Mr. Robinson was there in the room with Mr. Elkins, he wouldn't be answering the phone. It was probably Mr. Elkins' man or the butler."

"I tell you I am sure that it was Mr. Robinson," I reiterated. "I would know his voice anywhere, especially when it is as excited as it is tonight."

"Here, let me take the receiver," commanded Joan quickly.

Evidently the same man answered, for Joan spoke, "Is that you, Dad?" She smiled and said, "Don't swear, Dad, it is not polite." I could well understand the conflagration that was going on at the other end of the wire.

After a moment's listening, Joan continued, "Well, the reason I called up was that I wanted to be sure that Mr. Elkins would be ready to turn over Bud's and my property day after tomorrow."

Again she listened.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

NINON DE L'ENCLOS AND THE MARQUIS DESEVIGNE

In a salon in Paris, in the seventeenth century, a young man was told something by a beautiful woman facing him At her words the young man turned a sickly pale; the next moment he had snatched out a dagger and stabbed himself to death before her eyes. The young man had loved that woman madly. And she had told him that he was her son.

This tragedy was experienced by Ninon de L'Enclos, one of the most famous women of pleasure that France has produced. The suicide was her son by a lover, who was brought up in ignorance of his parentage. It was both to the advantage of Ninon and the boy that this information be withheld from him, but when by an ironic turn of fate it came about that the son fell in love with his own mother, events marched to the inevitable tragic conclusion.

With the exception of this episode Ninon lead a pleasant life. She had a horror of hypocrisy and subterfuge and practiced her numerous indiscretions with cheerful frankness. With the celebrated Marion Delorme she held open house for the elegance and intelligence of Paris and whatever she did everyone in Paris knew the details thereof.

Her salon was first the scene of purely gay pleasures but later, as she acquired a veneer of polish from associations with famous men, her establishment became a gathering place where one could meet the witty and fashionable. Ninon was not rich and was not averse therefore to encourage her guests to bring refreshments with them, which they did. She also was honest in her dealings and associations, so much so that an admirer coined this characteristic description of her: "Ninon is not a virtuous woman, but she has all the virtues of an honest man."

Ninon lived to the age of eighty-nine and preserved her attraction for men until the end of her life. It is related that at the age of seventy a certain Abbe Gedoya, who was only twenty-nine, became so infatuated with her that his passion almost drove him insane. During her career of seventy-three years—she began at sixteen—she was comfortably off, had influental friends, fame and an enjoyable life, but—when the end came her commentary on her life was: "If I were told that I were to go over again the life I have led I would hang myself tomorrow."

The following letter was written by Ninon to one of her admirers, the Marquis de Sevigne, a son of the famous Madame de Sevigne. To him Ninon was also a tutor in love, and she lays down some unique rules for his direction.

"Upon my word, marquis, you will soon drive me out of all patience. Dear! how stupid you are sometimes! I have your letter before me. Attend a little better to what I say. I did not tell you to choose a fool to love. But I said that at present you had no manner of occasion for anything more than an amusing occupation of heart and mind, and that, to render such an engagement agreeable, one need not insist upon very superior qualities.

"I repeat it again. In love men should look for nothing further than mere amusement and I believe that upon such a subject as this my experience may obtain some credit. A little peculiarity of temper, a passing caprice or a childish quarrel have frequently great effect upon men and attach them more strongly than the most rational or solid characters."

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

(By Mildred Marshall.)

Facts about your name, its history; its meaning; whence it was derived; its significance; your lucky day, and lucky jewel.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

MAGGIE

Although Scottish in itself, the name Maggie is originally derived from the Persian, being of the same root as the name Margaret. To the lucky bearer of this name, the pearl is the jewel assigned. The delightful motion that the oyster, rising to the surface of the ocean at night and opening its shell in adoration, received in its mouth a drop of dew congealed by the moonbeams, is responsible for this delicate fantasy of the pearl.

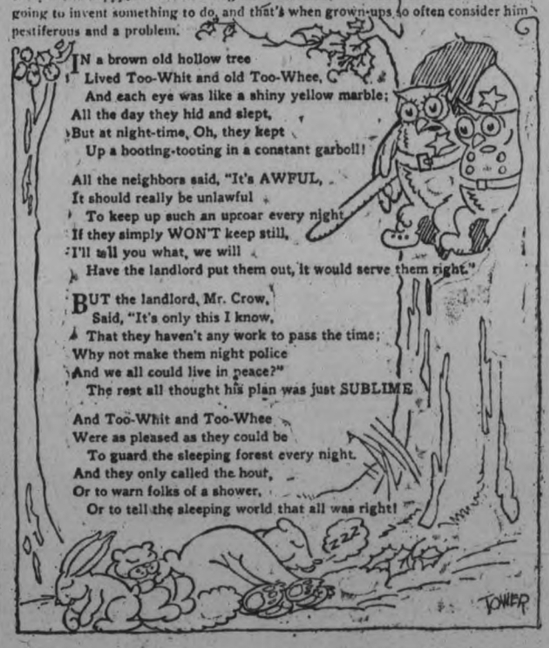
The name was brought to Scotland by Margaret Etheling, wife of Malcolm Ceanmdr, where it became the national Scottish feminine name. Because a pearl of price is associated with the pearly gates of the Celestial regions, the name of Maggie—or more usually, its original, Margaret, has been given to innumerable saints.

By wearing her natal stone, the pearl, the bearer of the name Margaret will fulfill the promise of her gods, which gives her purity, charm and affability. Her lucky day is set as Monday and seven is her fortunate number. For her to dream of pearls signifies faithful friends.

The Owl Police

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

A CHILD has just so much energy that must find a outlet and expression. If he is kept properly busy and interested this energy is used constructively and everyone is happy, but let an energetic child suffer from lack of interests and he's going to invent something to do, and that's when grown-ups so often consider him pestiferous and a problem.



IN a brown old hollow tree
Lived Too-Whit and old Too-Whee,
And each eye was like a shiny yellow marble;
All the day they hid and slept,
But at night-time, Oh, they kept
Up a hooting-tooting in a constant garboil!

All the neighbors said, "It's AWFUL,
It should really be unlawful
To keep up such an uproar every night
If they simply WON'T keep still,
I'll tell you what, we will
Have the landlord put them out, it would serve them right."

BUT the landlord, Mr. Crow,
Said, "It's only this I know,
That they haven't any work to pass the time;
Why not make them night police
And we all could live in peace?"
The rest all thought his plan was just SUBLIME

And Too-Whit and Too-Whee
Were as pleased as they could be
To guard the sleeping forest every night.
And they only called the hour,
Or to warn folks of a shower,
Or to tell the sleeping world that all was right!

Corns removed — root and all

The business end of the corn is the root. When this root presses down on one of the sensitive nerves beneath the skin, the pain begins. The only way to end the pain is to get the corn out root and all with Radox. When you dip your foot into a foot bath containing Radox, the dead skin (of the corn) combines with the Radox Bath Salts to form a protein salt of the actual corn itself. This protein salt dissolves in the water like ordinary salt and so loosens the corn that it can be removed bodily. Radox Bath Salts does not affect the living skin; it is only the dead skin—the corn—which it dissolves. 60c Your druggist stocks Half Pound Radox Bath Salts. Pink Pkgs.

ONCE UPON A TIME — THE FLYING SHIP—IV — by W. J. ENRIGHT.

THE STORY UP TO NOW

THE KING OF A CERTAIN COUNTRY OFFERED HIS DAUGHTER AND HALF HIS KINGDOM TO ANYONE WHO WOULD BRING HIM A BOAT THAT WOULD FLY. A POOR SOLDIER LEARNED FROM AN OLD MAN HE HAD HELPED HOW TO GET THE BOAT. HE STARTED TO FLY TO THE KING AND ASKED A MAN WHO COULD HEAR EVERYTHING TO JOIN HIM. HE ASKED ANOTHER MAN WHAT HE WAS DOING.

THE MAN REPLIED, "I WALK SO FAST THAT IF I DIDN'T TIE UP ONE LEG I WOULD BE AT THE END OF THE EARTH IN ONE BOUND."

"COME WITH US ON MY SHIP," SAID THE SOLDIER. SO THE MAN JOINED THEM AND THE SHIP FLEW ON AND ON TILL SUDDENLY LOOKING IN THE ROAD BELOW THE SOLDIER SAW A MAN AIMING WITH A GUN INTO THE DISTANCE. "HELLO!" HE SHOUTED, "WHAT ARE YOU AIMING AT? THERE IS NOTHING IN SIGHT!"

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate

THE MAN ANSWERED: "TWO MILES FROM HERE SITS A FLY ON THE BRANCH OF AN OAK. I WANT TO SHOOT OUT ITS LEFT EYE. THAT'S THE KIND OF A SHOT I ENJOY." "COME INTO THE SHIP WITH US," SAID THE SOLDIER. AND THE MAN WAS ONLY TOO GLAD TO JOIN THEM AND HE GOT IN.

AND THE SHIP FLEW FARTHER AND FARTHER TILL AGAIN THE SOLDIER SAW A MAN IN THE ROAD BELOW CARRYING ON HIS BACK A BASKET OF BREAD AND HE CALLED OUT, "HELLO! WHERE ARE YOU GOING?" "TO FETCH BREAD FOR MY BREAKFAST," REPLIED THE MAN.

APPLICATION FOR LICENSE DENIED BY COMMISSION

Dempsey Must Comply with State Athletic Commission's Order First.

BOXING MATCH

Has to Fight Wills Before He Can Meet Any Other Opponent.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17 (Canadian Press)—Jack Dempsey's application for a license to fight Gene Tunney here September 16, yesterday was denied by the State License Committee until he has complied with the State Athletic Commission's order, that he meet the negro, Harry Wills, first.

The resolution of the license board recited that Dempsey must present articles for a bout with Wills to take place before he meets any other man in order to receive recognition in this state.

This decision followed receipts of an opinion from Attorney General Ortinger, in Albany, stating that the License body was not within its power in refusing a license to the heavyweight champion after he had been declared eligible by the State Athletic Commission.

Observers foresee a battle in the courts with Tex Rickard, promoter, supported by the Ottinger findings, the Athletic Commission having voted Dempsey eligible to license last week. The decision of the license board on the other hand, is regarded as a victory for James A. Farley, chairman of the commission, who all along has held out for a Dempsey-Wills contest.

Farley often has said that Tunney and the champion would not fight at the Yankee Stadium in September, but his fellow commissioners, George E. Brower and William L. Muldoon, recently combined forces in an effort to obtain the battle. Brower, a lawyer, asked the attorney general for the opinion which was made public today.

The license committee's resolution follows:

"The License Committee will not further consider the application of Jack Dempsey for a license until he has complied with the resolution and orders of the New York State Athletic Commission and license committee issued to him declaring Harry Wills his logical opponent."

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

MANY PLAYERS IN QUEST OF TENNIS CROWN

Six Stars Are Scoring Decisive Straight-Set Victories.

AT FOREST HILLS.

Veterans of a Deade's Competition Sweep Into Second Round.

17 (Canadian Press). — More than fifty players yesterday drew their racquets in quest of the national women's tennis crown relinquished by Helen Wills, with six stars scoring decisive, straight-set triumphs.

As Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory and Miss Mary K. Browne, veterans of more than a decade's competition, swept into the second round with other favorites by impressive triumphs, the youthful champion of 1925 sped westward to her home in California, after an unsuccessful attempt to regain her stride.

Elizabeth Ryan, the thirty-five-year old chop stroke star, who vanquished Miss Wills in straight sets at Seabright, N.J., more than a week ago, was not called upon to play yesterday under the leaden skies which finally made good their threat of rain. But Mrs. Mallory, whose victory over Miss Wills last Friday established her as Miss Ryan's outstanding rival for the crown, came through with a decisive victory, bombarding Mrs. F. H. Godfrey, of Boston, with a fusilade of powerful drives to win at 6-0, 6-1.

Miss Browne, first who rose to the tennis pinnacle fourteen years ago, was equally impressive. The Santa Monica star yielded only two games to the Newport, R.I., veteran, Mrs. Maude Barger-Wallach, at 6-0, 6-2.

Eleanor Goss of New York, Martha Bayard of Short Hills, N.J., Mrs. A. H. Chapin of Springfield, Mass., and Miss Penelope Anderson of Richmond, Va., were other seeded stars to advance without being pressed.

Miss Ryan will make her first appearance in the tournament today. With a first round bye, she is scheduled to oppose Eleanor Cottman of Baltimore in a second round contest.

LOCAL BOWLERS ARE ELIMINATED

M. B. Chenhall's Rink Is Defeated in Dominion Trophy Round.

BY CLOSE SCORE.

Despite the downfall of rain yesterday afternoon, the Dominion Lawn Bowling tournament, one of the classics of lawn bowling, was opened yesterday afternoon at the lawns of the Granite, St. Matthew's, High Park and Toronto Canoe Clubs, and two rounds were played in the Dominion Trophy, and one in the second event, the Ontario Trophy. Despite the large entry there were but few defaults in the first draw, and these were filled by post entries.

Competition was keen in all games and close scores were the order of the day, very few games being won by a wide margin. The Dominion Trophy, the much-coveted prize, is in its sixth year of competition, and has but four more years to run. In the past five years it has been won twice by St. Matthew's Club, the only club to have more than one victory in this event. A victory for St. Matthew's this year would give them the inside track for the permanent possession of the handsome cup, which goes to the club winning it the most number of times in ten years.

To-day the play will continue in both the Dominion and Ontario events, and the first round will be played in the Toronto Cup competition, the third event in the rink play of the tournament. Bowlers are asked to be present at 9 a.m.

Chairman D. S. L. MacDougall of the Dominion tournament, opened play yesterday at the Granite Club, headquarters for the tourney, while Vice-Chairman W. F. Kelly officiated at Toronto Canoe Club, A. Downing at High Park Club, and D. R. Gourlay at St. Matthew's Club.

The Peterborough rink, composed of the following men, M. Chenhall (skip), R. Fox, G. Coleman and N. Routley, was defeated in the preliminary round of the Dominion Trophy by M. Eaton of the Toronto C. C., 15-13, and was eliminated from the Ontario Trophy by W. H. Wright of the Canada Club, Toronto, 17-10.

W. G. HENDERSON RESIGNS OFFICE

Accountant of Utilities Commission Is Leaving Next Month.

The resignation, to take effect on September 15, of W. G. Henderson whi has been acciuntant of the Peterborough Utilities Commission for the past number of years, was reluctantly accepted by the members of the commission at a meeting held yesterday afternoon. The matter came up at a previous meeting when Mr. Henderson was asked to reconsider it but yesterday he again affirmed his intention of withdrawing.

E. F. Mason, chairman, stated that the members of the commission regretter very much the impending departure of Mr. Henderson. Mr. Henderson, he said, was one of the mainstays; his work had always been up to the mark and was usually ahead of what was expected from him.

G. A. Bunker, president of the Canadian Aladdin Company appeared in person before the commission in connection with having the connection istalled for a sprinkler system at the local plant of the company. His request was granted.

Thoes present were: E. F. Mason, chairman; W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., and Gordon S. Matthews.

FRENCH CABINET MAY MOVE, ETC.

chance of such a suggestion being favorably received in America without ratification of the Berenger agreement. Germany accepted the Dawes plan, England accepted the Baldwin settlement and Italy approved the Volpi Treaty, and it is obvious that general considerations could better be applied if all debtors make settlements.

The Fear in French Minds.

However, there is no doubt that M. Poincare has some distance to go before he can obtain ratification. There remains in the minds of many Frenchmen the idea that in approving the debt accord they are placing their country at the mercy of the United States for more than half a century. This idea has been emphasized by French statesmen and editors for months, and, interestingly enough, by many leaders who now favor ratification as part of carrying out the experts' financial plan.

Ludovic Naudeau, editor of the Illustration, who is making an inquiry into conditions in Italy, publishes this week an article which is sure to attract wide attention. Discussing the effect of Italy's settlement with America, he writes:

"While France resists the American pretentions Fascist Italy has submitted, Italy promised to pay America whether or not she is paid by Germany and regardless of the effect these payments may have on her exchange. She put herself in a position more unfavorable than Germany since the adoption of the Dawes plan. Transfers of marks on reparation account is suspended when they hurt German exchange and all payments are stopped as soon as 5,000,000,000 marks thus accumulate.

"Italy has given the United States sixty-two bonds corresponding to the annuities of her settlement. All these bonds, totalling $2,042,000,000, are payable in gold, plus interest. The United States reserves the right to ask the Italian Government at any moment to transfer these bonds against securities to be offered in Italy or elsewhere. These bonds if not purchased in Italy may be offered anywhere and Italy engages herself to aid their sale. Germany, though she has given her creditors 11,000,000,000 marks of railroad bonds and 5,000,000,000 marks of industrial bonds, has not undertaken to absorb them.

"Thus the United States at any moment can place on sale $2,000,000,000 of Italian securities. Thus America holds Italian credit in the hollow of her hand. Americans hold the rate of the Italian lire at their mercy. They dominate the industrial power of Italy."

It is quite evident that M. Naudeau intends by inference to apply this argument to France.

For the sake of ratification of the Berenger agreement it is to be hoped that the franc will hold its value fairy well from now to the middle of October, when Parliament is scheduled to resume its sessions. That will give the Government two months for the proposed campaign of education of public opinion, a task which perhaps might not be completed if a fall of the franc forced the Government to call Parliament more quickly for the purpose of trying to obtain ratification of the debt agreement and then foreign credits.

Two car-loads came from Norwood. They included the Norwood institute officers and some others, including one gentleman. The Warsaw-Havelock ball game was called off as the weather was so threatening. The sports were:

Boys under twelve—Won by Clarence Tedford; prize, a knife, donated by Mr. Matthews. Clarence and Allan Darling were ties twice, and the third time Clarence won by about six inches.

Race for girls under twelve — Won by Evelyn Hooper; prize, a barette, donated by Mrs. Digweed.

Three-legged race — Won by Mary Stewart and Wanda McMillan; prize, a box of chocolates, donated by Mr. H. G. E. Choate.

Nail-driving contest—Won by Gwendolyn McQuaig; prize, a sugar and cream set, donated by Mrs. Digweed. Mrs. Weller, Mrs. Rogers and Miss McQuaig each drove the nail with five blows on the first round. On the second trial Miss McQuaig drove it with four. Kenneth McQuaig got 20c for drawing all the nails out of the scantling.

Coat race—Won by Edna McCauley and Maitland Forsythe; prize, Eversharp pencils each.

High jumping contest—Won by Rayfield Darling. He cleared four feet, ten inches. The prize was a pair of braces, donated by Mr. Chas. Calder.

Boys' nail-driving contest—Won by Sidney McCauley, who drove the nail with four blows, for ice cream.

A ball game between the married women and the young girls was won by the girls; prize, a ball, donated by the institute.

About five o'clock all sat down on the ground and supper was served.

The institute extends thanks to the merchants who donated the prizes; also to Mr. Tucker for providing hot water and otherwise helping those who had charge.

Norwood Institute has invited Warsaw Institute women to a picnic on Mrs. Grover's lawn on Friday, August 20.

Personals.

Mrs. George Garbutt entertained a number of ladies yesterday afternoon. The ladies sewed and did fancy-work for the bazaar.

Miss Fitzsimmons, from Chandos, is visiting with Miss Florence Tedford.

Mrs. Graham is visiting her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Weller.

Cephas Parcells was reported as improving, but suffered a relapse and was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, where he is gaining. He had two minor operations.

The recent rains and warm, damp weather have made things grow, but a lot of rusted grain is reported, especially spring wheat and oats.

Diamond Disputes Decided

by BILLY EVANS

Is it permissible for the pitcher to get on the rubber without having the ball in his possession?

Until 1920 it was permissible for the pitcher to get on the rubber without having the ball in his possession, provided he made no motion to deliver it to the batsman.

This was a bad rule, since it paved the way for deception and gave the runner no standard to judge as to who had the ball.

Since the rubber is to pitch from, it was taken for granted that the moment the pitcher got on the rubber he had the ball and was ready to pitch.

That is the thought now in force. It is a guide to the baserunner. It is a balk now, if the pitcher gets on the rubber without the ball.

BILLY EVANS SAYS

RETORT COURTEOUS

The retort courteous is usually an excellent weapon to settle a dispute on the ball field, but occasionally it reacts.

Some years ago the New York Yankees had a pitcher on the pay-roll by the name of Cy Pieh, which sounds like something new in the dessert line.

The first game that he worked for the New York club, the opposing batters discovered his delivery and name were closely related. He was given a good trimming. 1 was the umpire.

As a rule recruit pitchers don't argue with the umpires. Most of them feel they must become established before taking issue with the arbitrator as to his judgment on balls and strikes.

Cy Pieh, however, was a decided exception to the rule as most American League umpires who tried to satisfy him on balls and strikes, soon learned.

THE LAST LAUGH

Pieh began kicking on almost the first ball pitched. He continued to object while he remained on the rubber. Since only a few balls managed to get by the batter 1 paid no attention to his protests, being more interested in the way the opposition was hitting the ball.

He was finally taken out and as he walked past me on his way to the bench, 1 couldn't refrain from remarking:

"Well 1 won't be bothered with you after the Fourth of July." In baseball a player able to stick after that date is considered as having won a place.

Most of the other umpires on the staff also reminded Pieh in much the same manner. July 5th of that year brought me one of the biggest laughs 1 ever had, simply because 1 didn't think Pieh had a sense of humor.

In my mail of July 5th was a postal card with these words: "Note the date and the fact that I am still in the league. What are you going to do about it?" Four other umpires got similar postals.

WORDS WITH STING

Baseball has any number of rather stereotyped expressions such as the one, "you won't be around to bother anyone after the Fourth of July." Well do 1 recall the number of times it was hurled at me back in 1906 when 1 broke into the American League. Also many others equally sarcastic and uncomplimentary.

"If that is the way you call them, you won't be long in this league."

"And whom, may 1 ask, recommended you to President Johnson?"

These, as well as scores of other reverse English compliments were slipped me when 1 made my debut.

It may seem rather strange, yet of all the remarks made to me in the early years of my big league career, two words uttered often by Manager Fielder Jones of the White Six used to get under my skin more than anything else 1 know of.

"Guessing again." Was the only way Jones would object to the way I was calling them.

SHORT SPEECH

If 1 happened to call a ball on him, he might turn around to the catcher and say: "It was a perfect strike, right through the heart."

"Guessing again," however, was his favorite speech to me. Late in the game he would vary it a trifle by saying:

"Still guessing."

Until 1 became established these two words, guessing again or still guessing, was the length of my speech with Fielder Jones, then the famous manager of the Chicago White Sox.

Take it from me, like Cy Pieh, I have since reminded a few players who predicted July 5th, 1906 would mark my passing to the minors.

BASEBALL NEWS

A Havelock team played a very friendly game of baseball at the Exhibition Grounds last night with a picked team by Gerald Whaley.

The game was called for 6 p.m. but tire trouble to the visitors on their way up delayed it. A number of interested spectators were present for the occasion. The final score was Havelock 6, Peterboro 5.

MANY PICNICS OVER WEEK END

St. James' Choir, Metropolitan Staff, and Female Voice Choir Excursions.

PLEASANT OUTINGS.

About thirty agents of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, with their wives, gathered at South Beach on Saturday afternoon for their annual picnic. The principal item on the programme of an athletic nature was the softball game played between the Lindsay and Peterborough offices, which was won by the Peterborough staff, 26 to 16.

A meeting was held with N. Tobin, assistant manager, as chairman, and addresses were given by Assistant Manager A. J. Wood of Lindsay, and Agents O. Kellar, A. McLaren, A. J. Brennan, S. Marchen, and J. Hay. A club bag was presented to Spencer Gale, manager of the Peterborough district for the past fourteen months, who has been transferred to the Danforth district of Toronto.

The annual picnic of St. James' United Church Choir was held on Saturday afternoon to Wallace's Point. A most pleasant outing was held, the afternoon being spent in games and races. A softball match was won by a team captained by Mr. Monks, which defeated Mr. Cuffe's team, 10 to 9. The needle and thread race was won by Miss Mary Wood and Mr. Rose. The ladies' race was won by Miss Eileen Rose, and the gentlemen's race by Mr. Willis. Miss Verna Fell won the biscuit race, while Miss Rose and Elmer Frost won the partner's race. The ladies beat the men in a tug-of-war, two pulls out of three.

A sumptuous luncheon brought the outing to a close.

Female Voice Choir

The Female Voice and Juvenile Choirs held their annual picnic at Chemong Park on Saturday, when an enjoyable afternoon was spent. The following races were run off, after which the prizes were presented by Misses Jackson and Pink:

Tiny Tots' Race.—Florrie Barrie, Annie Fletcher, Margaret Fletcher.

Girls' Race, 7 to 10.—May Jackson, A. Pink, Phyllis Pink.

Girls' Race, 10 to 12.—Jennie Playford, Gladys Jones.

Young Ladies' Race.—Florence Record, Josephine Parkins.

Married Ladies' Race.—Mrs. Pink.

Young Men's Race.—Mr. Pulley-blank, Mr. Slaughter.

INQUIRE INTO MACKAY CASE

Provincial Authorities Investigating Case of Man Found Blind.

ALCOHOL BLAMED.

TORONTO, Aug. 17. —Attorney-General W. F. Nickle yesterday ordered an inquiry into the case of James Mackay of Galt, who, police say, was picked up in an intoxicated condition of a Hamilton street on Saturday, and almost went blind from what Hamilton authorities believed to be alcoholic poisoning. Mr. Nickle lost no time, once the matter was reported to him, in setting the machinery of investigation in motion.

Mr. Nickle had no comment to make regarding departmental activity in proving alleged cases of alcoholic poisoning in the Parry Sound and Toronto-Hamilton districts. No cases of this type, he said, had been reported to the department from Western Ontario.

No Significance in Bail.

Asked if there was any significance attached to the fact that the three Magistrates in Toronto, Hamilton and Niagara Falls all granted bail at practically the same time, Mr. Nickle said: "I do not think so. There is no reason why any one action should be taken as a precedent for another. They apparently acted individually, believing that they could not longer refuse the granting of bail."

TO HEAD C.N.R.?

A report current at Ottawa and elsewhere is that Sir Henry Thornton, present head of the Canadian National Railway system, is to be replaced in the near future by another Sir Henry—namely, Sir Henry Drayton, former chief commissioner of the Dominion Railway Board and minister of finance, and to-day a miniser without portfolio in the Meighen government.

EDERLE WILLING TO SWIM AGAIN

Would Meet All Comers in Channel Swim For $20,000.

MEN OR WOMEN.

BISSINENG, Germany, August 17 (Canadian Press). — Gertrude Ederle to-day told the Associated Press that she was prepared to take on all male and female challengers in a Channel swim for a purse of $20,000 before starting for the United States.

Miss Ederle, replying to some criticism in London newspapers, said that the second tug that accompanied her during her Channel swim had not been chartered by her, but by a competitor, Miss Lillian Cannon, of Baltimore, who made the trip to observe the conditions of the water and take photographs for possible use in her attempt to swim the Channel.

Miss Ederle also said that the presence of two tugs did not make the swim any easier as the broken water between the vessels made her task much more difficult.

LOWELL, Mass., Aug. 17 (Canadian Press).—Penny L. Sullivan of this city, the first United States citizen to swim across the English Channel, made a reply to Gertrude Ederle's challenge for a Channel swim this morning. Mr. Sullivan said that he did not have the $20,000 to meet the requirements of Miss Ederle's challenge, but that he still stood ready to meet any man or woman who accepts the challenge which he issued in London immediately after his swim across the Channel, to race for a purse of $10,000 for a finish swim into open ocean.

WRIGHT TROPHY GOES TO COGS

Now Meet Crescents To Decide Team For O.B.A.A. Semi-finals.

Cognawagas won the Wright Trophy by defeating Keene at Lakefield last evening, the score being 12 to 5. The contest was the third and final game of the county series of the East Peterborough Baseball League, and Cogs will now meet Crescents, the city winners, to decide which team will enter the O.B.A.A. semi-finals.

Cogs gained a lead of two runs in the third, and Stuffy Mahood made it safe for his team by cracking out a three-base wallop with the bases filled in the fourth. Wilson also helped the cause by hitting for three bags with two on in the fifth.

Billingsley pitched well until the fifth, when Keene scored five runs. Max Robertson and Gene McCarthy divided the pitching for Keene. The game was called in the first half of the sixth, after Keene had scored three runs and two were out.

Score by innings:

Keene	00005—5
Cogs	00255—12

Batteries — Robertson, McCarthy and Robertson; Billingsley and McGee.

Umpires—Kay and Wellman.

THEATRE

RICHARD DIX IN "LET'S GET MARRIED."

The happy-go-lucky Richard Dix is the hero of the feature picture at the Capitol Theatre for the first half of this week in "Let's Get Married," with Lois Wilson as the unbobbed heroine and a plot which revolves around the attempts of the temperamental hero, Bill Dexter, Jr., to keep out of jail. In the opening scene, he, with a group of classmates, cleans out a night club during a drunken carousal, and only the influence of his father, a wealthy wholesaler of hymn books, prevents his son from landing in jail. The next time, however, he is not so lucky, and the thirty-day sentence he receives gives him a period of reflection in the lockup, while his sweetheart thinks he is on a business trip to Mexico. Then he gets out of jail by way of the laundry chute and hits on the scheme of getting married and making a quick trip to the Barbadoes to escape the vigilance of his pursuers. Slattery, played by the famous Gunboat Smith, brings him a pardon, but he thinks it is another summons, and his wedding is complicated by his efforts to get away from the large Slattery and the pardon and to speed up the words of a slow justice of the peace.

It is one of those funny pictures which hasn't much substance, but makes fine hot weather film material with plenty of laughs in its unfolding, and a particularly humorous touch to the scene between Bill and the hilarious buyer of hymn books, who wants to be amused by seeing a fight in a cabaret, and proceeds to start things going in a fashion peculiar and effective.

The comedy, "Shore Shy," has a hero in Billy Doley, a real "goofy gob," and the short reels are as good as usual.—Jeanette.

HOW TO SWIM

by Lillian Cannon

MAKE THE HANDS WORK IN FLOATING

Regarding floating, it is well to remember that floating is merely a resting device and it is not important to be able to float absolutely motionless.

Few men, unless very fat, will be able to float in fresh water, although women find it easier, and even in salt water it is not easy unless one has the gift.

The same resting result can be obtained by lying on the back and moving the hands in figure eights with the palms opposed to the water all the time.

This will give almost as much rest as absolute floating and the hang of it can be learned very quickly and very easily. The body will hang almost perpendicularly in they water.

Strength Of Mine Shares Features Toronto Exchange

TORONTO, Aug. 17 (Canadian Press).—The strength displayed by mining offerings featured the trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. Brazilian, which eased 3-8 to 111 7-8, led in activity with a turnover of nearly 1,200 shares.

Lake Shore had early substantial gains touching a record high of 15.01 but weakened later to close at 14.50 for a net gain of 10 cents. Noranda closed 35 cents higher at 18.60, Hollinger 20 cents at 19.45, Teck Hughes 4 cents at 4.22, and McIntyre a total of 75 cents at 27.00, while Dome was off 40 cents to 10.60. Brompton was up 1-2 to 34 3-4, while Massey Harris Common was off the same to 64 1-2. Nickel and Kelvinator were unchanged at 38 and 14 1-2 respectively. Smelters eased 1 7-8 to 233 1-2. Canners Preferred advanced 1-2 to 67. Imperial Oil gained 1-2 to 36 1-2, while British American lost the same to 36 1-2.

Speculators Force Drop In Many Leading Stocks

NEW YORK, Aug. 17. —(Canadian Press). — Speculators for a dereaction in to-day's stock market but not until nearly a score of issues, including U. S. Steel Common, American Smelting, U. S. Industrial Alcohol and Rock Island had been elevated to new high levels for the year. The decline was interpreted in many quarters as a natuaral correction of the weakened technical position resulting from the rapid advance in many issues during the past few days.

United Steel common, after touching a new peak at 159 5-8, rapidly fell back 3 points. Atlantic Coast Line, Sloss Sheffield Steel, Dupont and United States Cast Iron Pipe all were selling five or nearly seven points below yesterday's final quotations by early this afternoon. Most of the early gains of 1 to 4 points were wiped out or substantially reduced before the end of the third hour, with constructive interests showing a disposition to step aside and allow the reaction to run its course.

There was no business news of importance during the session.

Mine Stocks Make Gains With McIntyre Leading

TORONTO, Aug. 17. —(Canadian Press). — Substantial advances by several of the best known stocks featured the market on the standard mining exchange to-day with trading conducted over a broad list and gold stocks showing strength all along the line. After its sensational gain of 1.13 per share yesterday Lake Shore eased off slightly and closed 20 cents off at 14.30.

McIntyre jumped drastically 75c to 27.00 while Wright Hargreaves closed 35 cents higher at 8.85. Hollinger was up 20 cents to 19.50 and Noranda advanced 30 cents to 18.45. Gold Hill and Teck Hughes were each one higher to 68 and 4.19 respectively while Vipond was off two to 1.81. Amulete firmed one to 1.37. In the Silvers Nipissing was 10 higher to 5.80, Mining Corporation seven to 4.00, while Castle Trethewey eased five to 1.45.

Wheat Market Firmer Because Of Rains In West

CHICAGO, August 17 (Canadian Press).—Rains in Canada likely to delay harvest operations tended to give some firmness to-day to the wheat market here. Besides Liverpool quotations showed more stability than had been looked for. Opening at ½ decline to a like advance, wheat fluctuated within a narrow range, averaging slightly higher than yesterday's finish. Corn was firm, oats easy, and provisions strong, with corn starting unchanged to ¼ cent up, and subsequently scoring slight gains all around.

One of the apparent reasons which at times gave unexpected stability to-day to wheat quotations here and abroad was the report that weather in Europe as well as in Canada was unfavorable for harvesting and threshing. According to advices at hand, intermittent rainfall in European countries has hindered cutting and lowered the quality of the wheat, Germany in particular suffering from inclement conditions. On the other hand, reports from the North-West states indicated better threshing returns than were anticipated, especially for Minnesota and Upper North Dakota.

A sudden turn in the market puts some store in a position to offer you goods of the highest repute and quality at a bargain price. Read the advertisements and save money.

MAKE JUDICIAL INQUIRY INTO ELECTION IRREGULARITIES

No Known Voters in Poll Having 82 Marked Ballots.

OFFICERS AWAY.

Alleged Offences Were Committed in Athabasca Riding, Alberta.

EDMONTON, Aug. 17. — Justice Clarke's judicial inquiry into irregularities in the Federal Election in Athabasca last October continued today, a session being held at Frog Lake, where the Cushing, Prairie Lake and Parenteau polls were investigated.

Although 82 votes were cast at one poll, no witnesses could be found yesterday who had voted there or who knew any one who had. The district returning officer, Peter Peterson, had left th country, the Alberta Provincial Police reported, and Elmer Ford, down as poll clerk, had not been in the district for two years according to witnesses.

Two of the polls were in forest reserves, said witnesses, and they did not think there were half a dozen residents entitled to vote in the whole reserve.

NOW PLAY FOR LEAGUE TITLE

Crescents and Cogs Meet at Exhibition Park To-morrow.

FIRST OF SERIES.

Cognawagas, winners of the county series, and Crescents, city winners, in the East Peterborough League, will meet in a title contest at Exhibition Park to-morrow evening, commencing at 5.45 o'clock.

Owing to a misunderstanding at O.B.A.A. headquarters, the semi-final draw calls for a series between the East Peterborough League and the City League. As there is only one Intermediate League here, it is probable that the winner will get a bye, in which case the extra time made available, will give Cogs and Crescents the opportunity of playing the usual series for the title. The O.B.A.A. have been notified of the mix-up.

MAN ARRESTED HERE SENTENCED

Gets Two Years For Theft of Automobile From Doctor.

TORONTO, Aug. 17. —(Canadian Press). — Bruce Tinney, arrested in Peterborough for being drunk and fined $46.50 by the magistrate, pleaded not guilty to being in possession of a stolen car, a doctor's, on that occasion.

Two witnesses from Peterborough, a merchant and his daughter, swore to seeing accuse driving the automobile, which was recovered later and found to be stolen. The accused, they swore, used bad language when asked by them to remove his automobile from their premises.

Crown Attorney Murphy examined the accused, who asknowledged three previous convictions.

The bench registered a conviction for automobile theft and sentenced the accused to Kingston Penitentiary for two years.

FIND TWO WOUNDS IN EDITOR'S BODY

One Bullet in Back of Head and Other in Body.

MONTREAL, Aug. 17 (Canadian Press).—Two bullets were fired into the body of Joseph Antonio Beaudry, well-known editor and publisher, as he sat in his office at the "Prix Courant," a weekly review, on Saturday afternoon. This announcement was made by Dr. Derome, medico-legal expert, who performed an autopsy on the body of the victim. The examination showed one shot was fired through the back of the head, while the second entered the back.

As a result of an all-night search and investigations, the police to-day reported that a definite clue had been uncovered in the mystery.

While reticence marks the progress of the detectives, it was learned from Captain of Detectives Mercier that "something which could not be made public as yet" had been discovered and that this mysterious finding had a great bearing on the solution of mystery.

RELATIONSHIP OF KING AND HOUSE MUST BE COPIED

Mackenzie King Says Governor-General Can't Choose Between Parties.

TO MAINTAIN EMPIRE.

Departure From Constitutional Practices Would Cause Shock.

CALGARY, Aug. 17. —(Canadian Press). — England expected Canada to take its full measure of self government within the Empire, but unless the relationship of the Governor Genreal to the Prime Minister in Canada was the same as the King to the Prime Minister in Great Britain, Canada's position was no better than a crown colony, Mr. Mackenzie King told his audience last night.

"Suppose the King of England began to choose between parties, how long do you think the throne would remain as strong as it is to-day?" He asked. It was the action of the Commons which determined the ministry that would advise the crown.

"That is British constitutional practice. The minute you begin to depart from those rules, the British Empire will begin to suffer shock. The Empire will last as long as constitutional practice is carried on throughout the Dominions," said Mr. King.

MILKMAN LOSES ARM FROM CUT BY DIRTY BOTTLE

Unwashed Bottles Are Not Only Unsightly, But Dangerous, Says Doctor.

GANGRENE CAUSED.

Young Man Falls in Dark Alley, Cutting Arm on Bottle.

TORONTO, August 17. —Untidy empty milk bottles set out forlornly on the doorstep have condemned many a housewife in the eyes of her backdoor neighbours. They say she is careless, slovenly, lazy—many hard things they say about her; but Dr. F. R. Scott of the surgical staff of the Toronto Western Hospital pointed out yesterday that she might very easily cause death.

Dr. Scott, in lecturing to the private-duty nurses attending the extension course being held this week at the University of Toronto, told of one young man who nearly lost his life through a careless housewife, an unclean milk bottle and the resultant gas gangrene.

The boy was driving his milk wagon as usual during the night hours. Having delivered the milk, he had collected the empties standing on the doorsteps, and proceeded through a dark alley. He fell and spilled the empty bottles. One bottle broke and the boy, falling on the pieces gave himself a cut of three inches on the inner side of the forearm. As it bled rather profusely he was hurried off to the hospital and the wound was thoroughly cleansed.

By Loses an Arm.

"The gas bacillus came into prominence during the war," said Dr. Scott "Some authorities state that of the war wounds 10 per cent. developed gas gangrene. The development of gas gangrene depends on the virulence of the organism, the amount of dead tissue and the anaerobic conditions of the wound.

"The bacillus of gas gangrene is common in fertilized soil," he concluded, warning the housewife to take more care with the empty milk bottle and thus to avoid further serious accidents of the sort.

VISITOR HOPES PARTY WILL GAIN WORKING MAJORITY

Sir James Allen Hopes Canada Will Get Stable Government.

WAS HERE BEFORE.

Thinks Ottawa Has Grown Considerably Since War.

"I sincerely hope that your coming election will result in one of the parties gaining a majority that will make a stable government possible," said Sir James Allen, High Commissioner in London for New Zealand, who arrived in Toronto yesterday. Sir James is visiting Canada on his way back home after having completed his second three-year term in London. He expressed keen interest in the Canadian political situation, and explained that in New Zealand they also had a three-party system, but that some one party had always had a clear majority.

Referring to the coal strike in England, Sir James said that he thought it was slowly fizzling out. "A large number of men are going back to work," he said.

Sir James had visited Canada twice before the war, and, asked if he had noticed any change, he said that Ottawa had grown considerably. He arrived in Montreal on Saturday and spent Sunday in Ottawa, where he attended the opening of the centenary celebration.

He will be in Toronto until tomorrow, when he leaves for the West and thence to New Zealand.

MISSING 5 DAYS FOUND DROWNED

Samuel Fawcett Had Spent Eighteen Weeks in Hospital.

25 YEARS OLD.

Missing five days from his home, Samuel Fawcett, aged 25, of 220 Ontario Street, Toronto, was found drowned in the waters of the Toronto Bay yesterday morning. Prior to his disappearance, Fawcett had just returned to work after some 18 weeks in hospital. On Wednesday night of last week he left the Cosgrave Brewery, and his parents had no idea of his whereabouts.

Two boys sighted the body floating in the water between Yonge and Bay Streets, and notified the Life Saving Department, who conveyed the body to the Morgue. William Fawcett, the drowned youth's father, identified the body there last night. Coroner G. W. Clendenan is investigating, but it is not considered likely that an inquest will be held.

DOG SHOW HERE BETTER THAN EVER

Committee Hopes To Have More Entries Than Last Year.

The dog show held in conjunction with the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition is fast becoming one of the main attractions of the Exhibition. Last year over 350 dogs were exhibited, which made the Peterborough Show the second largest dog show in Canada, being beaten only by the dog show held at the Toronto Exhibition. Last year dogs were brought from all over the country, even as far as Vancouver.

An effort is being made this year to surpass the records of last year. The prize list includes fifty-seven cups and numerous other special and cash prizes.

The judge will be Bob Ross of Montreal, who is considered one of the foremost judges in North America. Any dog over the age of six months is eligible to compete. It does not have to be a registered thoroughbred. The prize list will be out on August 21. It shows the prizes for each breed of dog. Further particular can be obtained from the show secretary, W. E. Jackson, 295 Margaret Avenue. Phone 1236.

LIES 15 HOURS UNDER TRESTLE

Toronto Man Suffers Broken Thigh—Passersby Laugh at Plight.

FOUND BY BOYS.

TORONTO, Aug. 17. — For 15 hours in intense agony, Lester Davies, aged 23, lay in a swamp of the Don Valley under a trestle with his right thigh broken. It was 8.30 Sunday night when Davies hurtled more than 15 feet from the trestle to the bed of the ravine, and succor did not come until 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Then his cries drew two boys to the scene, who summoned workmen. A stretcher was hastily improvised of a door, and the injured man conveyed to the office of the Don Valley Brick Works, whence he was removed to the Toronto General Hospital.

False Step in Dark.

The young man, according to his mother, is extremely short-sighted. On Sunday evening he left his home to walk over to Riverdale Park. Returning he walked through the Don Valley. He was crossing a trestle about a quarter of a mile north of Rosedale Station, when he noticed a light. Handicapped by poor eyesight, he had aproached the edge of the trestle to investigate, when he lost his balance and fell. In falling, he struck a piece of wood projecting from the side of the trestle. It was in this way, it is thought, that his thigh was fractured.

"Passed By on Other Side."

Landing in a swamp beneath the trestle, Davies made several unsuccessful attempts to regain his feet. He was in extreme pain, and unable to crawl from the water-soaked ground. Catching sight of a woman and man walking along the bank, Davies says that he called loudly to them for help. They merely laughed and went on.

Exhausted from his frantic efforts to extricate himself, Davies lapsed at last into uneasy slumber. Shortly after 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon he was aroused by some boys playing in the ravine, and managed to attract their attention. Two lads ran over to him and then hurried to the Don Valley Brick Works, where they informed workers of Davies's predicament.

Stretcher Is Improvised.

Drawing the injured man out of the morass, they carried him upon a crude stretcher to the offices of the plant, and summoned a doctor, who attended his injuries. He was removed to the General Hospital.

When her son did not return Sunday night, Davies's anxious mother telephoned the police, and also made inquiries of the various hospitals. Yesterday morning, when there was still no word of him, she appealed to the police to search for her son, fearing that he had met with foul play.

REPORTS NO MEXICAN INJURY TO AMERICAN RIGHTS DURING RELIGIOUS STRIFE IN MEXICO

President Sees No Cause For Stiffening Policy Towards Neighbor Nation.

ISSUE IS DOMESTIC.

Feels Knights of Columbus Charges Do Not Justify Interference.

PAUL SMITH'S, N. Y., Aug. 18.—Secretary of State Kellogg reported to President Coolidge yesterday that no Americans in Mexico had been subjected to indignities or had suffered in person or property during the conflict between the Catholic Church and the Government there in the last three weeks.

It is understood that the alleged degradation, expulsion and insulting of American citizens complained of by the Knights of Columbus in the protest on Mexico which they presented to Secretary Kellogg last week have been found not to be violations of the treaty rights of Americans resident in Mexico, according to the investigations of the State Department and the reports of Ambassador Sheffield.

On the strength of the Secretary's report, President Coolidge, it is understood, sees no reason for modifying in any way the American policy toward Mexico.

The President is represented as believing that the Calles Government has observed unusual care in abiding by the treaties respecting American citizens living in Mexico.

Sees No Cause for Stiffer Policy.

Nothing has been reported to the State Department as having occurred since the Church and State struggle began that would justify, in the opinion of the Administration, a stiffening of its Mexican policy or the abandonment of its previously an- influence Mexico or to satisfy Am -

It is held by this Government that the situation is a Mexican domestic problem. So long as American citizens are protected in their person and property, this Government feels it has no official concern with the attitude of the Mexican Government regarding the confiscation of Church property.

While this Government may be sympathetic toward those demanding action, it is held it can do nothing to influence Mexico or to satisfy American Catholics because of the essentially internal nature of the question.

Kellogg Declines to Comment.

If American citizens should suffer injury under the religious law which became effective July 31, the United States would act at once in a positive way, it is declared because such injury would constitute a violation of treaty rights created by the treaties of 1831, 1848 and 1853. So far, however, no such case has been reported to the Government, it is said.

After seeing President Coolidge, Secretary Kello declined to comment on the Mexican situation, believing that discussion would intensify the acuteness of the religious question between the Church and the Mexican Government.

After making his speech at Plattsburg on Wednesday Secretary Kellogg will return here, to remain several days with the President.

The Secretary announced that he had made an appointment to see Ambassador Sheffield, who is now on the way home from Mexico, in Washington on August 25.

Hopeful on Court Reservation.

Another subject that interested the President greatly was the Secretary's report on the attitude of members of the Permanent Court of International Justice.

While several members have approved the American reservations to the court protocol during the last six weeks, Uruguay being the latest, bringing the number to five, Secretary Kellogg said that this Government had been advised by several countries that they had reservations under consideration, but would not reply to this Government's letter until the members of the court met in Geneva in September.

Government officials feel rather confident that this meeting will remove the reported hostility to our reservations and that the court will accept them.

Should the reservations be rejected it is felt that the Senate will not make any changes in them to satisfy the objectors, and that the United States therefore will not become a member of the court.

It is understood that the leading members of the court, who desire to see the United States become a member, have been informed of the American position, and they are expected to do what they can to influence the objectors to accept the reservations and hasten America's entry.

Secretary Kellogg had no comment to make on the Clemenceau letter or the developments at Geneva in the arms preliminary conference.

It is understood that his speech at Plattsburg on Wednesday will deal with the arms question and will amplify the Administration's position on further limitation of armament.

President Coolidge hopes that the Geneva conference will produce positive results.

Toronto Lady Gets Letter Which Was Mailed In 1891

TORONTO, Aug. 18 (Canadian Press). — Thirty-five years ago a friend of Mrs. J. T. Marshall, wife of the pastor of a local Baptist Church, wrote to her from Glen Rae, Lambton County, Ontario. The letter has just arrived here, having taken 35 years to travel less than 200 miles. Evidently it had rested in the dead letter office for the greater part of that time. Stamped on the front of the envelope is the date, "October 22, '91," and on the back, "Toronto, Ont., Oct. 27, '91." Mrs. Marshall was attending the Toronto Normal School at that time.

NO TRACE FOUND OF MISSING MAN

Search By Large Party of Men Has Not Brought Results.

SCOURING COUNTRY.

No trace has yet been discovered of John Tighe, the 81-year-old retired farmer, who disappeared from the home of his son, Howard Tighe, of the Fifth Line of Smith, on Monday morning.

The searchers, numbering over 100 men, scoured the country yesterday, and only desisted from the efforts at the approach of nightfall.

Yesterday afternoon County Constable S. R. Pearson took charge of operations, and the search was continued among the swamps and woods in the neighborhood.

Although Mr. Tighe was in his younger days a man of exceptionally powerful build, it is thought unlikely that he would have been able to walk very far without being exhausted.

When last seen, Mr. Tighe was carrying a stick to aid him in walking.

COTTON SPINNERS FORM ASSOCIATION

Many British Companies Unite To Control Price of Yarn.

MANCHESTER, Eng., Aug. 18.—(Canadian Press). — The formation of a limited company to be known as the "American Cotton Yarn Association," was decided upon at a mass meeting of spinners yesterday. This organization will have as its object control of the prices of American yarns to prevent their being sold at a loss.

Two hundred and thirty three companies with more than 19,000,000 spindles are uniting in adherence to this scheme, comprising 78 per cent. of the total trade.

The spinners will become shareholders in the association according to the number of spindles they control, and penalties will be provided for members failing to observe the association's standard of minimum prices.

It is hoped by this means to provide for a reasonable profit and to raise a fund to prevent unfair competition from firms outside the combine.

Dies After Kissing Son At End Of Long Voyage

LONDON, Aug. 18.—Because she wanted once more to see her son, who had been away from her for fifteen years, a frail and ill mother husbanded her strength on the 11,500-mile journey from New Zealand to Southampton.

She reached the port yesterday, embraced her son and a few minutes later died in his automobile.

She was Mrs. Catherine Marsden, and her son, Albert Marsden.

During the long voyage Mrs. Marsden was attended by the ship's surgeon.

After placing his mother in his automobile the son left her for a few minutes. When he returned she was dead.

LOCAL FIRM ONE OF STORE UNITS IN BIG MERGER

Cressmans Is Included In Canadian Department Stores, Limited.

INCLUDES 22.

Financing of New Company Is Now Practically Completed.

TORONTO, Aug. 18 (Canadian Press). — Twenty-two department stores of Canada with appraised assets of about $10,000,000, are included in a new company, Canadian Department Stores, Limited, which is being formed by the Municipal Bankers Corporation of Toronto, according to a Toronto paper today. "The ultimate intention is to expand and enlarge the chain until it reaches from coast to coast in Canada. Sir William Hearst is president of the banking company, and Sir John Willison, is vice president," the report states. This merger of the interests is being effected in such a manner that there will not be any immediate issue of securities of any kind to the public of this country.

"The financing of this large and important enterprise has been practically concluded before any public notice is given of the formation. The capital consists of $4,500,000 of first mortgage bonds, which have been sold to New York interests; $3,600,000 of 7 per cent. general mortgage bonds, $4,000,000 of 7 per cent preference shares, and $2,500,000 shares of common stock of no par value. The proprietors of the store units entering into this enterprise, are receiving so much cash and part payment in securities issued by the company. $1,500,000 of the preference shares have been underwritten already. The average number of years in business of the shops taken over is 44 years. Two important business firms, one in Montreal and one in Hamilton, will be included in the list but their names are not yet mentioned."

The names of firms reported include the Robinson Company, Napanee; A. A. Fournier, Ottawa; Robert Wright and Co., Brockville; Ritchie Company, Belleville; Bristols, Picton; Dundas and Flavelle, Lindsay; Cressman Company Peterborough.

DELEGATES TRY FOR SETTLEMENT OF COAL STRIKE

To Open Negotiations With Owners and the British Government.

HAD CARD VOTE.

With the Proviso that the Settlement Must Be National.

LONDON, August 18 (Canadian Press).—The stage has again been set for negotiations for a settlement of the coal dispute. By a card vote of 428,000 to 360,000, the miners' delegates conference yesterday authorized its executive board to endeavor to re-open the negotiations with the owners and the Government, with the proviso that the settlement must be national.

The conference also decided to send letters of thanks to the American and other foreign trade unions which gave assistance to the British miners, and adopted a resolution protesting against a recent message sent by Premier Baldwin to the United States which the resolution asserted, "afford further evidence that the Government has definitely decided to assist the mine owners to defeat the miners by starvation."

The Minister of Labor and the Secretary for Mines returned from the country last night, and the Prime Minister has promised to come here to-day from his country seat in Worcester if his presence is required. Other members of the Cabinet are within easy call if needed.

RAIN IN WINDSOR FLOODS CELLARS; DAMAGE HEAVY

Loss of Half Million Is Estimated Result of Flood.

'PHONES OUT..

Little Lightning During the Storm, Water Causing All Loss.

WINDSOR, Aug. 18. —Damage estimated at $500,000 was caused in Windsor by the heavy rain of yesterday afternoon, when approximately three inches of water fell in 30 minutes. The basements of nearly all the downtown stores were flooded, and more than 2,000 telephones are out of commission.

The storm came out of the northeast, starting about 1.30 o'clock Twenty minutes later, according to the United States Weather Bureau in Detroit, two inches of water had fallen. Scores of calls were sent into the Fire Department by merchants and manufacturers, asking that pumps be sent. This was impossible, as Chief Clarence Derelds, who made the estimate of damage, feared that fires might result from electric wires being displaced and crossed by the heavy wind that accompanied the deluge.

Telephone System Endangered.

One pump, however, was sent to the main office of the Bell Telephone Company, Goyeau Street, where the basement was flooded to a depth of three feet. A rise of another few inches would have put the whole telephone system out of com-

Has Antidote For Fatigue But Refuses To Demonstrate It Amer. Lady in London Society Advises Standing On Head

LONDON, August 18 (United Press)—Mrs. James Corrigan, American Society hostess, who has penetrated the outer walls of London society has found what she claims to be an antidote for fatigue.

Before dinner, or after a tiring social function, she stands on her head.

"I put two pillows on the floor and balance myself on my head on them as long as I can. It makes the blood rush to my head and then I'm all right again," she says.

Mrs. Corrigan has told all her friends of her reviver but thus far has refused to demonstrate for them.

CLAIMS COFFIN WAS REMOVED

Not Same Shell in Which He Placed the Body.

INTEREST DIES OUT.

LONDON, August 18 (Canadian Press). — The disclosure that the coffin alleged to have contained the body of Field Marshal Lord Kitchener was empty appears to have eased the British mind to such an extent that interest in the "mystery" has died down. Britishers are no longer paying much attention to the vagaries of Frank Power, the newspaperman who brought the case holding the coffin from Norway. Power himself intimates that the coffin had been tampered with, and is quoted by one paper as saying: "It obviously cannot be the shell which contained the body which I placed in the coffin in Norway."

Power visited Scotland Yard yesterday and is believed to have asserted that the coffin had been surreptitiously removed from the case and re-placed by an empty shell. He declined to make any further statement until afforded an opportunity to examine the coffin, saying he had marked the original in such manner that he would be able to tell if there was any substitution.

The Home Office has advised Scotland Yard to keep in touch with Power and is awaiting any voluntary explanation from him or his associates. The legal advisors of the Government are still debating whether any action can be taken against him.

SMUTS FORCED TO END SPEECH

Former Premier of South Africa Howled Down at Johannesburg.

MANY FREE FIGHTS.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa, Aug. 18. —(Canadian Press). —General Jan Christian Smuts appeared on a political platform here last night for the first time since the Rand Miners strike of 1922 which led to a revolt that the Smutz Government put down with a firm hand after many rebels had been killed and many wounded.

It was a noisy meeting in which free fights occurred, and finally General Smutz had to quit speaking. An antagonistic element in the gathering shouted and hooted at the former Premier and waved red flags. Even an appeal for order from Col. F. H. Creswell, leader of the Labour Party received little attention from the demonstrators.

Prince Passed No Exams Reveals University Tutor

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 18 (Associated Press).—The Prince of Wales never worried about "exams," when he attended Oxford University, R. B. Mowat, Professor of History there, who is teaching this summer at the University of Washington, said in a published article yesterday.

"You couldn't examine a man who will be your King, you know," he said. "Besides, some one might be found who was better than his Highness, and that would be very embarrassing."

The Prince, however, was a very good student and obeyed all the rules, said the professor.

FRANCE TRYING TO STAVE OFF LEAGUE DEFEAT

Proposals For Control of Arms Opposed By Many Nations.

LATIN BLOCK SPLITS.

Spain and Italy Are United With Great Britain in Arms Conference.

GENEVA, Aug. 18.—Face to face with fundamentals, although after a fortnight of sessions, the Preparatory Disarmament Commission has registered no actual material progress, the Latin bloc has split wide open over the question of international inquiry commissions advocated by France as a method of enforcing disarmament.

Consequently, the French bloc is battling, not to put across its programme, but to stave off its first defeat. The spectacular break occurred in yesterday's session, when Italy and Spain joined Great Britain, the United States, Japan, Chile and the Argentine Republic in unqualifiedly opposing the French program of control. Germany continued to abstain from taking part, while Sweden and Holland are on the fence.

The French succeeded in retaining the support of only Finland, Poland, Bulgaria, Czecho-Slovakia, Jugo-Slavia and Roumania and consequently confronted with defeat, sought to withdraw the proposals which the Spanish chairman, Cobian, refused to permit. Speedy introduction of amendments by Roumania and other nations prevented a show-down, and gave the Latin bloc a breathing spell.

Motives Revealed.

The significance of the manoeuvres lies in the fact that behind the camouflage of technicalities France's primary motives are now revealed. The chief of these is a determination to continue supervision over Germany's armaments along the lines of the Versailles Military Control Committee.

The second vital plan will be revealed at the meetings of the Air Committee later in the week, when there will be a showdown on whether France will be able to maintain the restrictions on Germany's aircraft.

Although the Americans are participating in the fight against the French bloc, the delegation is absolutely outside the "inner circle," and has not the slightest information as to what is developing behind the scenes. Similarly, Japan is not vitally concerned except in

NEW ORGANIZATION IS FORMED TO BRING ABOUT BETTER FEELING BETWEEN OWNERS AND WORKERS

Will Rogers Adds Word To Channel Swim Talk

LONDON, Aug. 18 (Canadian Press).—Will Rogers, the comedian, broadcasting last night for the largest fee paid to a radio talker in this country — the cheque going to a hospital charity at Rogers' request—gave England half the credit for Miss Gertrude Ederle's feat in swimming the Channel.

"After all," he said, "Britain furnished the beach for her to land on; otherwise she would be swimming yet."

Commenting on the criticisms of Miss Ederle's swim, he remarked: "It would not have done Miss Clara Belle Barrett, who is six feet three, any good to have swum the Channel anyway. She is so tall they would have said she waded it."

CAR HITS TREE WOMAN INJURED

Visitor To City Is Cut While Touring With Friends.

CAR DAMAGED.

Mrs. E. Cooms, of Schrieber, Ont., was slightly injured in a car accident, yesterday afternoon, in Chemong Park.

Mrs. Cooms was the guest of Mrs. B. W. Harvey, 206 Sherbrooke street, and was taken out by her hostess, in company with two children, for a trip around the neighbouring countryside.

Some difficulty was experienced in steering the car along the sandy patches of the road, near the Government Wharf, in Chemong Park, but nothing untoward happened until, in mounting the sharp ascent on the road, Mr Harvey attempted to change the gear, and the car began to back down hill. The progress of the vehicle was stopped by a large tree.

Mrs. Cooms in her alarm stood up in the car, and was thrown violently against the back of the car by the impact and was injured about the head.

The screams of many women and children attracted the attention of Mrs. W. H. Bradburn whose summer cottage is in the vicinity. Mrs. Bradburn drove the injured woman to Peterborough Clinic where she was found to be suffering from shock and a slight flesh cut on the head. Four stitches were required to close the wound. Mrs. Cooms was reported to be feeling fairly well this morning.

Spectators of the accident declare if the car had not encountered the tree so early on its run down hill, the affair might have had a much more serious termination.

The back bumper was smashed and the rear right wheel damaged, but curiously enough, none of the glass was broken. The car was a comparatively new one.

Industrial Peace League Plans To Establish Five Year Truce.

IN ALL INDUSTRIES.

Hopes To Eliminate Strikes and Lockouts—Lewis Chairman.

LONDON, August 18 (Canadian Press).—A new organization, called "Industrial Peace League of the British Empire," has been founded, it is announced, to bring about industrial good fellowship between employers and workers in Great Britain, and eventually to establish a five-year truce between capital and labor.

In this way the promoters of the new organization hope to eliminate both strikes and lockouts. The leading spirit on the labor side is Havelock Wilson, veteran president of the National Seamen's Union.

Sir Frederick Lewis, banker and ship owner, is mentioned for the chairmanship, and Frank Hodges, former secretary of the British Miners' Federation, for the post of secretary.

Among the objects of the new organization are loyalty to Great Britain, sanctity of contracts, the right to work, and stamping out of the doctrine of class war. It is considered unfortunate for the prospects of the new society that both Wilson and Hodges are now discredited among the rank and file of British trade unionists.

CYCLIST KILLED BY AUTOMOBILE

Struck By Fender and Hurled Through Windshield of Car.

HIDDEN BY DUST.

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Aug. 18.—Harry Beaton, age 57, of Ridgetown is dead at his home in that place as a result of an automobile accident on Monday night. The victim was struck by a car driven by Herbert Watson, also of Ridgetown. He was crossing the street on a bicycle and it appears that Watson turned out to pass another car but did not notice the bicycle because of the dust stirred up by the long line of cars.

The man was struck by one of the front fenders, which threw him forward on the car, forcing his head through the windshield. The sedan stopped within a few feet and Beaton was picked up beside the rear fender. He died shortly after midnight.

CANADA NEEDS MANY SETTLERS STATES BISHOP

Britain Can't Send Capital To Replace U. S. Money, He Says.

CAN SEND MEN.

Deprecates Policy of Opposing Immigration To Keep Wages Up.

TORONTO, Aug. 18—"It is ridiculous for this Canada of yours to have nine million people with one hundred million people in the great country to the south of you. That is the reason Canada is so poor." With this utterance the Lord Bishop of London, on his arrival in Toronto last night, gave his attitude on what he considers the greatest handicap to the progress of this Dominion. "The Americans," he continued "own your fisheries, are exploiting your industries. While I was in Ottawa I took a great deal of interest in your wonderful power development, but it is American capital that is behind it. We, in England, want to see two things. We want to see Canada British, and we want to see you place yourselves on an equal basis with the United States so that you will be in a position to compete with them. The whole thing I believe which is keeping Canadian immigration hanging fire is a question of mismanagement. If five of your experts could be chosen—not from political parties—but experts to consult in conference with five of our experts, we might settle all the difficulties.

His Lordship believed that Canadians were too short-sighted in their view of the immigration question. There was one political party, he believed, that was even opposed to immigration because it might cut wages.

"If what I call this 'little England policy' is going to prevail, you are never going to be able to compete with Americans. More and more they will get a stranglehlod upon you. I believe they are doing so now to a certain extent." England cannot give you capital; what we can send you is a million and a half men to work up your capital.

"There is absolutely nothing in it," His Lordship declared strongly, when questioned with regard to the report of a possible cleavage in the Anglican Church over the Anglo-Catholic controversy. "It is a pure case of imagination, and I do not know who is responsible for it. The Archbishop of Conterbury has denounced strongly the fact that such a statement has been made. He called it "a pure lie and invention."

VICEROY OPENS INDIA ASSEMBLY

Says People Have Received Mosul Settlement With Great Satisfaction.

OTHER MATTERS.

SIMLA, India, Aug. 18. — Lord Irwin, the new Viceroy of India, in opening the Legislative Assembly here yesterday, mentioned the satisfaction with which the Mosul settlement was received by Indian, and particularly Moslem, opinion, and dealt at length with the position of Indians in South Africa, which, he said, was the most pressing of all Imperial questions affecting Indians. He remarked on the satisfactory outcome of the recent negotiations in this matter, which, he said, was due mainly to the wisdom of Lord Reading, former Viceroy, the restraint of the Indian Legislature and the broadmindedness of General J. B. Hertzog, Premier of South Africa.

Indians In Civil Service.

The new Viceroy referred to the Lee Commission on Public Services, remarking that the orders passed on by the Commission's report involved a very marked increase in Indianization of the great public services and the Public Services Commission, now constituted following the Lee report, would make it its duty to improve the machinery for recruiting Indians. The larger control over such matters that was being given the local Governments would go far toward meeting local requirements.

Observing that the British Parliament had given statutory recognition to India's right to move toward self-government, Lord Irwin said that the British and Indians had an indispensable part to play in the solution of the difficulties. Within three years at the most a Statutory Commission would be appointed to investigate the working of reforms. It was not part of the British purpose to force India into an uncongenial mould, and the character of events between now and the time of the commission's inquiry would have a great influence on its conclusions.

Great Task Ahead.

Lord Irwin said in concusion that India had an abundance of ability, but some of it had been directed along useless lines. They faced a future wherein all the resources India could command would be needed for one of the greatest tasks that ever enlisted human energies and hopes.

POLICE CHIEFS MEET IN CHICAGO IN CRIME WAVE

Delegates Get First-Hand Example of Criminal Methods.

USUAL QUOTA

Dynamiting of Jail Wall is Added Attraction for Visitors.

QUEBEC, Que., Aug. 18—(Canadian Press).—Whether or not ancient Rome burned while Nero played the golden lyre is a matter of small importance today with Mussolini playing all the instruments of government on unmuted strings. What is of far more immediate importance is that a number of modern Romans, now resident in the city of Chicago, played havoc with the law in the "Windy City" while the International Association of Police Chiefs of America were in convention solemnly deliberating the means of quelling the crime wave that threatens to render Chicago much more infamous than fame ever rendered Rome.

Dynamite explosions, blowing out one of the walls of the Chicago Jails, and releasing a number of desperadoes, most of whom were recaptured with the assistance of a cordon of machine gun bullets, the daily round of murders and near murders together with the customary flock of hold-ups and robberies, dominated the musical score which acted as an accompaniment to the great convention of Police Chiefs of America. The primary object of the convention was to discuss the necessity of greater co-operation among all the forces of law in the United States and Canada with a view to affording a better safeguard for the lives and properties of these countries against the increasing ravages of crime. In such a perfect setting it is almost needless to say that the delegates were convinced of the aforesaid necessity.

According to Chief Detective George Rioux of the Quebec Provincial Police, who has just returned from the convention, just when the gathering, which numbered nearly 1,100, were sitting in the Congress Hotel discussing ways and means for curbing of crime, the delegates were nearly shaken out of their shoes by a terrific blast. That blast represented the firing of high explosives which had been introduced in some mysterious manner into the Chicago Jail with a view to levelling the walls so that the prisoners could walk out to freedom. Incidentally it proved that the underworld element behind the bars is still accessible to the desperate attempts at rescue on the part of their outside confederates.

Quebec Man's Impressions.

Chief Detective Rioux, in the course of an interview on the subject of the Convention, said he believed that the lawless element of Chicago seemed to have concluded that since the Police Chiefs were busy themselves thy would have no time to attend to regular business. And so it seemed, for in addition to the explosion and jail-break referred to, guns barked their message of death in various parts of the city, knives flashed and black-jacks swung. The value of human life hit a "new low" on the Chicago market, street robberies were committed with the utmost audacity, homes and stores were broken into and wast amounts of money and loot carried. And all the while the Police Chiefs of America sat in convention.

Touches of grim humor were added to the situation when some of the delegates rose to inform their colleagues that Chicago could not be called a really lawless city. Even while the calcium was being applied, crime was rampant within the city, thugs, second-storey men, and murderers were going about their business with a spirit of abandon born of a feeling of immunity such as they never enjoyed before. Visitors to the city, Chief Rioux said, could not fail to be impressed with the utter disregard of law which criminals practised, and the utter contempt for police and punishment manifested by the denzins of the underworld.

While the Convention did not reveal its findings for publication it is believed that new methods will be tried out in an attempt to curb the ascendancy of crime in Chicago. The failure to deter crime with sure and inexorable punishment is held responsible in a large measure for the existing situation.

Corruption and Collusion.

The police are not to blame, according to the view expressed by Secretary Herbert Hoover, who added that the most extraordinary example of corruption and collusion betwen jail guards and the denizens of the underwold had been brought to light during the probe of the Chicago jail explosion. Liquor and narcotics were being supplied to the inmates of the prison from a house situated right opposite the jail. A prisoner who wanted a drink or a "sniff of coke" simply had to whistle and a supply of liquor or drugs was immediately forthcoming through the good offices of one of the prison guards.

It was brought out in the course of the convention that the huge sum of $3,620,000 went into the hands of criminals during the year 1924 and it was feared that when figures were compiled for 1925 that sum, startling as it may appear, will still be increased.

One of the delegates referred to the drunken automobile driver as "worse than Jesse James" and Mr. Rioux said he fully agreed with him. Sixty days on the stone pile without the option of a fine appears to have been effective in certain states to cure the man who endangers his own life and that of others by driving a car when "liquored up."

The question of the drunken auto driver brought Chief Detective Rioux to explain to the convention some of the benefis to be derived from the adoption of the Quebec liquor law and to point out, without wishing, he said, to give the U. S. government any advice or counsel, that in his opinion prohibition had probably been one of the causes of the increase in crime across the border. Mr. Rioux' short paper on the Quebec Liquor Act appeared to be listened to with particular interest by the members of the Police Chiefs' Association.

Papers on a multitude of subjects all of particular importance to police officers were read and discussed at the various meetings of the convention and a number of Canadian police authorities, including Col. Cortland Starnes, Commissioner of the Canadian Royal Mounted Police; Dr. D. A. Clarke, deputy minister of health at Ottawa; F. W. Cowan, narcotic drug division of the health department; Inspector Foster, criminal investigaion department of the R.C.M.P.; George S. Guthrie, Inspector of Detectives, Toronto; S. J. Dickson, chief of police of Toronto and Chief George Rioux, took an active part in the deliberations. Chief Rioux was satisfied that the convention would have a very beneficial effect and would tend to closer co-operation of all the police forces in this country and United States for the prevention of crime. He believed the ever growing crime wave on this continent could be and would be curbed through a more intimate relation between all organizations formed for the better protecion of the people's lives and property, in Canada and across the line.

CHILEANS KNOW CANADA WELL

Young South Americans Tour Ontario and Quebec to See for Themselves.

ARE DELIGHTED

QUEBEC, Que., August 18 — (Canadian Press).—There is nothing more cosmopolitan than a hotel register, and no hotel register more cosmopolitan than that of a Quebec hotel. The signature of famous folks from all over the world is therefore no surprising sight to the reporter whose beat calls upon him to make a daily "scan" of the arrival list, but when in addition to arrivals from this world he encounters names, the owners of which could only come from the next world, some slight occasion for surprise develops.

That is exactly what happened today. Conning the list of arrivals the reporter experienced a slight shock when he found the names of "Huerta" and "Diaz" staring him in the face. "Shades of Mrs. Aime McPherson" he ejaculated, "what can this phenomena portend?" A hurried inquiry, however, calmed his "spirit fears" for it turned out that though the visitors bore the names of the two former presidents of the Republic of Mexico their interest in that troubled country both ended and began with the mischance of nomenclature. They are not Mexicans at all but Chileans. They are Mario Huerta and Augusto Diaz, nephews of the ambassador for Chile at Washington, Miguel Cruchaza. Mr. Huerta and Mr. Diaz are travelling in a party, the other members of which are Enrique Chirgwin, secretary to the Chilean Embassy, and Mrs. S. Claro and her two daughters of Santiago, Chile. This is their first visit to Canada.

Both Mr. Huerta and Mr. Diaz expressed themselves as delighted with what they had seen of Canada. They had motored from Washington to Niagara Falls and then proceeded to Quebec. From here, after spending a couple of days, they proposed going on to Montreal and Toronto returning to Washington later on.

Mr. Huerta and Mr. Diaz are well informed as to the unique position which the province of Quebec holds in the Confederation of Canada and the North American continent. Their primary object in coming here was to make a personal study of the historical situation. Mr. Diaz is a recent graduate in law of the Catholic University of Santiago and is returning shortly to take up the practice of his profession. Mr. Huerta is a student of the same University and is spending part of his vacation on this continent for the purpose of familiarizing himself with the people and the problems of Canada and the United States.

In discussing the progress of the Tacna-Arica boundary dispute between Chile and Peru, which General Pershing tried unsuccessfully to settle a year ago, Mr. Diaz, who exhibits a keen interest in international politics, declared that the dispute remained in the status quo. Negotiations were still in progress, however, and hopes were entertained that the problem would be solved to the satisfaction of both parties in the near future.

Mr. Diaz explained that after the last war-like eruption between Chile and Peru the province of Tacna-Arica, which had been owned by the former, was now claimed by both. A plebiscite was to have been held to decide the matter, both countries agreeing to abide by the verdict of the vote. Due to some minor disagreements, however, no plebiscite was ever held, and finally the President of the United States was asked to appoint an arbitrator. General Pershing was thereupon commisioned for the task and dispatched to the scene. He conducted an exhaustive investigation, but so far it would appear that the longed-for settlement has not been achieved.

AMERICA OWES RALEIGH MUCH

British Leader's Imperialism Resulted in Development of Country.

HOWARD'S ADDRESS.

MANTEO, N.C., Aug. 18 (United Press). — The imperialism of Sir Walter Raleigh has resulted not only in the development of America, but also in the growth and spread throughout America of new ideal of industrial and international peace, Sir Esme Howard, British Ambassador, said in a speech here today.

Sir Esme spoke at the second day celebration of the 339th anniversary of the birth of Virginia Dare, first white child of American nativity. The speech was delivered on Roanok Island, the site of the ill-fated colony founded by Raleigh in 1584, which was wiped out without a trace after only a few years of existence.

Comparing Raleigh to Cecil Rhodes as an Empire builder, Sir Esme said:

"I am far from upholding everything that was done by the first Empire builders of any race. They were often selfish and brutal and cruel in their dealings with the aborigines. They abused the power given them by their superior civilization, but can any one seriously maintian the theory that it would have been better if the world and humanity that the civilized and barbarous continents should have remained uncivilized; barbarous and with their great natural resources undeveloped without knowledge and eductaion, without any of the benefits of modern science—for that is what the wholesale condemnation of that much abused word means.

BRITISH MEMBERS REFUSE COMMENT

Won't Talk About Canadian Election Campaign—Visit Niagara.

TORONTO, August 18 (Canadian Press). — Delegates of the Parliaments of Great Britain and the Irish Free State arrived here this morning from Ottawa, headed by the Right Hon. Arthur Henderson. They are on their way to Australia to attend the re-union of the British Parliamentary Association. Approached for comments on various phases of the Canadian election campaign, the members of the party were very reticent.

Later in the morning the party left by automobile for Hamilton and Niagara Falls as guests of the Ontario Government. Accompanying the party were Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Prime Minister of Ontario, Hon. W. F. Nickle, Attorney-General, and Hon. Geo. S. Henry, Minister of Public Works. The Ontario Government will entertain the members of the party at a banquet here to-night upon their return from the Niagara Peninsula. To-morrow before their departure for Western Canada they will be guests of the City of Toronto at luncheon.

THIS LETS MOON OUT OF RAINFALL DEBATE.

WASHINGTON (By NEA Service).—The moon has nothing to do with rainfall, and there is no such thing as a wet or dry moon, the U. S. Weather Bureau declares. Recent investigations have disproved the old saying that the moon is wet if it hangs as though pouring ing out something, and dry if the points of the crescent are turned up. According to this saying, the equator should be always dry, whereas the region is notorious for heavy rains.

Montreal Cab Horses Wear Crocheted Hats

MONTREAL, Que., August 18 (Canadian Press).—Montreal horses are following the fashion set by Montreal women in adopting crocheted headwear for the summer months. On Windsor Street, the city's most popular horse-cab rendezvous, several of these equine crochet models may be seen. They are of the Cloche variety, fitting snugly over the ears and head. They are made of coarse tan thread, while the individual touch which distinguishes the chapeau from the hat is achieved by the tassels at the tip of the ears. One model had red tassels; one had tan, and a third, tasselled on the right ear, had the left ear untrimmed, a very nice chic touch.

The old yellow straw hats, with the ears protruding, looked quite out of date by contrast. The cabbies of the crochet-hatted horses modestly declared that the artistic appearance was quite accidental, the primary purpose of the creations being to keep the flies out of the equine ears.

POWER CLAIMS COFFIN MOVED

Some One Tampered With Casket, Is Still His Contention.

WAS WARNED.

LONDON, Aug. 18. — (Canadian Press). — Frank Power, British news paperman, who recently announced that he had found the body of late Lord Kitchener, to-day reiterated his contention that some one had tampered with "Kitchener coffin" which the Home Office found empty.

Although he makes no direct charge against anyone, he is asking the question of what the Home Office has done with inner coffin shell which he says contained the body of Kitchener. Before the coffin's arrival at Waterloo station, he said, he had been repeatedly advised to take every precaution. He quoted a "very eminent man," as saying to him, "if they can, they will diddle you at last."

He said he intended to continue his investigation to find the body.

EXCITING TRIP.

Daughter of Marquis of Kedleston Canoes Through Rapids.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Aug. 18. — (Canadian Press). The Baroness Ravensdale, eldest daughter of the late Marquis of Kedleston, has been thrilled by an exciting and adventurous journey in a Cowichan river canoe trip from the Lake to the Sea. The canoe, guided by two skilful Indians was towed by motor boat to the river's head, then for two days it shot rapids, glided smoothly past wonderful scenery, or was carried in portage.

CANADIAN GIRL LONDON ACTRESS

Miss McHugh Is Added To List of Successful Ladies.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 18. — (Canadian Press). — The Gazette's London, Eng., correspondent has this to say of a Canadian actress:

"When I wrote a short time ago of Miss Florence McHugh's performance in "Granite" as "the most delightful small servant ever seen on any stage, "I did not realize that she was yet another young Canadian winning success on the London stage. Miss McHugh made her first appearance in London in "Mr. Pepy's" when Clemence Dane saw her acting and was so impressed by it that she offered her the part in "Granite." Miss McHugh came from Calgary to study music at the Royal College of Music four years ago, and judging from her present performance she seems bound to have an extremely prosperous career."

Appearing in Montreal this autumn with a company of actors from Paris will be, Miss Antoinette Giroux, the young Canadian artist sent to Europe three years ago by the provincial government. Miss Giroux secured an engtgement at the Odeon Theatre in Paris, last season, and made such a success that she was the Porte St. Martin Theatre's selection for the present season.

mission for three months, officals of the company said, and only the good work of the fire pump prevented this.

Basements of the Prince Edward Hotel, where chairs in the barber shop were floating; Hotel Dieu Grace Hospital, police head-quarters and, in fact, every public building within four blocks of the river front were inundated. Several of the low-lying streets, especially Sandwich Street near the Ford factory, were three feet under water; street car service was tied up for more than an hour, and automobiles had to be routed along other streets.

Sewers Prove Inadequate

City Engineer M. E. Brian tonight said that it was the worst storm in the city's history, so far as he could remember. The sewers, he said, were wholly inadequate to carry off the rush of water and this resulted in a big back-up in the downtown districts.

Except during the first hour of the storm, there was very little thunder and lightning, so that most of the damage was the result of the flood. The temperature, which had been hovering close to the 80-mark fell abruptly to 63 degrees within an hour. No persons were injured, so far as reported.

CAR ACCIDENT AT POTTERY CORNERS

Miss Olivia Graham Receives Minor Injuries When Car Turns Turtle.

OMEMEE, Aug. 18.— When returning to Toronto after having visited her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Glenny, of Omemee, Miss Olivia Graham, of Chicago accompanied by a girl friend and four young cousins from Toronto, happened with a motor accident at Pottery Corners, near Lindsay. Miss Graham, who was driving, did not notice the turn to the north until she was well over the road. She attempted to turn and in so doing overturned the car. Miss Graham was pinned under the car and sustained a broken finger, a small bone broken in the forearm and several nasty gashes, one of which required fifteen stitches to close. A tragic fact in connection with the accident was that, unknown to the four young cousins from Toronto, who had accompanied Miss Graham to Omemee, their mother lay dead in Toronto, having passed away quite suddenly. Miss Graham was taken to the home of Miss Welsh, where her injuries were attended to by Dr. Rick, of Lindsay. She was later removed to the Ross Hospital, where she remained until the beginning of the week, when she was accompanied to her home in Chicago.

Mr. I. Glenny attended the funeral of his daughter, the late Mrs. Wm. Whiteside in Toronto, on Saturday, this being the third death in the family within the last six months.

Improvements are steadily being made in the village. New cement walks are being laid on Colborne street and also on the east side of Sturgeon street. Three new Hydro lights have been placed on Mary street, one near Mr. Fred Evans' residence, one near S. T. Faulkner's and another back of Mr. W. Moncrief's.

Mr. Rutherford, of Orono, purchased 31 head of cattle from Mr. J. Bushnell and 11 head from Mr. Norman Fee last week. 26 of this number were shipped to Toronto from Omemee for beef and were in excellent condition. The remainder were taken to his home at Orono.

A large congregation attended the unveiling of the memorial tablet to the memory of the late T. C. Stephenson on Slunday evening in Christ church. The tablet, which is placed just over his former position in the choir chancel, was unveiled by Mr. Robert Johnson and a feeling tribute to the worth of a staunch church man and a worthy citizen were paid by Rev. H. Earl, of Port Credit, who was rector of Christ church at the time of the tragic death of Mr. Stephenson, and who was also a very great friend of the deceased gentleman.

Following this service, Rev. H. Earle delivered a very impressive sermon, which was thoroughly enjoyed by his former parishioners.

"Oh! I thought you were Mr. Jones"

It's a bad moment—when you realize you've spoken to someone you don't know. Everybody makes mistakes, of course, but no matter how much poise you have, you feel a bit silly anyhow.

The chances are you didn't know Mr. Jones really well—or you'd never have made the blunder. You've never seen anyone you'd actually mistake for your brother or sister or husband or wife, have you? It's casual acquaintance that leads to errors.

People look alike; so do razor strops and flower seeds and hats and pianos. If you want to buy a Jones hat and you know all there is to know about a Jones hat, you're not likely to blunder and get some other hat. The same is true for a Jones piano or a Jones razor strop.

The easiest way to know everything there is to know about such things is to read advertising. The advertisements in this newspaper are here to tell you quickly and truthfully the main facts about the things you buy and use. They are here to prevent you from making mistakes. Mistakes that may be costly.

WHO MAY VOTE.

A newcomer to Canada asks The Examiner who is entitled to vote at the coming Federal elections.

The answer is simple.

Any person (with some few exceptions which do not concern the great mass of the people) who is a British subject and who is 21 years of age is entitled to the privilege of voting, provided he or she has ordinarily resided in Canada for the year preceding July 20 last (the date the election writ was issued), and has resided continuously in the electoral district in which he or she wishes to vote since May 20th last.

In answer to a further question, there is no difference made by the law respecting the qualifications of electors as between men and women.

They have equal rights as regard to franchise in Federal elections.

MAKE SURE OF YOUR VOTE.

It is not an encouraging discovery to find that the local registration of voters in connection with the coming election was very slight in some polling subdivisions, fewer than half a dozen names being added to the lists.

It may be that most people who registered last year believe that because they did so they do not need to again register.

While some of those names added last October still remain on the lists, in other cases names may be missing, and voters should have protected themselves by making inquiries last week in order to take advantage of the registration proceedings.

However, there will be a chance later on by appearing before the revising officer to remedy omissions in the lists, and The Examiner advises all electors to take nothing for granted in regard to their names, but to see the lists at one of the rival committee rooms and make sure that their franchise is protected.

An examination may reveal the fact that names are omitted, and there will be time to have the error rectified by the revising officer.

It is a matter of most vital importance, and no elector who is worthy of the franchise should be willing to risk losing his opportunity to vote.

Don't leave it to the political organization to protect you; find out for yourself if you are on the list while there is yet an opportunity to have your name added if a mistake has been made

CO-OPERATION NEEDED.

(By Roland Denne.)

To me we have the finest small city in Canada, but we lack that spirit of co-operation necessary to develop it, so that we may obtain the greatest benefits.

As a place to live and bring up a family it is unexcelled. It has its own natural beauties, and also within easy distance, numerous beauty spots that are far above the average.

Its schools and staff of teachers are among the best in the Province.

Its manufacturing plants are diversified, and while we do not get the booms of some other towns or cities, yet we do not experience anything like the depression.

Our merchants are progressive and serve the citizens as faithfully and as satisfactorily as business men in other places.

Our forms of amusement are clean and conducive to healthy boys and girls—hockey, skating, baseball, softball, swimming, fishing, theatres, parks.

We have fine churches and excellent pastors and church organizations.

Homes, lawns and gardens all well kept, not a slum district in the whole city. In fact, we have every advantage that any other small city has and many they have not got.

Yet we do not get together the way we should, and to my mind the organization that is doing the most to bring about a kindly feeling between the city and the country is the Exhibition Board. This is all right so far as it goes, but what about co-operation among ourselves?

Be a booster of everything pertaining to Peterboro. If some organization is behind any project everybody should get behind them. If there were less of "everybody for himself" and more of the spirit of co-operation, I think we would get ahead much faster.

LEARN TO SWIM.

The announcement of the intention of the Peterboro Rotary Club to father a campaign by which every non-swimmer in Peterboro will be given a chance to learn to swim will doubtless be welcomed by the public, sickened by the appalling list of drowning accidents.

There seems not the slightest doubt in the world that a general knowledge of the art of swimming would greatly reduce the number of drownings which in this Province alone last year amounted to 307.

In this country of countless lakes and rivers, where the charm of water resorts irresistibly attracts our people, it is of the greatest importance that as many as possible should learn at least the rudiments of swimming.

The ability to keep one's self afloat even for a few minutes might easily prove the margin between life and death, and each year scores of people are drowned because they have not even learned to take a few strokes.

The directors of the Rotary Club are determined that so far as Peterboro people are concerned they will have the opportunity to learn the art.

"Every one a swimmer by 1927" is the Rotary slogan is launching their campaign, and it is encouraging to note that the effort is to begin at once.

The swimming pools of the Y.M.C.A. and the [illegible] as long as the conditions are favourable for outdoor bathing the services of swimming instructors at the city's beaches will also be used.

Every non-swimmer in the city will be sought out and offered an opportunity to learn to swim under auspices that will make the task an easy one.

There is no mystery about swimming.

Under skilful direction a few lessons will give the average beginner a good start, and proficiency will come in proportion to the amount of practice.

No exercise is more delightful, no recreation offers more enjoyment, than swimming, and the ease of mind that goes with a knowledge of the art gives a new enjoyment to the summer holiday.

The Examiner is delighted to be able to announce this Rotary swimming campaign and to commend it heartily to the people of Peterboro.

TROUBLE IN THE GOLFING WORLD.

The game of golf is now a matter of such real consequence in the world, played as it is by millions of men throughout civilization, that almost anything concerning it may be taken as worthy of notice. One thing concerning it which has been the subject of a great deal of interest, and even a little excitement in the golfing world, is the size of the ball, or rather the size and weight combined. Some of those restless experts who are always trying to improve something in every game, are busy trying to improve as they think, the style of the golf ball, and therefore, we imagine, giving annoyance to the vast majority of players of the game.

The first golf ball was made of leather stuffed with feathers. It could not be hit very far even by a good player, perhaps to a distance of 100 or 120 yards. Then somebody invented a gutta percha ball. This could be hit, or, in golfing parlance, driven, 170 or 180 yards. Then came the invention of the present rubber-cored ball, which under a steady progress of improvement has reached a point where a first-class player can "drive" it 250 yards or even more. Some of the giants of the golfing world can send it a distance of even 280 or 300 yards.

This latter fact it is which has disturbed some of the experts. They think the ball goes too far. They argue that because the ball goes so far it is becoming necessary often to lengthen golf courses. They think it would be better to have a ball which would not go quite so far, and that this ideal should be accomplished by requiring in the game a standard ball, a little larger and a little lighter than the best balls now in use, and which consequently could not be hit to so great a distance.

As the greatest pleasure which any golf player, good or bad, feels that he can get in the game is in hitting the ball to the greatest possible distance, the idea of changing the ball to a lighter one is certainly unpopular with most golfers. But the executive committees both of St. Andrew's in Great Britain, the chief golfing power there, and of the United States Golf Association, appear to have a very strong disposition to adopt the plan of a lighter ball—and if the majority of the golfing world who certainly do not want a lighter ball wish to check possible action against their predilections, they seem to need to be making vigorous protest. Some pointed remarks on the subject appear in a recent issue of the London Observer, which says:

"It is all very well for the British and American Joint Committee to state, 'that it would be a mistake to take any step which would diminish the pleasure obtainable from hitting the ball, though it is eminently desirable that its power should be diminished,' but they fail to recognize, or refuse to recognize, the undoubted fact that the greatest pleasure derived by the mass of the public is in hitting the ball a deuce of a distance with a wooden club. That they rarely hit it very far is neither here nor there; the point is that to rob them of that one delicious wallop in a week of general foozling is something that they are not likely to put up with. A good honest swipe delivered from the exact centre of the clubhead, and a resultant drive of 250 yards, will wipe out the memory of the dozen or so half-topped, half-smothered efforts, and transport the player to the seventh heaven."

The chances are that 99 out of 100 golfers will agree with the foregoing, and why not? The argument about the necessity of lengthening golf courses really seems rather superfluous in view of the sort of thing golf has got to be. Lengthening golf courses certainly costs money, but what does that matter? If the money is not available, a course can be let alone. The golf will be just as good, despite the restlessness of the experts. If the money is available, a course can be lengthened if the members feel like it. The main point is that millions of golf players get satisfaction at present in trying to hit a ball a long way, and feel the greatest delight the game can give when they do succeed in getting in a first-class crack. Why do anything to spoil this, even remotely? One is inclined to think that the matter must be pretty well summed up by the concluding paragraph of the article in the Observer:

"The truth of the matter is that the ball as we know it is giving the maximum of pleasure to countless thousands of players, whether they be plus or long-handicap golfers, and to do anything to curtail their enjoyment will meet with a universal chorus of disapproval."

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

One riding in which there cannot be the usual apathy over voting is Athabaska, where in a division with only six residents 82 votes were placed in the ballot box in the last Federal election.

Newspapers are beginning to dust off the slogan, "Vote as you like, but vote."

Gertrude Ederle is something more remarkable than a champion swimmer according to one article which describes her as "a plain home girl." It was generally thought there were no home girls left.

West Peterboro's rival politicians are campaigning in the north part of the riding just now, but still a lot of the residents can dodge them by taking refuge in the huckleberry marshes.

Just when the mosquitoes are beginning to lose their early season punch, the politicians arrive on the scene in the hinterland.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 18.—(Canadian Press).—The foreign demand for Manitoba spring wheat on the Montreal market yesterday was fair and sales of a few loads were made, but the trade in coarse grains continued slow. There was also an improved demand from Canadian and United States exporters for ocean grain room from this port for September loading and the engagements were fair.

A feature of the local cash grain trade was the demand from exporters for Manitoba spring wheat and purchases of several loads of No. 3 Northern were made at 9 3-4c per bushel over October option, C.I.F., Montreal. An easier feeling prevailed in the market for Canadian Western oats and prices for car lots were reduced 1-2 cent per bushel.

The enquiry for spring and winter grades of flour continued quiet but prices were well maintained in bags.

Considerable business was transacted in millfeed and the undertone to the market was firm. The feeling in standard grades of rolled oats was steady with a small trade passing.

The turnover in eggs was moderate sized and prices were unchanged. The receipts were 2,890 cases.

A moderate amount of business was done in beans and the tone of the market was steady. Sales of choice white hand-picked were made at $2.25 per bushel in car lots, and $2.35 to $2.45 per bushel in broken lots.

The butter trade was featured by the improved demand from English importers and a moderate amount of business was done. The local situation was quiet but steady. The receipts were 1,538 packages.

The cheese market was quiet and prices were fractionally easier. The receipts were 17,999 boxes.

CHICAGO CATTLE.

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—(Canadian Press)—Cattle, 10,000; choice yearlings early active, about steady, other fed steers dull; mostly 10 to 15 cents lower or 50 cents under last week, top yearlings 10.65; heavies 985; bulk fed steers selling 1,350 pound upward 8.75 and 9.50; bulls mostly 10 to 15 cents lower; vealers 50 higher 13.50 and 14.50.

Hogs 22,000; top 13.55; average 170 to 190 pounds, 190 pounds upward, 13.45; bulk desirable hogs averaging 210 pounds 13.25 and 13.50 bulk 240 to 325 pounds average 11.50 and 12.60; most packing sows 10.00 and 10.60.

Sheep 17,000; bulk western 14.00 and 14.35; top 14.45; top natives 14.25; bulk 13.75 and 14.00; sheep weak to 25 lower; feeder lambs strong, bulk 14.00; some sales downward to 13.50 and below.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—(Canadian Press).—Active selling which developed toward the last in the wheat market brought about a sharp downward swing of wheat values yesterday. The selling was largely due to 13,634,000 bushels increase shown by the available supply of wheat in North America and Great Britain and afloat on ocean passage Closing quotations for wheat were unsettled 1 to 1 1-2 net lower, corn unchanged to 3-8c off; oats 1-4 to 3-8 down, and provisions varying from 2 cents decline to a rise of 17 cents.

Much of the selling pressure in the wheat market came from houses with connections northwest, although reports from Canada told of general rains causing delay to the Canadian harvest. On the other hand advices from the American northwest indicated better threshing returns than had been looked for especially as to Minnesota and upper North Dakota.

Scantiness of export demand for wheat, though, was of considerable effect as an incentive to sell as the day drew to an end.

Corn and oats reacted with wheat. Weather conditions were regarded as favorable for the new corn crop, and it was pointed out that number 2 corn at Philadelphia was being quoted 6 3-4c under Chicago September as against half cent under in the Chicago market.

Provisions were firmer on account of the mid-month showing of warehouse stocks available in Chicago.

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

"WOULD" AND "SHOULD"

(By The McClure Syndicate.)

A letter to a New York newspaper takes President Harding to task for writing "I would prefer" instead of "I should prefer." The writer of the letter says:

"'I would like,' 'I would prefer,' etc., are abominable English. 'I would like' ignores the well recognized and delicate shade of difference between 'will' and 'shall.'

"Let us take a close view of one of Mr. Harding's sentences: 'I would very much like to have a new appointment to the office which you occupy.' On the face of the above quoted sentence, the meaning seems to be that Mr. Harding himself has had an appointment to the office and that he is now seeking a new one. Had Mr. Harding been well advised he would have written the sentence thus:

"'I should very much like to make a new appointment to the office that you occupy.'"

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

BRACE UP.

It is doubtful if any human being has ever evidenced greater mental courage and made more real progress under the most trying handicaps than Charles Bronner.

In the World War he lost both eyes, both hands and left the army with sleeping sickness.

His early education amounted to very litte, but last June he graduated from the University of Maryland as a lawyer.

Handless, sightless and with sleeping sickness, this soldier of misfortune battled against terrible odds and is today a living example of the truest valor. He dared to live and carry on when death to most men would have been courted as an honorable discharge.

It is a source of great personal benefit to read a record of such genuine gameness. It shames most men into success.

When my left arm has a little rheumatism, my left wisdom tooth a little pain, I make a terrible fuss. and so do most men.

When we have perfect sight and can see the glorious gifts of nature—when we have all of our physical advantages, we often murmur or complain. When we are surrounded by hundreds and hundreds of hopeless, helpless invalids while we are well, we have the nerve to find fault. We complain like little children until something like this record of genuine gameness jolts us. Brace up you big, healthy, he-man lest Fate sends you something that will excite the pity of even an enemy.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

SOME GOOD TO SAY

If one can only say a word to make the face of sadness smile,
If someone else has only heard our singing for a little while,
We need not say when day is done that all the day was lived in vain,

I think the day that paid me best was not the day I made the most,
Though those were days I thought were blest and those the things I like to boast.
And yet the dollar that I made another morning I shall spend—
I know that I was better paid some quiet day I made a friend.

We cannot always win the race, we cannot always fortune find,
But I have never seen a place that had no chances to be kind.
Whatever shadows may have crossed my path along life's troubled way,
I shall not think the day is lost if I have found some good to say.

MONEY OF THE MOVIES

(By Dr. Frank Crane.)

It is difficult for us to realize the rapid growth of the movie industry.

A generation ago the business did not exist. Now it runs into the millions.

If anyone were to say that an enterprise now not in existence and not even thought of will control a billion dollars in forty years, we should think he was drawing on his imagination. Yet look at the recent figures about the movies.

It is estimated that there will be spent in Southern California this season approximately $102,800,000 for new productions. This is an increase of almost twenty per cent over last year. It means the filming of over three hundred feature pictures, which is about eighty-five per cent of the total produced in the entire country.

More attention is being paid nowadays to the better quality of pictures. This contrasts strangely with last year when many pictures of the lower class were produced.

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Company will spend $25,000,000, or ten per cent over what it spent a year ago.

The Famous Players-Lasky Company, which last year spent $15,000,000, this year will spend $22,000,000. Seventy per cent of this will be spent in Hollywood.

The third company in size is that of the Warner Brothers, who aim to spend $14,000,000 on this season's productions.

Out of its $10,000,000, $6,400,000 will be spent by the First National Company in Hollywood and Burbank this year.

The United Artists and the Producers Distributing Corporation are down for an expenditure of $10,000,000.

Also the Film Booking Corporation will spend between six and seven million dollars, and between five and ten millions will be spent by various other independent producers.

From these statistics one may gather what a tremendous financial enterprise the moving picture industry is.

It was taken out of the hands of the artists, and the kind of pictures and the amount made are no more determined by the actors, but all that is arranged by shrewd business men. And it is worthy of note that most of them are Jews.

KUOMINCHUM ARMIES ARE IN FULL RETREAT AFTER SUFFERING HEAVY LOSSES AT NANKOW PASS

Are Tearing Up Railroad Tracks To Help Check Pursuit.

BASE AT KALGAN.

Yield Town of Hwailai To Allied Forces Without Resistance.

PEKING, Aug. 18 (Canadian Press)—The Kuominchun, National armies of the government, overthrown last April, are in full retreat to their base at Kalgan, 116 miles northwest of Peking. Forced from Nankow Pass, after heavy bombardment in which both sides are believed to have suffered heavy losses, they yielded the town of Hwailai, north of the Pass, to the allied forces of Marshalls Wu Pei-Fu and Chang Tso-Lin, without resistance.

Falling back toward Kalgan, seventy miles from Hwailai, the national armies are tearing up the railroad tracks to check pursuit. Somewhere along the northern side of the loop of the great wall of China, of which Kalgan is a gateway toward Mongolia, they may make their stand.

Since July 2 the Kuominchun had held Nankow Pass, 1,900 feet above sea level, against the efforts of Wu Pei-Fu, China's foremost cammander, to dislodge them. Modern warfare methods were used by the opposing forces.

The Kuominchun, well commanded and drilled, fell back in good order to Hwailai, but threatened with a bombardment from the hills with outranging guns, continued their retreat northward without offering fight.

That the Kuominchun have been dealt a decisive blow seems unlikely. At their backs lies Mongolia, across which by two caravan routes, they are believed to have been receiving aid from Bolshevistic sources of Russia. From Kalgan, if need be, they may continue their retreat by railroad to Tatangufu, or turn on their pursuers in high mountain passes.

Another influence hindering the elimination of Kuominchun and the firm establishment of the new government at Peking is the northward march of armies of the government of Canton, far to the south. The Cantonese forces, believed also to be subject to Bolshevistic domination have pressed the troops of Wu Pei-Fu hard in the central provinces, which he rules as over-lord and he is preparing to leave the campaign against the Kuominchun to others, in order to combat the menace in the south.

Up to the present Chang Tso-Lin, dictator of Manchuria, has left the conduct of the campaign against the Kuominchun to Wu Pei-Fu, Chang remaining quietly at his capital, Mukden.

BRIDGE GRANT FOR HASTINGS NOT ADEQUATE

Special Committee of Counties' Council Ask For More Money.

$150 LIMIT SET.

Echo of Counties' Council Debate During June Sessions.

(Examiner Correspondence).

HASTINGS, Aug. 18.—After an inspection of the floor surfacing of the Hastings bridge the special committee delegated by the Counties Council to attend to it has decided that the work could not be completed for the sum of $150, specified as the outside limit of expenditure. Action has therefore been deferred until the County Roads Committee is canvassed for their approval to exceed the amount set by the Council at Cobourg in June.

The bridge was inspected a few days ago by Warden McCubbin, Reeve Hess, Deputw-Reeve Nelson of Percy and Reeve Harry Bedell of Brighton Township.

Their decision and its consequent delay fulfills the predictions by members of the Counties Council opposing the restrictions which Deputy-Reeve Maher of Cobourg insisted should be imposed upon spending committees in such work as the repairing of the Hastings bridge. Mr. Maher objected that blank checks should not be issued for the payment of work in the townships carried out with Reeves as commissioners. He contended that the cost could be estimated in every instance, and should be mentioned in any resolution authorizing commissioners to supervise local work to be paid for out of the counties' treasury.

Mr. Maher's opponents contended that such undertakings would be delayed by postponements to obtain further sanction for expenditure beyond the stated amounts, and that the proposal offered no suggestion or means to greater efficiency or economy.

At any rate Dr. Hess was held to $150 for covering the bridge floor, but he refused to assume the work under the conviction that the grant was insufficient. Accordingly, he waited until the County Roads chairman, Mr. Bedell, and the other commissioners arrived to examine the requirements of the job. And as a result nothing will be done unless and until more money is forthcoming.

CORNER STONE LAID AS PART OF DAY'S PROGRAM

Will Be Permanent Memorial To Founder of Ottawa City.

OFFICIAL PRESENTS.

One of Features During Second Day of Centennial Exhibition.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 18 (Canadian Press).—Greetings from Empire Parliamentarians, the Mayor of Toronto and other visitors, at a civic luncheon, the unveiling of the corner stone of what will be a permanent memorial to Colonel By, the founder of Bytown, which later became Ottawa, the unveiling of a monument in Richmond, a short distance west of the city, marking the place where the Duke of Richmond died, were high lights in yesterday's programme of the centenary celebrations. In addition there were the stampede at the Exhibition Grounds, the historical pageant there last night, the motor boat races on the Ottawa River and the trap shooting competitions.

The By memorial will be located near the bank of the Rideau Canal, the construction of which he directed a century ago, and opposite the Central Station. The corner stone was unveiled by two former Mayors, C. Durocher and C. H. MacIntosh, both 83 years old, and Miss Eva Read, who is niece of a friend of Col. By. Addresses were delivered by Archbishop Emard of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Ottawa, Bishop Roper, of the Anglican Diocese of Ottawa, and Rev. George A. Macdonald, chairman of the Ottawa General Ministerial Association. A sketch of the life of Col. By was delivered by H. P. Hill. A wreath was laid on the stone, the gift of the Royal Engineers, for it was in that branch of the Imperial Service that Col. By served.

Rt. Hon. Arthur Henderson, one of the party of parliamentarians now crossing Canada on their way to Australia, was chief speaker at the luncheon given by the city. He brought the greetings of the British people. This 100th anniversary celebration, he said, was more than local or even national importance. It was world wide and of particular importance to the British Empire. He remarked on the beauties of the city and prophesied a great future for it. Major Bryan Cooper brought the best wishes of the Irish Free State.

Mayor Foster of Toronto pointed out that Toronto was once a rival seeking to secure the Parliament Buildings, but once Ottawa was chosen, Toronto, along with the rest of Canada, were proud of the Federal capital, its natural and architectural beauties. He proposed the toast to the city of Ottawa.

MEIGHEN SPEAKS AT VANCOUVER

Holds Open Air Meeting in Front of Parliament Buildings.

CONCLUDES VISIT.

VICTORIA, B.C., August 18. — (Canadian Press).—Premier Meighen yesterday closed his visit to Vancouver Island with an open-air meeting in front of the Provincial Parliament Buildings. The meeting opened with a curious incident. As Mr. Meighen passed up the steps of the Parliament Buildings, Hon. John Oliver, the Liberal Premier of British Columbia was there to greet him, smiling broadly.

The two Premiers grasped hands and the crowd broke out into laughter and cheers. Mr. Oliver remained through the meeting, sitting to the left of the chairman's table.

Mr. Meighen opened with amusing references to Mr. Oliver's presence. He warmly thanked Mr. Oliver for his courtesy. "May I venture to assure him," said Mr. Meighen, "that there will be nothing said to-day with which, if he will disabuse his mind of certain unfortunate impresions, he won't be able.

sions, he won't be able wholly to agree, if the argument of the day produces upon him the impression that it should, then I think we can call the verdict of the Canadian people unanimous."

"Seeds of Distrust" Sown.

Mr. Meighen referred to "seeds of distrust" which he said were being sown in regard to his Government. First he was an "autocrat" then a "Cromwell," and now a "dictator."

Mr. Meighen said that Liberals were trying to create the impression that returned men would not be safe if Conservatives were elected. "What" asked Mr. Meighen, "gives the Mackenzie King party the right of custody of the soldier now that the war is over." He spoke of the revaluation of soldier settlers' lands.

He announced the intention of his Government to present a bill for revaluation of soldier settlers' land on practical basis.

In the meantime, he would consider whether some means could not be found for the remission of the year's interest.

Mr. Meighen touched on the effect of dissolution, on uncompleted legislation, and asserted that had Mr. Mackenzie King obtained the dissolution he sought the effect of that legislation would have been the same as the dissolution granted.

Blue-jay will enable you to wear the loveliest, most extreme shoe styles without fear of corns

Paring a corn is dangerous... unless you're a chiropodist

There are two safe ways to remove a corn—

(1) go to a good chiropodist and let him pare it.

(2) get a package of Blue-jay at the drug store and remove the corn at home.

There are other ways. But many are dangerous. Paring your own corns is especially so, since a slip of the blade may mean an ugly infection. But Blue-jay is absolutely safe, as well as sure. A cool and downy pad, soft as velvet, fits over the corn, relieving the pressure and pain at once. Soon the corn goes—unless unusually stubborn. But even the most obstinate corn seldom needs more than a second plaster.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

PRACTICAL WORK TRAINING YOUTH

Peterborough Business College Equips Its Students For a Successful Business Career.

One of Peterboro's active establishments, that it always to busy to make much noise, is the Business College. Here the student, young or old, is quietly but thoroughly prepared for their life's career. A competent staff of teachers, assisted by an equipment that ranks among the nest of its kind in Canada, guide the studies of an earnest body of pupils so that no time is lost or missteps made.

That real, practical training is obtained at the Peterboro Business College, is evidenced by the many letters of appreciation that come from its graduates who have been placed in lucrative positions in Detroit, Rochester, Toledo, Toronto and other Canadian points, as well as with nearly every firm in the city. One lady student, recently placed in Detroit, receives an initial salary of $1,600.00 a year,and has since been raised to the position of head stenographer.

The equipment of the school includes a Book-keeping pactins machine, adding machines, mimeograph adressing machine, many typewriters, etc., all of the most modern type procurable.

There is always a demand for the trained young man or woman, and any one who is in earnest and worthy, can be satisfactorily prepared for their life work at the school.

The fall term opens on Wednesday, September First, and it is not too soon to take up the question of what is to be done this fall and coming winter.

A call, and talk over the matter with Mr. J. A. McKone, president of the College, is the best thing to do as a preliminary to enterins the business field.

R.B.P. CHAPTER ATTENDS CHURCH

Annual Service of Millbrook Knights Held on Sunday.

MILLBROOK, Aug. 18.—Grace Presbyterian church was filled to capacity on Sunday evening when a large turnout of members of the Royal Black Preceptory No. 945, attended divine worship, Rev. Thomas Dodds, of the Dixie and Islington circuit, west of Toronto, who was exchanging pulpits with the pastor, Rev. John Riddle, for the day, preaching an inspiring sermon to the Order.

The Citizens' Band under the leadership of G. A. Duncan, headed the parade from the Lodge rooms to the church, members from Peterborough and Blackstock Preceptories joining with the local brethren for the occasion. Past Preceptor, Worshipful Sir Knight, J. H. Paul, who is Director of Ceremonies in the County Preceptory, fulfilled the duties of this office as far as was necessary on Sunday evening.

The special musical number given by the choir, was an anthem "Sing to the Lord with Thanksgiving", with duet by Mrs. L. C. Russell and Miss E. Hunter.

Rev. Mr. Dodds chose his text from Psalm 80:18: "So will we not go back," and urged that these words might be fittingly taken as a motto for every life. The Order to which he was speaking, the minister said, stood for the highest, truest and best ideals, and he compared conditions in Mexico, Spain, and Italy, from a religious and national standpoint, with those existing in Canada where a church had opened wide its doors in warm welcome to the organization.

"We are so prone to interpret our lives from the standpoint that we really are what we think we are; but marching with the Order, with the band playing, is a very different thing from being in actual warfare for its principles. Have we ever made any sacrifice for the best things to which we insist we are so devoted? Have we even taken the first step ino the Way of Truth as revealed in the Word of God? And yet upon the principles laid down in its pages the Royal Black Preceptory is founded.

Definitely to commit oneself to a regular study of the Scriptures will mean a changed life, individual and national, he said, for when the soul comes face to face with God there will be a readiness to obey his commands.

"Discipline is necessary for soldiers, and when the Great Leader calls us to walk with Him, should even one follower be out of step he disturbs in some way the fellow who is next to him in the march. Put self, not Christ, on the cross; cheap religion is unreal religion; that life is thrice anchored which has a few great pledges and memorials that may get old, but never weaken, though it may sometimes hurt to keep them; David praised 'him who sweareth to his own hurt but changeth not.'

"Absolute trustworthiness of word and deed is obligatory upon the individual, the organization, and the nation, or the banners which should have been floating in the very sky will be found tarnished in the hands of man, and all other light will go out. Were there not some of those who sang, 'We'll never let the Old Flag fall', who gave a poor, weak response to the challenge to put on the khaki, and go out to actual warfare?

"Keep the standards up, the principles high, God is not going to take us back, but forward; and yet God is not always speaking in the voice of disaster, but in the still, small voice in times of peace, and in the ordinary duties and routine. It may some day fill us with shame when we see exposed the low ideals, the selfishness, the wilfulness, which deafened the ear, and darkened the understanding, so we may not have heeded, nor even recognized, God's calilng to the higher way of living.

"The command to 'love your enemies' may be the battle ground that calls for the highest courage to bear the standard in the Way of Truth, and victory can only come with the word of Christ, 'be of good cheer, I have overcome the world', and the faith that elevates the soul as there comes the experience 'this is the will of God that ye believe on Him whom He hath sent.'

The usual votes of thanks were passed upon the return to the Lodge rooms, and lunch was served to the visiting brethren before they left for home. Worshipful Sir Knight, A. V. Thorne is the Preceptor of the local R.B.P. No. 945.

COOKING CLASS IS CONCLUDED

Successful Course in Domestic Science Held in Cavan Hall.

MANY ATTEND.

CAVAN, Aug. 18.—The domestic science class under the auspices of the Women's Institue of Cavan, held in Cavan Community Hall, for two weeks, with Mrs. Gordon Cooke of Beamsville as demonstrator, closed on Friday.

It provided a very interesting and profitable course and was well attended throughout, in spite of the heat and busy season on the farms. There were 34 girls and ladies who took the course.

During the two weeks, lectures and demonstrations were given on the following subjects:

Food values, vegetables, eggs end milk, canning, cereals, cheese, meats and meat substitute, flour mixtures, cake, desserts, salads, candy and icings. An extra lesson was taken on cake, candy and icings.

The fee for the course was fifty cents for non-members of the Institute and twenty-five cents for members. Those paying the fifty cents would be members of the Institute for a year.

On Friday afternoon the members of the class were privileged to invite one visitor to attend the class and remain for afternoon tea. The members of the Institute were also invited. There were at least seventy-five present.

Mrs. Cook, on that afternoon, demonstrated candy-making and the icing of cakes. A lunch was served by some members of the class to all who were present, consisting of several kinds of sandwiches, many different kinds of cake, ice cream and delicious candy (peanut-brittle, marshmallow, after-dinner mints and divinity fudge).

All with the exception of the ice-cream had been made on Thursday and Friday at the class.

It was a great demonstration of culinary skill, and of the work which Mrs. Cooke had been endeavoring to demonstrate and teach to the class. The lunch was nicely served, with a choice of lemonade or tea or both.

A vote of thanks to Mrs. Cooke and the class for the entertainment provided and which all had so thoroughly enjoyed, was moved by Mrs. Matchett and seconded by Miss B. McNeil, on behalf of the Institue and visitors present.

Ruth Staples presented a box of chocolates to Mrs. Cooke, from the class. Mrs. Cooke made a suitable reply, expressing her pleasure in coming to Cavan for the second time. She had addressed an open meeting of the Institute in May.

You'll like Bon Ami Powder. Just as you've always liked Bon Ami Cake.

Women who have used it are all singing the praises of this other form of Bon Ami. The same magic ingredients in a handy, sifter-top can. Soft and scratchless, Bon Ami Powder blots up dirt without hard work.

It cleans and polishes quickly, and thoroughly. Nothing can equal it for making the bathtub glisten, cleaning the refrigerator, or restoring the lustre to aluminium, copper, agate and tin.

But for windows and mirrors, most housewives prefer Bon Ami Cake! Convenient in size and very economical.

Gentle to the hands, gentle to the surface it cleans—Bon Ami in either form is the magic cleanser. Women find it an economy of time and money to keep both these "partners in cleanliness" in the home. They meet every cleaning and polishing need.

SAYS GOVERNOR MUST OBSERVE BRITISH SCHEME

King Tells Moose Jaw Audience That It Is Necessary To Keep Connection.

MOTOR INDUSTRY.

Says Business is Increasing and Price of Cars Lower.

MOOSE JAW, Aug. 18 (Canadian Press).—Right Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King, leader of the Liberal party, continued his Western campaign tour with an address here last night, in which he declared that if Canada wished to keep her British connections a strong rule should be laid down that the Governor-General in Canada is in the same position in relation to the political parties as the King in Great Britain.

Mr. King undertook to express his view of "the true and constitutional relation between the Governor-General and the ministry of the Dominion." He referred to the fact that a new Governor-General would be in Canada within a few weeks.

"My view is that if we want to keep strong our British connection we will lay down the rule that the Governor-General in Canada is in the same position in relation to the political parties as the King in Great Britain," he said. "I believe that when the election is over, the people will have made their view clear, and whoever is Governor-General will accept the advice of his Prime Minister, and if the advice is not sound will leave it to the people to decide."

"We were told we were ruining the motor industry," said the Liberal leader, referring to the last Government's record. "Four thousand persons had come to Ottawa from Oshawa saying that the food was being taken from their children. What is the situation today? In Oshawa two new factory buildings were being put up. In Ford City the output of cars is greater than ever before, and yet cars are materially lower in price to purchaser.

"All Mr. Meighen has to offer is an all-round Protective system. I cannot see how that is going to help any one in particular in this part of the country," said Mr. King.

PROGRESS MADE IN 'HOLY LAND'

Land is "No More Desolate" is Report Given By Missionary.

SERMON AT COBOURG.

COBOURG, Aug. 18.—That the Palestine of today is "no mere desolate" was the message which Rev. S. B. Rohold, of the Mount Carmel Bible School, Evangelical and Medical Mission to Israel, brought to the chuches and Christian people of Cobourg. Rev. Mr. Rohold is at Haifa and is the well-known missionary to the British Jews. Mr. Rohold spoke in Trinity United Church Sunday morning and at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Sunday night. He developed his theme along seven distinct lines, geographical or physical, topographical, mercantile, military, lingual, evangelical.

In speaking of the physical change in the country, he told how one of the ancient prophecies was being fulfilled in the opening up of the highway from Egypt through Palestine into Syria. He told of the difficulties and perils of journeys taken 25 and even 15 years ago, which took weeks riding camels or horses to perform, and now could be accomplished in a few hours or at least in a few days. He spoke of the former perils and discomforts which he himself, with others, had experienced on these trips. He told of the topographical changes in the country. Where formerly had been desert and morass and bog, the eucalyptus tree had been planted. The swamps had been drained and waste places made to bloom as the rose.

Mr. Rohold spoke as a man whose heart was filled with a great joy; for the time had come, he averred, when the words: Thy shall be no more desolate" can be uttered with fullest confidence, and to the praise of the Covenant keeping God of Israel. He went on to tell of other marvellous changes which he had witnessed in the land during the last few years, and he is satisfied that in the Providence of God these changes adumtrate the day when with divine favor the heritage of Jacob in the picturesque language of the ancient see'r, shall "break forth into singing and all the trees of the field shall clap their hands," over the return to Zion.

Mr. Rohold is a native of Jerusalem and represents the fifth generation of a family long known in the City of Peace. He labored for some time in Toronto as a minister of the Presbyterian Church. Of late he has been in Palestine, where he has witnessed the uprising of the Holy Land, which twenty-five years ago was but a lively expectation, but is now an established fact.

British a Symbol of Trust

During the past decade, things that were in anticipation when the Great War came, have hastened to a ripe realization. To go back five years is to recall a situation that does not now exist. For example, at that time, the word British was held in distrust throughout Syria, and there were those who thought such a condition should continue if France were to come to her own in that region. Now the case is altered; the word British is a symbol of trust and confidence and this without anything in the nature of political propaganda having been attempted.

The language gulf is also being bridged, and Arabs as well as Government officials and others use the three languages of the country—Hebrew, Arabic and English. Again, the Hebrew language is being used among the people of the Palestiae of today.

The Linguistic Link

Young Jefry is leading the people and Klauzner continues to represent a new spirit in the land. The young jews, the Klauzner, have supplied also a linguistic link between the Hebrew language and Modern Sciences. Already the technical terms required in the study of anatomy, biology, geology and the whole range of modern culture are to be had in the Hebrew language. The printing presses of Jerusalem, driven by electric power, are all the time providing a literature in the Holy tongue. The traditional Yiddish is in disgrace, and the returned remnant of His people thinks and speaks and writes in Hebrew in a manner that gives a present significance to the words of the Lord by the mouth of the ancient prophet. "Then will I turn to the people a full language."

The Chief Cornerstone

There are in the land some forty thousand Chalutzim or pioneers, many of them highly educated, nd these want to know what the Christion faith stands for; what it means. Singular to say as the Old Testamen goes among them, so does also the New Testament. In a manner unknown in other lands, these keen enquirers buy the Book. What does that represent in regard to the faith of Christ? These Chalutzim, the rebuilders of Zion, are up against the question, whether the Holy City can be built without regard to the shiem corner-stone. If the new Zion is to realize the divine ideal, Christ, the King of the Jews, must be in the plan.

Mr. Rohold is optimistic of the future, for now in the Twentieth Century the things predicted by seers and awaited by those who had read their writings have been accomplished in marvellous fashion.

WAGON DRIVER KILLED BY TRAIN

Struck at Private Crossing on C.N.R. and Terribly Mutilated.

HARD OF HEARING.

PALMERSTON, Ont., Aug. 18. — Solomon Frietz, 60 years of age, was instantly killed at a private crossing a mile and a quarter west of here yesterday afternoon, when the wagon he was driving was struck by a south-bound passenger train on the Kincardine C. N. R. line. Frietz's body was terribly mutilated, the team of horses were killed also, and the wagon demolished.

A young man, also engaged in hauling gravel had passed over the crossing ahead of Frietz, and had tried to give warning. It was claimed that the victim was slightly hard of hearing. Frietz' home was in Elmira. He had been working for H. Lorch, of Wallace township, since May, and for the past three weeks had been drawing gravel for the Palmerston-Listowel highway. He was unmarried.

An inquest will be held by Coroner James Moore, at Listowel.

POLL OFFICERS TESTIFY THEY STUFFED BOXES

Put Extra Ballots In To Give Good Impression of District.

IN ATHABASCA.

Sought More Roads and Bridges For Larger Population, Says Witness.

EDMONTON, Alta., Aug. 18. — (Canadian Press).—Alleged irregularities at the Frog Lake and Parenteau polls, including padding of voters' lists and stuffing of ballot boxes, were revealed before Justice Clarke's inquiry into the Athabasca election last October, at sessions at Frog Lake.

William Robertson, deputy returning officer at the Parenteau poll, yesterday stated that only seven or eight persons actually had voted at that poll although 74 are listed on the poll book as having done so.

Questioned as to who had entered the extra names, Robertson declared that he had the put the extra ballots in the box, and the poll clerk W. T. Crook, had written an equal number of names in the poll book.

Robertson denied that any one had told him to do this. He said he thought that if the poll made a good showing, it would be thought that there was a fair population in the district.

Crook, giving evidence, declared that both he and Robertson went "fifty-fifty" in the decision to stuff the ballot boxes.

On Five Voters' Lists.

Charles Delorme declared he and his son were on five voters' lists, were shown as having voted on four, although they had only voted once.

Mrs. S. Grainger, enumerator at the Frog Lake poll, said she made her list from the Provincial district boundaries, and did not find out her mistake until election day. She had 107 or 109 on her list, and could not explain how the list produced in court had 119 names, only one of the additional names being in her handwriting.

George Dewey, poll clerk at this voting division, stated that while the poll book showed 75 as voting, 19 had been added by him at the suggestion of Harry Jenner, deputy returning officer, who is now serving two years in the penitentiary for balot box stuffing.

Fred Bowtell, an old resident of Frog Lake district, declared that it was he that had suggested to Jenner that more names be added as having voted.

"Nobody suggested it to me," said Bowtell, "I just did it in an offhand manner. I thought that, maybe, if we showed enough votes we should get more roads and bridges at this point."

He said he did not know for whom the "extra" votes were cast.

The inquiry continues on Thursday at Gibbons.

POWER UNABLE TO FIND MARK

Says Coffin Is Original One, But Inner Shell Has Been Changed.

HIS MARK MISSING.

LONDON, Aug. 18 (Canadian Press)—The Press Association announced last night that Frank Power, the moving spirit in the "Kitchener coffin mystery" had declared he examined the coffin, and that it was the original coffin in the original packing case which he had brought from Norway, but the inner shell he had never seen before.

Power examined this inner shell closely, the Press Association asserts, but was unable to find the private triangular mark he had cratched on the original shell for identification purposes. He added that he had received most courteous treatment from the officials of Scotland Yard who had asked him to keep in touch with them.

McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablets Fine For Thin Under Developed Kids

Children Love Them Because They Are Sugar Coated and as Easy to Take as Candy.

It's your duty, Mother, to see that the frail, peaked, sickly youngster grows up to be strong in body, keen in mind and robust in health.

Extracted from the livers of the lowly codfish are the health, weight and strength producing vitamines that are found in McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablets, which are sold by pharmacists all over North and South America.

Doctors know about them and so does McDermid and Jury and Bond's drug stores, and if your children need building up ask for these tablets to-day if you want to give your loved ones a good appetite and put pounds of good healthy flesh on their bones.

But be sure and get McCoy's.

They are not expensive—60 tablets 60 cents—and if you are not pleased with the improvement after 30 days, your money back.

A very sickly child, age 9, gained 12 pounds in seven months and is strong and healthy.

One skinny woman gained 9 pounds in 24 days.

OBITUARY.

JOHN GOOLEY.

The funeral of the late John Gooley took place August 5th, from the family residence to St. Paul's church, Norwood, where Requiem high mass was sung by Rev. J. J. McCarthy, and was attended by a large number of friends and relatives from far and near.

At nine o'clock the funeral cortege left the house and proceeded to the church and cemetery, where interment was made in the family plot.

Mr. Gooley was born in Asphodel township 66 years ago and when a boy of 18 he moved with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Gooley, to Chandos, and in 1891 he was married to Ellen O'Brien in St. Peter's Cathedral, Peterboro.

He resided in Chandos until seven years ago when he moved back to Asphodel, again among his schoolmates. Mr. Gooley was a hard working man and always was in good spirits and tried to make it happy for his wife and family. He started to build a barn in April and continued working at it untill it was completed a week before he died. He took ill very suddenly and was moved to St. Joseph's hospital on July 31st and underwent an operation.

On the following Tuesday morning his wife went to see him and he seemed quite bright and asked different things about the home and on the afternoon they got the sudden news to come at once but when they arrived he was unable to speak to them.

Pall-bearers were his five sons and only brother, Dan Gooley, Young's Point.

WILLIAM JACKSON.

MOUNT PLEASANT, August 18. —The death occurred on Tuesday morning of William Jackson, at his home, Lot 23, Concession 14, Cavan. The deceased was born eighty years ago on the same farm on which he died. His father, John Jackson, and his mother, Maria Brady, were born in Emily and were among the early pioneers of the country.

The late Mr. Jackson enjoyed the loyalty and good fellowship of a very wide circle of friends. He lived a straightforward life and won the respect of all who knew him.

In religion he was an Anglican, and in politics a Conservative. He was a member of the Canadian Order of Foresters at Mount Pleasant, Court Primrose, No. 250, and he was also a member of the Emily Orange Lodge, No. 41, under whose auspices the funeral was conducted. Left to mourn the loss of a devoted husband and loving father are his sorrowing wife, three sons: Lorne, Melville, and Stanley; three daughters: Mabel and Emena at home, and Mrs. James Elliott, of Smith; three sisters; Mrs. Walter Scott, Mrs. William Scott and Mrs. William Fowler, all of Peterboro.

The funeral, which was very largely attended, took place from the family residence on Thursday, August 12, being conducted by Rev. Earl of Port Credit, who was a former pastor of the deceased, and who is supplying in the absence of Rev. Weir of St. John's Anglican Church, after which interment took place in the Emily Cemetery.

The pall-bearers were: Albert Finley, Wm. J. Finley, Fred Branch, James Elliott, Robert Dunlop, and John Graham.

The floral tributes in loving memory and respect were many and beautiful.

The Department of Agriculture reports that more than 683,000,000 fruit and vegetable containers were manufactured in the United States in 1925.

WOMAN INSANE IS JURY VERDICT

Not Responsible For Killing Her Two Children After Quarrel.

NOW IN ASYLUM.

NEWDALE, Man., Aug. 18 —(Canadian Press). — "About dusk Hazel went to sleep and I put the rope around her neck in a slip knot and held it till she was dead. She did not wake up. Later in the night I did the same to Dorothy. Twice I tried to strangle myself with the rope, but failed."

This was the statement made by Mrs. Jennie Marshall, accused of strangling her children to death at the home of her father, W. J. Hampton, near here, August 12, and read at the coroner's inquest.

The jury returned a verdict stating that Mrs. Marshall was suffering from "temporary insanity and was not responsible for her act." She is at present confined to Brandon Asylum. Relatives of Mrs. Marshall testified at the inquest, stating that for the past year the woman had suffered from the illusion that the police were always after her, and that her friends and neighbors were ridiculing her. On the day preceding the tragedy she had quarreled with her father about one of the children, stayed in her room, with the children, refusing food, and the next morning walked down to the breakfast table, and announced to the family:

"Hazel and Dorothy are dead. I strangled them with a rope."

FASHIONS

By HEDDA HOYT

(Written for the United Press).

NEW YORK, Aug. 17 (United Press).—Red-hot Mammas in Pajamas are the ones who create a furore at Parisian summer resorts this season. The scant one-piece bathing suit may be extremely high-tide and as striped as a zebra but it can't compare with the demure pajama for attraction.

Of course, the P.J. isn't worn in the water, although it is often of semi-water-proof silk. It is merely a beach garment to be worn before and after the dip. It is astonishing how chic the mannish pajama looks when worn by a smart boyishly-bobbed person. It must be worn over a tight-fitting bathing suit to avoid bulkiness.

The trousers may hang straight or they may be gathered into ankle bands. The jackets have mannish lapels—often of contrasting color, and cords wrap about the hips at a low waist-line. Plain-colored crepe de chene that is semi-water-proof, forms many of the newer pajamas although flashy cretonnes still are noted. Plain colors, however, have the preference both because they are new and because they look most attractive under the cubist parasols which are almost invariably carried with them.

The beach parasol this season is either flowered in huge floral designs or it is printed in eccentric cubist designs. Backgrounds are usually a neutral tan with the design carried out in numerous vivid colors and black. Parasols are not the huge affairs one would expect to see on the sands but are quite small, being designed to cover one head rather than two.

The rubber beach shoe is the one most generally worn since sandals with numerous straps and lacings went into the discard when mannish beach attire came in. Japanese wooden sandals with painted straps extending over the instep are worn when the Japanese beach kimono with vivid designs is the cover-all. These cotton kimonas with black backgrounds and vivid Japanese figures are more popular in America than abroad, it seems. Women who have purchased them inform us that the color used in dyeing these kimonas comes off on the body and if this is true, they will pass out this season.

A Charming Interpretation of The Sports Frock

Sports frocks are most effective when they are fashioned along lines of chic simplicity, and they particularly appeal to the smartly-dressed woman. The model pictured here shows its Paris inspiration in many important ways. The dashing little collar buttoned at the neck, the shirrings at the shoulders, the pocket treatment, the slashed and buckled belt, and long full sleeves. An inverted plait at each side is held in place with a row of round buttons, and provides a youthful flare. The collar is convertible and may be worn turned back to form revers. YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

Coral is today's talisman. It is a symbol of strength and good health and the ancients believed that one who wore a coral ornament was preserved from all harm. But the gem must be whole and not chipped or broken, for the good spirit who dwells therein takes instant flight when its abiding place is disturbed.

Today's natal stone is the moonstone which is said to endow its wearer with the power to foretell future events.

Yellow is today's color. Women wearing it will be the beneficiaries of unexpected generosity. Men, however, may look for deceit from one who flaunts the sacred color of India.

Th marigold is today's lucky flower.

HER OWN WAY by a Girl of Today

JOAN IS BUSINESSLIKE

"Oh," Joan exclaimed as though she were interrupting some one. "Of course, I am very sorry that Mr. Elkins has been ill, but I am sure if he is able to see you now, he will be able to see Bud and me. I wish you would tell him that I am coming to see him tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. If he is not able to see me I understand that his son has taken over much of his legal business, and I think that he might make the settlement of Bud's and my estate."

There was another silence on the part of Joan and then she said, excitedly:

"No, I cannot possibly wait until next week, as I hope to be on my way to Europe by that time. If Mr. Elkins is able to see you, he surely can see Bud and me whose attorney he is. I believe, Dad, you have another attorney.

"The reason I didn't tell you I was going abroad because I did not know it until today. I might as well tell you now that Bud will also want a large sum of money because he is going to make an expedition into Africa right away."

Joan listened again and then answered:

"No, I am not at home. I have been out all day. But I am leaving the Blackstone immediately and will probably be home before you. In any case I want you to tell Mr. Elkins or his son that I want to see one or both of them tomorrow by 10 o'clock."

I was surprised at Joan's decisive way of giving orders. For a moment I did not realize that this was one thing that she should do perfectly as she has been doing it all her life. Some one made her decisions for her, some one smoothed out the hard places, but she was the one who ordered them to do it.

"Do you know, Judy," she said afterwards, "that just before I hung up the receiver Dad asked me who had talked with him in the first place."

"I thought you mentioned my name," I said, "but I wasn't sure."

"Yes," she answered. "Dad said he didn't know that I knew you, and that was when I answered that you were my dearest friend and were going to Europe with me."

"What did he say to that?"

Joan frowned.

"I don't think I'll tell you. But you heard what I answered, didn't you?"

"Yes," I quoted, "you said, 'after tomorrow, Dad, you will have to let me choose my own friends, handle my own business, take care of my own finances and live my own life'."

"That was it," said Joan triumphantly. "I think it was a pretty good answer, don't you? That was when I hung up the receiver with such a bang. I didn't intend Dad to give me any more back talk after that."

The Popper Gun

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

HOMES were made to be lived in and enjoyed. One feels there is something lacking when he enters a home where children are and sees no evidence of playthings and happy occupations. It isn't normal, and he feels that the children are somehow being cheated. There are so many necessary "May nots" that it does seem children might be allowed to play freely without being worried about mussing up the house. Energy spent in teaching children to put things away when they're through playing is much more wisely expended than in fretting because the house is being temporarily strewn with toys.

MAGNESIA BEST FOR YOUR INDIGESTION

Warns Against Doping Stomach With Artificial Digestents

Most people who suffer either occasionally or chronically from gas, sourness and indigestion, have now discontinued disagreeable diets, patent foods and the use of harmful drugs, stomach tonics, medicines and artificial digestents, and instead, following the advice so often given in these columns, take a teaspoonful or two tablets of Bisurated Magnesia in a little water after meals with the result that their stomach no longer troubles them, they are able to eat as they please and they enjoy much better health. Those who use Bisurated Magnesia never dread the approach of meal time because they know this wonderful anti-acid and food corrective, which can be obtained from any good drug store, will instantly neutralize the stomach acidity, sweeten the stomach, prevent food fermentation, and without the slightest pain or discomfort. Try this plan yourself, but be certain to get pure Bisurated Magnesia especially prepared for stomach use.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

(By Edson R. Waite.)

That the way to get business is to go after it.

That an easy, sure and cheap way to go after it is by the right kind of advertising.

That some business men are alert enough to take advantage of this opportunity; some go further and act upon it; while others simply "sit steady in the boat" and do nothing and lose more than they ever know.

That a booster believes in his city—a crabbed grouch believes only in himself.

That you should stand by your city and see that she gets due credit for her progressiveness.

That the reason is simple why you should advertise. The greatest number of people read your papers, therefore, they offer the greatest opportunity of reaching the buyers.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

JOHN KEATS AND FANNY BRAWNE.

(The McClure Syndicate, Inc.)

"Oh, God! God! God! Everything that I have that reminds me of her goes through me like a spear . . . I can bear to die—I cannot bear to leave her."

This was John Keats, dying of consumption in far-away Italy, crying out in the agony of his soul for his beloved. The passion that the great English poet bore for the eighteen-year-old girl who was not beautiful, and whom he once called "ignorant, monstrous in behavior a minx," amounted at the time nar his death to a frenzy. It may have been that distance lent added fuel and created more enchantment to his love, for otherwise his extreme, passionate cryings for Fanny Brawne, left to us in letters to his friends, would be somewhat inexplicable.

Keats lived only twentys-ix years but during this short span of life he created poetry that has made his name immortal. Fanny Brawne, whom he met at twenty-two, ruled his emotions but it was his tragedy that his ailing condition precluded thoughts of marriage. In his letters from Italy, where he was sent in an effort to save him from tuberculosis, he writes: "The persuasion that I shall see her no more will kill me . . . I should have had her when I was in health and I should have remained well." Four months after he wrote this he was dead. His remains were buried in Rome.

His love letters to Fanny are gems of loving expressions, though their delicacy and figured phrases have caused stronger men to accuse Keats of being effeminate One of these letters follows:

"Ask yourself, my love, whether you are not very cruel to have so entrammelled me, so destroyed my freedom. Will you confess this in the letter you must write immediately?—and do all you can to console me in it. Make it rich as a draught of happiness to intoxicate me—write the softest words and kiss them, that I at least may touch my lips where yours have been. For myself, if I do not know how to express my devotion to so fair a form, I want a brighter word than bright, a fairer word than fair. I almost wish we were butterflies and lived but three summer days—three such days with you I could fill with more delight than fifty common years could ever contain."

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

(By Mildred Marshall.)

Facts about your name, its history; its meaning; whence it was derived; its significance; your lucky day, and lucky jewel.

(By The McClure Syndicate.)

ALICIA

This name is derived from the same root as Alice, and representing an attempt at greater euphony. The curious part of the whole thing is that the name in its original form is really not that of a woman at all, but of a man. It is derived from the Anglo-Saxon Adeligis, of which the feminine form was Adelgisa, but was not frequently given to women. Instead it was sacred to the sons of the house, principally among the nobility. The name itself means noble, in both its masculine and feminine forms.

The name is purely English, having, however, a slight Teutonic flavor. An argument is put forward by some experts that the name is derived from the Frankish Adalhert or Adelchen, meaning "daughter." Alix or Alisa in Lombardy was naturalized in England when Alix la Belle married Henry I.

The name, originally masculine, according to the best authorities, however, represents Adelgism and not Adelgisa, making the proper feminine form Aliza. Some believe that Eliza, generally believed to be a derivative of Elizabeth, is this missing form. For proof of Aliza as the representative of Adelgisa, the Liber Vitae of Durham records the changes in Adelgisa from the first noble lady of that name, who laid her gifts upon the altar. By contraction it became Adeliza, Aaliza and Aliza.

The talismanic stone of Alicia is the Alexandrite, a Russian gem. It is found in the emerald mines of that nation, being of a beautiful green shade which changes to columbine red. The Russians believe it brings great good fortune. When the subject of its favorite's dreams it signifies hope. Monday is Alicia's lucky day and seven her lucky number. Her flower is the white haw thorne a beautiful bud.

CENTURIES BY TWO PLAYERS FEATURE SECOND INNINGS OF FIFTH CRICKET TEST MATCH

Sutcliffe and Hobbs Win Highest Scores Yesterday.

PRINCE ATTENDS.

England Had Scored 375 For First Six Wickets.

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 18.—(Canadian Press Cable)—Centuries by Sutcliffe and Hobbs featured the second innings of the English team yesterday in the fifth cricket test match with Australia being staged at the Kennington Oval. Sutcliffe got 161 and Hobbs an even hundred. When stumps were drawn England had scored 375 for six wickets, which placed it 353 runs ahead. The match which has passed through its third day, will be continued today as it will be played out.

Outside of Hobbs and Sutcliffe the English batsmen faired rather poorly. Healy Woolley, Hendren, Chapman and Stevens only managed to keep their wickets up while Sutclifef did the scoring. Hobbs and Sutcliffe opened the innings and put on 173 runs before the Surrey player was dismissed by Gregory. The fall of the wickets was as follows:

First wicket, 172; second wicket, 253; third wicket, 277; fourth wicket, 316; fifth wicket, 375; sixth wicket, 375.

Hobbs gave a display of batting that was brilliant alike for its skill and discrimination, while Sutcliffe, who started slowly, after a while hit out with vigor and contributed a flawless innings. The crowd of over 30,000 was in a high state of excitement all day and lavished a number of ovations on the two great batsmen. The final demonstrations for Hobbs and Sutcliffe as they came back to the clubhouse are described as a "tornado" and "cyclone."

The wicket, which was very soft after a thunderstorm, began to get tricky when the sun warmed up. Richardson's leg breaks were particularly hard to deal with, while Grimmett also kept his length with remarkable consistency. Gregory was not so deadly and Mailey was out of luck until the last over when one of his goosly deliveries beat Sutcliffe.

The Prince of Wales attended the match and the teams lunched with him in the clubhouse.

English players to bat today are Rhodes, Geary, Tate, Larwood, and Strudwick.

C.G.E. DEFEAT CANADIAN TEAM

Visitors Not as Good as on Last Appearance Here.

THREE REGULARS.

C.G.E. Ladies piled up 24 runs at Riverside park last night and held Canadian Ladies of Toronto to eight. The local team started in the first inning and was never in danger of being beaten. In only one inning did the visitors show any great ability with the bat.

The game was rather disappointing. On their last appearance in this city the Canadian Ladies defeated the home team quite easily, the score being 17-11, and a close contest was expected. Due to conflicting engagements last night Miss Ray, the manager, was able to bring only three of the girls mentioned in the lineup she sent down, and only two of the team which visited the city last fall. The Conacher sisters were not with the team this year, the battery consisting of Misses Kingdon and Moffatt, who pitched here on Civic Holiday for Dunlops.

The visitors travelled in a truck and had little time to rest after their journey, which probably accounted for the greater number of the errors they made.

Miss Vincent was on the mound for the home team. Pitching her third game in five days, she didn't strike out as many as usual but she received wonderful support from her team mates. Her efforts were also backed up by heavy hitting which compiled a safe lead and compelled Miss Kingdon to retire from the box at the end of the first.

Misses Taylor and Langton led the local attack. Each had three hits, Miss Taylor including a homer and double and Miss Laflngton a triple and double. The other players also hit hard and often.

Miss Bater, with two singles, was the only visiting lady to get an extra hit. Miss Childs, of the Danforth team, who was with the visitors, went in as a pinch hitter in the ninth and made a hit and a run. Miss Ray also entered the fray at this stage but a good catch by Miss Langton retired her.

Miss Bourne made the feature play of the game when she made a running catch of Miss Taylor's foul line drive back of third base. Miss Oraindi also made a good play on a fly ball, catching one when running with her back to the plate. The C.G.E. fielders played steadily but made no spectacular plays.

The home team scored in every inning but the seventh and secured at least one hit in every inning. Miss Kingdon yielded three hits and three walks in the first and then traded places with Miss Kavanagh, who issued no charities but was hit hard.

The visitors scored one run in the first without a hit. In the fourth three successive walks with one out put Miss Vincent in a difficult position but Miss Kingdon hit to the box, forcing Miss Kavanagh at the plate, and Miss Beaune hit a long fly to left field. The visitors secured their first hit in the sixth inning. In that inning they combined four hits with a walk and some errors for six runs. They made their other run in the ninth when Miss Childs singled, reached second on error, third on an infield out and the plate on a fielder's choice.

YANKEES LOST IN FIVE INNINGS GAME TO CHICAGO

Game Called in the Sixth Inning on Account of Rain.

GAME CANCELLED.

Hoyt Knocked From the Box in the Third Inning.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18 (Canadian Press) — The Chicago White Sox won an abbreviated five inning game from the Yankees here yesterday 5 to 3. Rain stopped the game in the second half of the sixth. Hoyt was knocked out of the box in the third inning, Chicago scoring four runs on four hits, a base on balls and two steals.

The Athletics opened the battle for second place by taking a double header from Cleveland 9 to 4 and 6 to 4. The Mackmen had on their batting togs using up five of Speakers' best hurlers. French, of the Athletics contributed seven of their twenty-seven safeties.

Boston took St. Louis' measure twice by scores of 5 to 1 and 4 to 0, Heimach allowing only six hits in the first game and Welzer going him one better in the final. The batting of Regan and Jacobson, together with back handed catches by Williams and Todt were features.

Detroit and Washington were unable to play on account of wet grounds.

COATES WISHES FULL LIBERTY

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Aug. 18 (Canadian Press Cable via Reuters).—Premier J. G. Coates in the House of Representatives yesterday said it was essential that he should be vested with complete liberty of action and exercise of judgment with regard to the course he would adopt on any subject that came up for discussion at the Imperial conference, having regard, of course, to the circumstances in connection with questions as they arose. The House of Representatives, he said, would have an opportunity later of discussing the subjects dealt with by the conference.

Premier Coates will leave for London on August 31.

TO MAKE FINAL ARRANGEMENTS FOR DAVIS CUP

Tennis Finals Will Be played on Last Three Days.

COMMITTEE MEETS.

Will Make Draws for the Opening Single Matches.

MONTREAL, Aug. 18 (Canadian Press).—Final arrangements for the American zone Davis Cup finals, to be played Thursday, Friday and Saturday on the Mount Royal Tennis Club courts will be made at a meeting to be held today, at which the Davis Cup committee will meet the leaders of the Japanese and Cuban teams for the purpose of making the draw for the opening singles matches to be played Thursday. Zenzo Shimizu, leader of the Japanese team, arrived here yesterday and will represent the Japanese, while Captain Rogelio Paris will represent the Cuban team, naming his two selections for the singles. Takeishi Harada and Sekio Tawara are expected to be the two representatives of Japan in the singles, and Rogelio Paris and Dr. Viecnte Banet, the two Cuban choices.

With the first matches of the series tomorrow, players of both teams have started to ease off in their practicing. Yesterday the Japanese took the courts at noon and practiced strokes for an hour and a half. The Cubans followed and adopted similar tactics, Dr. Banet and Raoul Chacon stroking for one hour. Captain Rogelio Paris of the Cuban team, rested after his strenuous efforts earlier in the week. A light practice will conclude his rtaining today.

On the eve of the matches there is much speculation as to the outcome of the series. The Japanese are favored to win, but the concensus of opinion among those who have witnessed the practices this week is that the Cubans are going to force their opponents to the limit.

CLERKS LOSE CHANCE TO TIE

Defeat By Hydro Puts Storemen in Second Place in League.

PLAY-OFF SERIES.

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 17.—Any chance he Clerks had of landing at the top of the Association Softball standing, were shattered on Monday night when the Hydro trimmed Counter Hoppers 10 to 8 in the last game of the schedule. Campbellford Cloth Company Cup Mill at the top of the heap with thirteen wins and one loss, the Clerks second with twelve wins and two defeats and Hydro third with eleven wins and three losses.

The Hydro outhit the Clerks and played snappy ball in the field. Their two errors were not costly, while the four Clerk errors all figured in the Hydro run getting.

Badgley for the Hydro and Wood for the Clerks pulled off the feature fielding, each making a brilliant running catch of balls that seemed labeled for safe hits.

Cowell was the big hitter with three safe blows, one a homer.

Softball fans are in for some classy ball for the next couple of weeks. The Hydro and Clerks play an exhibtion game for the community picnic at Crow River next Friday and then engage each other in a series of two out of three games for the right to meet the Mill for the Campbellford Cloth Company Cup.

Last year's champions will have to hustle if they hope to repeat their former success. Some of the players seem to take the outcome of a game indifferently and the team as a whole is not hitting like last year's squad. However, with their backs to the wall Jimmie Gay's boys may take a brace and give their best efforts.

The line ups:

JERSEY CITY DEFEATS LEAFS IN FAST GAME

Toronto Retains Leadership —Rochester Puts Cloud Over Baltimore Orioles.

ALLOWS NINE HITS.

Alex Ferguson Pitches a Shut-out Game For Buffalo.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18 (Canadian Press).—Toronto was defeated by Jersey City yesterday in a well-played game, Reddy keeping the Leafs nine hits well scattered.

The Leafs still retain the league leadership, as Rochester took the Baltimore Orioles into camp in a 11 inning battle, 3 to 1, notwithstanding Chambers striking out eight of the visiting players.

Alex. Ferguson, Buffalo pitcher, blanked Newark with four hits, Buffalo winning the game, 3 to 0; although Mamaux pitched brilliantly until the eighth and ninth innings, when he weakened. It was the first half of a double header, the second game being called because of rain.

In the first game of a scheduled double header, which was stopped in the seventh inning by rain, Syracuse was the winner over Reading by the score of 2 to 1. The second game was postponed.

DRUMMOND'S WINS.

One of the most exciting ball games of the season took place on Saturday afternoon on the Devlin diamond between Drummond Station and Indian River, the former winning by the score of 11 to 6.

Fergus Clancy for the winners pitched excellent ball after the second innings, getting good support from F. Heffernan behind the bat. H. Fitzgerald for Indian River also pitched good ball but got poor support from his team mates. E. Clancy and F. Fitzgerald deserve much credit for good batting, bringing in a number of runs.

Line-up:

BALTIMORE GIRL FAILS TO SWIM ACROSS CHANNEL

Heavy Seas Turn Back Lillian Cannon in First Attempt.

WILL TRY AGAIN.

Says That Little Thing Like Storm Will Not Beat Her.

CAPE GRIS NEZ, France, Aug. 18 (Canadian Press).—The storm gods were not so kind to Lillian Cannon, of Baltimore, as they were to Gertrude Ederle. The Baltimore girl, who started early yesterday to beat her New York rival's trans-Channel record, was forced to give up the attempt after two hours and thirty-five minutes in the water. For the first hour everything went well with her. Enthusiastic friends aboard the accompanying tug were sure she would set a new mark. But the elements were against her. A terrific thunderstom came up suddenly with much lightning and the heavy squall piled up the waves which, meeting the rushing tide, made a choppy sea that daunted even the trawlers.

Miss Cannon, plucky swimmer that she is, was undaunted by the riding sea and wanted to continue, but her advisers on the tug insisted that she come out of the water.

"I won't let a little thing like a storm beat me," she said. "I'll try again at the first favorable tide."

Thus she declared herself on board the tug even before she had got the sea water out of her eyes. Some of the experts on Channel swimming were so favorably impressed with her showing that they are confident that, granted anything like a favorable condition of tide and weather, she is bound to succeed in her attempt to swim the Channel. All were rather chary, however, about predicting that she would break the Ederle record.

NEW AUTOMOBILE FOLDS UP.

Closed or open—which shall the new car be? For most of us with one car incomes it's a vexing question. But now, says Popular Science Monthly, John K. Mohr, of Bay City, Mich., has designed a car which should satisfy both sides. From a coupe with rigid top it can be converted into an open roadster in two minutes. The top folds back into the rear end of the body. Closed or open, the car is strictly conventional in design.

CARRY BATTLES INTO COUNTRY

King Reviews Efforts of His Government During Recent Session.

SENATE OPPOSITION.

MOOSE JAW, Aug. 18 (Canadian Press).—"We are carrying the battles of the House of Commons into the constituencies," said the Right Hon. Mackenzie King here last night, in reviewing the efforts of his Government during the last session of Parliament. The Liberal leader went into the customs investigation and denied that anything relating to the department was suppressed. The only unpublished matter was a stenographer's note book dealing with private matters only.

"Can the Senate continue to block legislation?" asked some one in the audience. 'Unfortunately it can," replied Mr. King.

"I think we ought to have a law in Canada by which legislation passed by the Commons three times becomes law," he said.

"Cut out their salaries, then they will quit"; "Be a Lloyd George and put it through," some members of the audience suggested.

Mr. King stated that the Senators he had appointed had been pledged to support any Liberal measure of Senate reform.

"If I am returned I will not appoint any Senator who will not give that undertaking."

Premier Gardiner of Saskatchewan said Quebec was the only competitor of Saskatchewan in the matter of Liberalism, "and we are proud to be allied to that good old province. We ask for no more honorable allies than the people of Quebec in fighting for the interests of Canada as a whole."

Recently he had been on the platform with Robert Forke and the Progressive leader was desirous that Liberals and Progressives should "ally themselves under one organization in opposition to Arthur Meighen."

MANY NATIONS AT SUFFRAGE MEETING

Women Gathered in Paris From Forty Different Lands.

VANCOUVER, B.C., August 18 (Canadian Press).—A kaleidoscopic picture of three hundred or more women leaders in their profession in some forty countries of the world, meeting to discuss with earnestness and candor the advance of women in politics.

This is the picture which Miss Mabel Leslie, one of the twelve delegates from the United States National League of Women Voters, brings back with her from the tenth triennial congress of the International Suffrage Association, which was held in Paris.

"Imagine the group if you can," she said. "There was a woman senator from Czecho-Slovakia, a member of the German Reichstag, three women from Iceland in their quaint native costumes, women from Australia and New Zealand, with their browned southern faces, two women from India in their native costumes, diamonds in their noses, representatives of forty nations in all.

"The most stirring oration of the day was a masterly discussion of the war by Frau Adele Schrieber of the German Reichstag. It was probably the first time war had been discussed publicly in France by a German woman since 1914, and the large French audience which packed the hall was enormous."

RURAL POLICE BEING REPLACED

B. C. Provincial Officers Are Taking Over Law Enforcement.

NOT EFFICIENT.

VICTORIA, B. C., Aug. 18. —(Canadian Press). — The old time rural policeman the butt of countless jokes, and the terror of the careless motorist, will soon banish from British Columbia. The Province has found him not only inefficient but expensive.

Gradually, the Provincial Police are taking over the enforcement of laws in the Province. On Vancouver Island outside Victoria, there will be practically no local police left within a month, and the Provincial Police will be in control everywhere On the mainland, too, several cities and districts have completed policing agreements with the Government, and others have the matter under consideration. It is beginning to appear that, within a very short time British Columbia will have no local police left outside of the capital and Vancouver.

It is expected that the new plan will make for efficiency. There have been too many police forces in the past, in the opinion of the authorities, and this will be eliminated Through the use of the motor car the modern criminal, it is pointed out, has acquired great mobility The limitations of the rural constabulary, it is explained, have prevented speedy investigations. Their methods have been crude and not effective.

LADY STRATHCONA IS DEAD IN LONDON

Daughter of Former High Commissioner For Canada Dies To-day.

LONDON, Aug. 18 (Canadian Press)—Lady Strathcona and Mount Royal, daughter of the late Lord Strathcona, former high commissioner for Canada, died today in her seventy-third year.

Lady Strathcona was Mrs. Margaret C. Howard, receiving her title on the death of her father in London in 1914. Her father, Sir Donald Alexander Smith, later raised to a baronetcy, played a prominent part in Canada for many years during the last century, becoming a member of parliament in the Canadian House of Commons and later being appointed high comimssioner in Great Britain for the Dominion.

In 1922 Lady Strathcona gave £100,000 to Sir James McGrigor in an efofrt to save the banking firm of Sir Charles R. McGrigor, which was forced to close its doors. The London Press said that Lady Strathcona tried to save the bank in memory of the friendship of Sir James' father for her own father when the latter was a Scottish emigrant to Canada, where he made his immense fortune.

The Baroness Strathcona and Mount Royal was married in 1888 to Dr. Robert Jared Bliss Howard of Montreal. He died in 1921. Three sons and two daughtres were born to them: Donald Sterling Palmer Howard, heir to Baroness Strathcona; Robert Henry, Arthur Jared, Frances Margaret and Edith Mary.

The sons all served in the war as officers of British regiments, and Robert Henry was killed.

Arthur Jared Howard is a son-in-law of Premier Stanley Baldwin.

POLICE CLAIM NEW REBELLION CATHOLIC PLOT

Say Uprisings in Various Parts of Country Planned By Women.

PRIEST KILLED.

Attempt To Officiate as Schismatic Resented By Parishioners.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 18 (Canadian Press).—The Chief of the Secret Service, Jose Mascorro, declared last night that his investigations have revealed that the plot for uprisings in various parts of the Republic on Sunday last was largely organized by Catholic women, and was definitely connected with the revolutionary movement of General Estrada. The intention was, by means of simultaneous operations within and outside the country, to sweep Mexico into a revolution.

Officers of the secret service, posing as sympathizers with a revolution, have been attending the meetings of those concerned in the plot.

Chief Mascorro declared that two Catholic women prominent in the Federal district, Senora Josefina Novoa and Senora Luz de Perchez, were leaders in the plot, with an equal number of men and women composing the executive board and district organizations.

Priest Killed By Mob.

A priest in the village of Tepalzingo, in the State of Guerrero, decared himself schismatic yesterday and attempted to celebrate mass. His parishioners swarmed upon the altar, and in the melee that ensued the priest was stabbed to death. One man among the mob who was arrested by the authorities was taken from them by an infuriated mob of Indians and also was killed by stabbing.

Ambassador James Rockwell Sheffield is mentioned in influential British circles here as the probable successor to Alanson B. Houghton, Ambassador to the Court of St. James. According to these sources, he will not decline a transfer from Mexico to England if it is offered to him. The same story is current in the diplomatic set.

Mr. Sheffield is highly thought of by the powerful British interests operating in Mexico, and it is said they have passed the word along that he would be a desirable man to succeed Ambassador Houghton should the latter return to Washington to replace Secretary of State Kellogg. Their information from England is that the American Ambassador there is likely to leave shortly.

Among his American friends and associates the expectation prevails that Ambassador Sheffield will be asked to take the London post under consideration. While they would regret to see him leave Mexico, especially at this time, they would regard his transfer as a fitting reward for the work he has done here. They look for his transfer to London to feature his coming conference with President Coolidge.

Torres Case Recalled.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—None of the Mexicans arrested in connection with the abortive revolutionary attempt of General Enrique Estrada will be surrendered to the tender mercies of the authorities on the other side of the southern border.

Officials indicated yesterday that there will be no repetition of the case of Colonel Demetrio Torres, who was turned over to the Mexican authorities on the border by American immigration agents and executed by a firing squad within 24 hours. The Torres case caused an uproad in Congress.

While it is possible that General Estrada may be deported should it be shown he entered the country illegally, in no event will he be sent into Mexico to certain death. He might be given a specified period within which to depart for Cuba or elsewhere.

When Colonel Torres was surrendered officials here thought they had definite assurances from the Mexican Government or its spokesmen that he would be accorded a square deal. Torres, himself, nursed no illusions, and said good-bye permanently to all his friends whom he saw immediately before his surrender.

EYE SHADES NOT BANNED.

But Playgrounds Children Asked Not To Wear Them on Streets.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 18. —(Canadian Press). —"We have not placed any ban on the use of eyeshades at all," said Superintendent Armstrong of the City Playgrounds in discussing a story that children would not be allowed to wear them in the grounds.

"But we have asked the little girls when they are playing our league games not to wear them, and not to wear them in the street cars. It is not because they are dangerous, but simply because of the looks of them. They are a passing fad, that it all."

"Would they not protect their eyes from the sun playing their games" he was asked.

"They might, in case the sun is directly in their eyes, but in the games they play there is scarcely any necessity for them. If the women think the children should be allowed to wear them, then we have our regular meetings, and the matter can be discussed there."

ARM MOVEMENT IN CRAWL

The straight overhand stroke with the face buried in the water, is used in the crawl.

A very slight roll is given the body so that when the breath is taken it will not jar the symmetry of the stroke to bring the mouth above the water.

At each stroke the arm is brought up from the side and the elbow is bent as soon as it is clear of water so as to take hold of the water directly in front of the head with as much reach as is natural.

At first the reach will be shortened considerable from that of the overhand, but with practice the hand will go forward until the same reach is attained as in the overhand.

SPINNING WHEEL ON EXHIBITION

Was Brought To Canada From Belfast in 1739.

STILL USEFUL.

EDMONTON, Alta., Aug. 18. — (Canadian Press). — A writer in the Journal says: —

"The spinning wheel on exhibition in a local store, the property of Mrs. Duguid, has seen 200 years step by.

"Mrs. Hunter, of Belfast, Ireland, who first owned the wheel in question, gave it to her daughter, Mrs. Janet Hill who brought it to Canada in 1739. At that time there were only sailing vessels and it took six weeks to make that momentous journey over the ocean. What a story that spinning wheel might tell if it could but speak.

"At present there is a movment on foot in the Province to keep old art of spinning from dying out and in many of the Ukrainan settler its especially, the work of making their own linen and woollen materials is carefully cultivated. Too often we are ashamed of appearing provincial, and are afraid that we will not forge ahead and appear aggressive and eager to reach out for the new, and so we drop the old things. In the West especially, people forget to treasure old stories of their families that have been handed down the years, and even centuries, old histories of their homes and towns. It is a good thing to remember the old.

"Somehow it does not seem right that a spinning wheel should now take its place as an ornament only. One experiencees the same feeling of pity for it, as one does for a very old woman from whom her children have taken all work and worry, that she may live her last days happily They forget or do not understand that her hands are so empty with nothing to do."

CRESCENTS IN NERVOUS STATE

City Intermediate Champs Fear Upset at Hands of Cogs.

PLAY TO-NIGHT.

Crescents are not a bit backward in stating that they are taking the series with Cognawagas very seriously. The city Intermediate champs will start this evening's game without the services of Jack Marchen and Harold Franks, who have gone across the border, while the Cogs will be intact, with an advantage in batting and fielding condition gained in the series with Keene. If Cogs get the range on Masterson's pitching, Crescents' fond hopes of entering the O. B. A. A. semi-finals will be shattered.

To-night's game will start at 5.45 with Ed. LeBarr working behind the plate and Bob Ross at the bases.

The coldest temperature on record —500 degrees below freezing point, Fahrenheit, was registered recently in a scientific laboratory.

Diamond Disputes Decided

BILLY EVANS

When is the infield fly not operative with runners on first and second and less than two out?

There is only one situation that makes an exception of the infield fly rule. It deals with a bunt in an effort to sacrifice.

When there are runners on first and second or first, second and third and less than two out, any attempt to bunt which results in a fair fly ball shall not be regarded as an infield fly.

At such times the infield is usually all out of position in an effort to create a defense for the bunt and at such times it is the intent that the infielders must actually make the play on the ball.

In such a situation the batsman is not automatically out, the ball must be caught.

Daily Short Story

"SPRING CLEANING"

Mat Winslow looked down from his great height beside the fireplace and in his big, steady eyes was an expression that Gene had never before noticed.

"Gene," he was saying seriously, "I told you a few months ago that I loved you and wanted you to become my wife."

"I didn't promise I would, though," hastily interposed Gene.

"No—and I am glad you didn't. I don't want to marry you now. You have developed into a far different type of girl from the dear Gene I loved. I don't know whether it's Tom Chandler's influence or whether I was mistaken in the wonderful woman I was watching from a lover's ideal."

Gene had risen from the low chair in which she had been lolling smoking a cigarette. Her eyes were as black as night and her cheeks were flushed. Her voice, however, remained steady.

"Well—it has taken you to offer me the first insult I have ever had from a man. If you don't mind—I will appreciate being left alone." Her little teeth were clenched and the cigarette holder snapped in her fingers.

"I beg your pardon—I have in no way insulted you. I simply told you the truth about my affections. There is no disgrace in the fact that you prefer amusements, dancing, theatres and racing cars and to be eternally on the move. There are plenty like you and certainly you would be far happier with a man of Chandler's type than you could with me. Also, you would make him happier than you possibly could me." His eyes softened tremendously for a moment, "I could have loved the girl you were six months ago as few women are loved and I shall hope to find another who will be to me all that had hoped you would." Mat went out and closed the door gently, but firmly, behind him.

When her first anger cooled off Gene went out for a long walk to clarify her mind. She must have a regular spring cleaning of the mental side of her nature and try to set all things to rights there.

"I can't do much clear thinking with this awful assortment of tangled strings pulling me in every direction at once.

"In the first place," she reckoned with herself, "I am very fond of Tom Chandler, and if it were not for one or two little doubts I would marry him tomorrow as he demands, but——" Gene's thoughts were for the moment arrested by a small child tripping along beside her mother, gripping in one hand the all-wonderful mother hand and in the other clutching her doll. Her eyes shadowed. "Tom thinks they're a bother—at least at first. Mat's world revolves round the heart of a child, a lovely home, beautiful garden and trips off to some vast silence of the hills. Mat says one gets remade close to the great universe." Gene laughed shakily.

"Tom, on the other hand, wants to take me to Paris for a time. When we tire of Paris, on to Monte Carlo and then—well, when we have exhausted everything we can start over again. There's no doubt I would broaden out and have a grand and glorious time—if I marry Tom."

And behind all Gene's thoughts lay the fact that the long nights of dancing and short hours of sleep were robbing her cheeks of their glorious dusky red.

"Mat would order me to bed," she laughed to herself. "He never will allow me to tire myself and I suppose, after all, good health is the greatest blessing in the world. Oh dear," she sighed, "I wish I knew what to do." She would have smoked a cigarette but suddenly she realized that it was one of the habits that had lost her Mat's love.

It was a rather intolerable thought that some other girl would slip into the great cozy love nest that Mat had been building for his mate—that mate who would love children and who would not smoke and who would joy into going for their holidays up into the great silence of the hills. Gene was suddenly frightened at the thought of a world in which Mat lived with another woman.

"Whom could I run to with all my troubles?" she asked herself, aghast. "Somehow I don't think Tom could straighten the kinks out as Mat does. However, I think I had better carry on for another few months and see where my happiness really lies. Certainly I could not make Mat happy while——"

And in the distance suddenly Gene caught sight of Mat's familiar big frame. He was walking easily along toward her but just behind him and running to catch up with him appeared Helen Vane.

Helen was the nearest approach to Mat's ideals that Gene could picture. Given a month or two and Helen would be walking up the aisle with Mat. Even now she had taken his arm and they were strolling toward Gene.

Gene wanted to turn and flee but not being a coward she went bravely on. In her vivid imagination, now that the spring cleaning was done and things looked a bit clearer, she fancied she saw a little child clinging to Helen's hand and also to Mat's big one.

Gene dug her heels into the path and walked a bit quicker. When the three drew nearer Gene smiled joyfully and very happily into Mat's swiftly softened eyes. After greeting Helen, Gene said:

"Mat, I'm taking a trip back—over six months—I—want every much to get there—safely. Will you——"

And over Mat's face came the look of a man for his mate.

Far Northern Town Swept By Bad Fire

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 18 (Canadian Press)—The world's most northerly mining centre, Kiruna, located far above the Arctic Circle in Swedish Lapland, has been swept by fire. Several of the community's largest building were destroyed, one fireman killed and $250,000 damage done.

The destruction was increased by the explosion of a depot of dynamite, kept for the blasting of Kirunavaara, the mountain nearby, which consists entirely of iron ore.

UNCLE WIGGILY

Today's Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE BLACK SWAN

Copyright, 1926, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

(By Howard R. Garis.)

One day, as he was crossing the meadow, having been to the ice cave of Mr. Whitewash, the polar bear, to get cool, Uncle Wiggily heard a great shouting and laughing.

"The animal children must be having a good time," thought the rabbit gentleman. But when he drew closer he heard calls of:

"Oh, ho! Peetie Bow Wow! What we know about you! Peetie's a 'fraid cat! Peetie's a 'fraid cat!"

"My! This is too bad!" thought Uncle Wiggily. "It is sad enough to call a doggie boy a cat, but when you say he is an afraid cat, that is worse. I wonder what is the trouble?"

Uncle Wiggily crawled under the fence, as his rheumatism was hurting him that day, and there he saw Sammie and Susie Littletail, Charlie and Arabella Chick and Jollie and Jillie Longtail, the mice, standing in a ring around poor Peetie, pointing their tails and their paws at him, and singing:

"Peetie is a 'fraid cat! Peetie is a 'fraid cat!"

"I am not!" barked Peetie. "And I guess any of you would have run just as I did!"

"What happened?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"Peetie ran away from the old turkey gobbler" said Sammie Littletail. "We were playing ball, and the ball went in the field where the turkey gobbler was eating grasshoppers. And Peetie said he'd get the ball, and he went in and the gobbler chased him and Peetie ran out howling!"

"Well, I wasn't going to have that gobbler nip my tail!" barked Peetie. "I wasn't afraid of him, but I didn't want my tail nipped!"

"Quite right you were, Peetie," said Uncle Wiggily. "I believe I would have run myself, to get away from the gobbler. Only he happens to be a friend of mine and I know he wouldn't nip my tail."

"Well, he wanted to nip mine!" said the doggie boy.

"I shall speak to Mr. Gobbler about it," went on the rabbit gentleman. "I guess he thought you were going to tease him, Peetie, and that's why he chased you."

But for all Uncle Wiggily could say, some of the animal boys and girls continued to call Peetie "'fraid cat," and Peetie didn't like it. In the afternoon Mr. Longears spoke to Mr. Gobbler.

"Why, I wouldn't have nipped Peetie's tail for the world!" gobbled the Thanksgiving bird. "I was only running over to help him find the ball, when I saw him turn and run howling for the fence."

"Don't tell anyone that," whispered Uncle Wiggily, "or they will all the more call poor Peetie an afraid cat. Let them forget it. I'm sure Peetie will be braver next time."

And it was only the next day that something happened. Uncle Wiggily had gone down to the duck pond, to see Mrs. Wibblewobble, the lady duck, about some eggs Nurse Jane wanted to put in a cake. And when the rabbit gentleman reached the edge of the water, there he saw a strange creature paddling about.

It was a black swan, with a long neck and a red beak, and very fierce and cross it looked. Spreading out his wings, the black swan paddled over close to where Uncle Wiggily was looking for Mrs. Wibblewobble, and the swan honked:

"What do you want? Get away from here! I have just flown in from the ocean and this is my pond! Get away!" Oh, wasn't he the selfish creature? Before Uncle Wiggily could answer him, the black swan raised his wings and was going to hit the rabbit gentleman, for that is the way with swans, and their wings are very strong.

But, all of a sudden, out of the bushes at the bank of the pond rushed Peetie Bow Wow, barking as hard as he could bark.

"Don't you dare hurt Uncle Wiggily!" snarled Peetie. "I'll nip that long neck of yours if you do!" And he made such a fuss, and looked so brave and strong, did little Peetie, that the black swan honked loudly and paddled to the other side of the pond.

"Brave dog, Peetie! Brave dog!" cried Uncle Wiggily. "A black swan is much fiercer than a turkey gobbler, and you saved me!" And then all the animal boys and girls who had called Peetie "'fraid cat," said they were sorry when they heard how brave he was against the big, black swan. They wanted to know how he did it.

"Pooh! It was easy!" barked Peetie. But at the same time, his heart was beating very fast. So everything came out all right. And if the stove brush doesn't give the tea kettle a black mark for boiling over, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the mail bag.

naval matters. Hence, the new line-up, eliminating the United States and Japan, leaves Great Britain, Spain and Italy—the significance of which is revealed when the recent Anglo-Italian treaty regarding Abyssinia and the Italo-Spanish accord on Tangier and the Mediterrean are recalled.

Italian Press Comment.

ROME, Aug. 18.—The text of the Italo-Spanish Treaty, published in Italy for the first time yesterday, gives the press of the country a chance to express its opinion of the League of Nations on the eve of that body's reassembling at Geneva.

Tribuna, an official Fascisti organ, says:

"Broadly speaking, the treaty shows that the League is not indispensable to the practice of a policy of peace. It shows that after various complicated procedures of the League, when two states really desire to strengthen their friendly relations they must do so with separate treaties, because the League does not offer sure guarantees.

"The treaty likewise means that Spain wishes, as she should, to develop an autonomous policy which has nothing to prejudice Italian interests, but common intentions both in the Mediterranean and Latin-America. Such autonomy displeases others, hence the bitter sweet remarks, but Autonomy coincides with Fascist Italy's political decisions. It also signifies more substantial and concrete relations between Italy and Spain in economic, industrial, commercial and cultural fields. Spain has the raw materials Italy lacks and these can be of immense utility in this age of trusts."

MODERN FAMILY CLASH PORTRAYED IN "PADLOCKED"

Dwan Film Presents Timely Theme With Broadway and Society Backgrounds

To those of the older generation, who view with alarm the terrifying manners and morals of the younger generation, we heartily recommend a visit to the Capitol tomorrow when Allan Dwan's new Paramount drama, "Padlocked," begins its local run.

For this honest portrayal of a modern American family reveals the fact that lack of sympathy and understanding on the part of parents is driving the youth of our country to the jazz life.

"Padlocked" is a picturization of the widely read Cosmopolitan Magazine story by Rex Beach. It was adapted by Becky Gardiner and James Shelley Hamilton, and features an imposing cast, headed by Lois Moran, Louise Dresser and Noah Beery. Florence Turner, Helen Jerome Eddy, Allan Simpson, Charles Lane and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. are among the important supporting players.

The central character in the story is a lovely, high-spirited girl, who rebels against her father's narrow-minded attitude and efforts to stifle her natural ambitions, and runs away from home to seek a career on Broadway. As a cabaret dancer, she attracts the attention of the millionaire sociey set and becomes involved in a love triangle. An unexpected crisis develops when her father demands that she return home, and the subsequent events are charged with suspense and emotional appeal.

The entire production has been lavishly set, brightly and fittingly costumed, and under Mr. Dwan's direction very colorfully and smoothly produced.

MINE DELEGATES BEHIND LEADERS

Decision To Re-open Parleys Is Personal Triumph For Two Men.

NEW YORK, August 18 (Canadian Press).—A copyrighted cable to the New York Herald-Tribune says the British miners' decision to authorize their executive board to re-open negotiations with the mine owners and the Government in an effort to end the coal strike means that the delegates have now fallen behind their leaders in discharging the "never, never," slogan. The cable contiues: "It marks personal triumphs for the miners two outstanding leaders, Herbert Smith, president, and A. J. Cook, secretary, who by their untiring efforts have induced the delegates to reverse the decision of their districts, which last week voted down the Bishop's plan for voting on the motion to give the leaders a free hand."

LABOR NOMINEE CONFIRMS ITEM ABOUT BANKING

Says He Told Edmonton Audience Government Consulted Wall Street.

NOT INDEPENDENT.

Intended To Show That All Governments Must Meet Capitalists.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 18. —(Canadion Press). — J. S. Woodsworth, Labor nominee for Winnipeg North Centre, returned from the Western Provinces this morning following his attendance at several meetings, including the East Edmonton convention of August 13 when John Lakeman, President of the Edmonton Branch of the Canadian Labour Party, was nominated. In his address, Mr. Woodsworth was quoted as having said that the Liberal Government has submitted proposed legislation to the capitalists of Wall Street for their O. K. before submitting it to parliament.

Interviewed by Canadian Press here to-day in regard to his charge, Mr. Woodsworth said:

"I had been referring to International relationship and attempting to show that some people feared the dominance of Downing Street. I was of the opinion that we were more likely in Canada to be dominated by Wall Street.

"As an illustration, I happen to know of piece of legislation upon which United States financiers were consulted before it was submitted to Parliament."

Continuing, Mr. Woodsworth said that some one in the audience asked him:

"Is that any worse than a man having to consult his banker?"

"I replied, No, it is precisely same thing," said Mr. Woodsworth, "that's the point I want to drive home — Governments are not independent of national and international capitalists."

JOHN STIRK WAS BURIED AS DEAD WAS ONLY DRUNK

Now Osage Indians Shun Him as If He Were a Ghost.

DRANK WHITE MULE

Caucus of Tribal Elders Pronouced Him Dead When He Failed to Revive.

BY BRUCE CATTON.
NEA Service Writer.

PAWHUSKA, Okla.—There is an evil spirit that stalks abroad on the barren, wind-swept hills of Osage county: an evil spirit that returned from the grave to confuse and alarm honest, law-abiding Indians and to figure as principal character in the dizziest tragi-comedy the west has known in many a day.

This evil spirit is—or used to be, the Indians say—an Indian who rejoiced in the name of Ho-To-Moie. This name being a bit cumbersome, he was dubbed plain John Stink, and is so known throughout Osage county.

John Stink was a peaceable, decent sort of chap who never molested anyone until one fatal night, a few years ago, when a mutual friend introduced John to a bottle of white mule.

The mule's kick would have derailed a Santa Fe freight, and the clay vessel that houses John Stink's spirit is no stronger than anyone else's. John went under the table and stayed there.

Dead and Buried.

Next morning John Stink failed to come to. After the usual tribal restoratives had been applied he was pronounced dead by a caucus of the elders and a funeral was organized.

John was carried to a barren hill, placed in a sitting position in the lee of a huge rock, and gently covered with smaller stones, brush and the like.

But John Stink was not dead. He was only boiled just a wee bit harder than usual. So next morning he awoke to find himself sitting among the rock pile and possessed of a great hunger, a powerful headache and a thirst of the type that moves mountains.

John extricated himself, with difficulty, and headed for the camp. In the chill dawn he came over the horizon, his habilments flapping eerily in the breeze, and descended on his tribe.

The squaws were cooking breakfast. One look at John Stink, who had been laid to rest only yesterday, was enough. The howl they let out was heard away up in Wichita, and it was noon before they stopped running.

The camp was left utterly deserted—save for John Stink, who proceeded to refresh himself on the whole tribe's breakfast.

But Indians are hard folk to convince. The tribesmen would not come back.

John Stink had died and been buried and that was all there was to it. If he stalked about and talked and ate it only proved that he was a ghost. And ghosts are no more popular in Osage county than anywhere else.

So John Stink became an exile—a friendless wanderer over the barren hills.

Boycotts Town.

He erected a little tent in an almost inaccessible section of the county and lived the life of a hermit. Five or six lanky dogs kept him company, and they were the only creatures who would associate with him. The Indians shunned him—shun him to this day.

John Stink used to come into Pawhuska to buy supplies. But once his five dogs came in with him and were shot by the unfeeling police. So John declared a boycott on Pawhuska.

He never leaves his lonely camp, and if anyone approaches he flees incontinently. A white man—the only man who has talked with John since his "funeral"—brings him his food and other necessaries twice a week.

No Indian will go near him. To them he is still a ghost. He was dead and buried and that ends it.

So John Stink lives alone with his dogs.

Spinsters Have Chance To Get Men in Canada

TORONTO, Ont., August 18 (Canadian Press).—Canada apparently has it all over the Old Country when it comes to opportunities for "Spinsters." According to the latest issue of the Canadian Year Book there are a quarter of a million more single men in Canada than there are single women. In all Canada there are two and a half million single men and two and a quarter single women. These 250,000 bachelors would sound good to the women in the Old Country, where they outnumber the single men by a big majority.

There are one and a half million each of married men and women and 119,000 widowers and 236,000 widows. There are 117,000 more widows than there are widowers, so, of course, the "spinsters" will have them to contend with. But there are also the widowers, so chances are fairly even. There were also 36,000 divorced men in Canada in 1925 and 37,000 divorced women.

NEW YORK NICE TOWN TO BE IN.

NEW YORK (By NEA Service).—A million and a half dollars annually in pennies, nickels and dimes drop into the cups and caps of the 200 crippled and blind beggars selling chewing gum and pencils on the streets of New York.

The estimate was given by the police department. Frank L. Dunn, secretary to Lieut. William C. Whitley, commanding the mendicants' bureau of the department, estimated that the average cripple should pay an income tax of $7,000.

The great sucker districts for professional panhandlers are Wall Street and Fifth Avenue. On a good day, undisturbed by police, Dunn believes a panhandler clears $40 easily.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Aug. 18. —Orville Poehlman, 16 years old, of Humberstone, was drowned and three others of about the same age narrowly escaped drowning in Lake Erie, at Long Beach, ten miles west of Port Colborne, according to advices received here yesterday. Poehlman, with Fern Smith, of Port Colborne; Ellen Kosher, of Lawrence, Mass., and Wilfred Pietz, of Humberstone, were walking in water to their shoulders when they struck a declivity and sank.

Miss Smith swam to safety, and Pietz, who is a good swimmer, rescued Miss Kosher. He went back for Poehlman, who could not swim, and succeeded in reaching him, but the strong undertow drew Poehlman out of his grasp. Pietz recovered Poehlman's body, and the members of the party tried unsuccessfully to resuscitate him.

THE STOCK MARKET

Many New York Stocks Drop From Record Levels

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—(Canadian Press.)—Further irregularity of price movement developed in to-day's stock market. U. S. Steel common, which has been liquidated freely on intimations that no stock dividend would be paid this year, sold down to 152 or more than 7 points below the record high established yesterday.

Substantial recessions also took place in General Motors, Dupont, American Smelting, and U. S. Cast Iron Pipe, all of which recently established record high prices. Railroad Equipment shares showed independent strength on buying influenced by the prospect of large orders, particularly for signal and automatic train control devices this fall. General Railway Signal, American Brake Shoe and Foundry, Air Reduction and Westinghouse Air Brake all sold materially higher.

Union Pacific was one of the leaders of the rail group moving up over 2 points to 159 1-2, the highest price since 1914. Chesapeake and Ohio climbed to 153 1-4, Pere Marquette to 104 1-8, and Rock Island to 63 1-2, all new top prices.

Brazilian Very Active But Price Drops Slightly

TORONTO, Aug. 18 (Canadian Press).—Brazilian Traction, with a turnover in excess of 2,000 shares, was the active leader in the trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. It eased 1-8 to 110 3-8 at the close. The market was conducted over a broad list with prices fractionally higher.

Canners Preferred was active and closed 1-2 off at 67 1-2, while F. N. Burt Common advanced 1 point to 87. Noranda was off 5 cents to 18.45. Massey Harris Common, Winnipeg Railway, and Brompton were unchanged at 65, 50 1-4 and 34 respectively. Smelters was weak and inactive with a loss of 1 3-4 to 230 1-4. Abitibi, British American Oil, and Imperial Oil each gained 1-4 to 84, 54 1-2, and 36 1-2 respectively. British Columbia Fishing firmed 3-4 to 73 and Twin City 1-2 to 70. In the mining stocks Dome was slightly stronger with a gain of 5 cents to 10.25, but McIntyre declined 35 cents to 26.25. Bank of Montreal was off 1 to 270 and Royal 1-2 to 250, while Dominion was unchanged at 207.

Wheat Price Little Higher But Decline Is Predicted

CHICAGO, Aug. 18 (Canadian Press).—Buying orders were plentiful in the wheat market early today and with offerings readily absorbed the price level average a little higher. Excessive rains hampering the domestic harvest in the Northwest counted somewhat as a bullish factor. Opening at 1-8 off to 3-8c up, wheat underwent a slight general sag and then scored rallies. Corn and oats were easy with provisions firm, corn starting unchanged to 1-2 down and subsequently receding a fraction all around.

A good deal of notice was taken of the statements that although this year may prove to be one of the big United States export years in wheat, acive competition is ahead for the world's markets, and with foreign finances conducive to economy an unhurried but gradual decline appears not unlikely.

TORONTO, August 18 (Canadian Press). — McIntyre's 65-point advance of yesterday was met with a decline of 50 points in the trading on the Standard Mining Exchange to-day, the stock closing at noon at 26.40. Lake Shore also lost ground with a 35-point drop to 14.00. These two declines took place despite a general firmer price tendency.

Wright Hargreaves firmed ten cents to 8.70 and Dome was firm with a five-cent gain to 10.35. Two-point advances were made by Argo to 24, Tough Oakes to 44½, Vipond to 1.82, and Vickers to 1.74, while Kirkland Lake was off two to 1.06, Teck Hughes gained three to 4.19, and Barry Holly one to 59. Hollinger was unchanged at 19.40. In the unlisted, Amulet was up one to 1.36, and Noranda five to 18.35, while Hill Top was off a point to 30, Nipissing lost five cents to 5.65, and Castle Tretheway two to 1.41.

RUGBY MEETING ON WEDNESDAY

Fans and Players Asked To Aid in Organizing For Fall.

PROSPECTS GOOD.

The annual meeting to organize rugby in Peterboro for the coming season will be held in the Y. M. C. A. on Wednesday evening, August 25th, at 8 o'clock. This is the get away meeting and it is hoped that a large crowd of rugby enthusiasts will come out and help elect the officers of the association. There is a large crowd of rugby fans in Peterboro and if all these with the hosts of ex-players situated here would turn out and give rugby a boost, it would permanently put rugby back in its former place in Peterboro, when it turned out great teams back in the early 1900's and the inter-Collegiate teams turned out at P.C.I. in the past few years.

In the last two or three years rugby (outside of the local Collegiate team) has been kept on the map in Peterboro largely due to the untiring efforts of Sergeant Jack Dainnard, Dr. Wood and Max Sloan, aided by Ros Dobbin, Fred Hills and one or two others. Now it is up to those who love the game in Peterboro to get behind these men and the players and show that the time and money spent alike by the players and the executive have not been wasted.

Prospects are particularly bright this year and it is understood that the old handicap of no games before the official series can be overcome but this will largely depend on the fans themselves to support the boys in the exhibition games which it is intended to have here. So start the season off right by keeping Wednesday, August 25th, open and attending the meeting at the Y.M.C.A. and make it the best rugby season Peterboro ever had.

Young Russian Attempts Jump From Liberty Statue

NEW YORK, Aug. 18 (United News).—At the feet of the Statue of Liberty which he called his only mother, Georges Zagorsky, a young Russian student, was held in detention barracks today while the ponderous machinery of the immigration laws were set in motion to deport him.

Deportation means death. Zagorsky escaped from Russia after he had avenged the official murder of his father, mother, four brothers and three sisters.

He had been promised that he would be allowed to enlist in the United States army, thus escaping deportation. He was informed yesterday that it could not be done. He was found, after he had ben told was found, after he had been told the decision, climbing over the rail to throw himself down on the stone base. As he was led away under guard, he sobbed: "This is my only mother. I threw myself into her arms; she would not have me, I want to die at her feet."

'IWANIS' INTER-CLUB PICNIC ELD BY PETERBORO' CLUB ST SUCCESSFUL AFFAIR

iwanians and a Many Clubs er Here.

FTERNOON.

Full Swing From To Midnight Yesterday.

r-club picnic staged by bers of the Peterborough Club proved to be one of st successful events ever by any organization in the of Peterborough. Over two ed Kiwanians and their guests entertained, the Riverdale, To-o, Belleville and Orilla clubs ding large delegations. Many nes during the day could the vis-rs be heard proclaiming their raise for the local club and amaze-nent was expressed by several at the completeness of the arrangements which were of a nature that left no stone unturned for the comfort and convenience of the honored guests. From the time President Jack Craig of the local club raised his gavel at the beginning of the noon luncheon at the Empress Hotel until the grand finale at midnight in the Chemong Pavilion everything went with a swing that left nothing to be desired. A civic welcome from the City Council was extended by Acting Mayor Nagle E. Phelan, after which the district Governor, H. Stanley Higman and Lieut. Gov. William Cockburn made short speeches, extolling the Peterborough club for the good work that they had accomplished.

Two vocal solos were rendered in splendid fashion by Miss Daisy Murray. Kiwanian J. Bankier of the Orillia club also sang.

The booster for the day was Kiwanian C. D. Cook and the prize winners were: Miss Marjorie Merrell, Mrs. John I. Allen and Mrs. George Guy. Prize winners in a lucky number contest were Mrs. Edmunds, Mrs. Hanna and Mrs. Gorman.

Kiwanian Jack Marshall of the Peterborough club tendered the thanks of the members to the artists who assisted.

Consternation was caused during the luncheon when two stalwart members of the city police force stepped into the room and arrested Bob Gorman of Belleville on a charge of speeding. Mr. Gorman was removed to the police station, where he was visited by a number of friends before he was eventually released. Needless to state the affair was in the nature of a joke.

From the hotel the visitors were conveyed to the lift lock and were taken through the entire structure. From there they proceeded to Chemong, where a big sports programme was held. Softball, relay races, a male bathing beauty contest, women's novelty races were a part of the list. For those not interested in sport, a trip, through the generosity of John E. Patte, was provided to the fox farm.

Peterborough club was successful in carrying off the district softball championship cup, the relay race cup and in addition were presented with the inter-club cup from the Riverdale club and a loving cup from the Orillia club.

Over two hundred Kiwanians and guests sat down to dinner which was served under the large pines in the centre of the park. The meal proved an unqualified success, the get-together spirit which had been so ably exemplified during the day again asserting itself, imbuing everyone with friendliness and good will and leaving no doubt as to the general success of the gathering.

Acting Mayor N. E. Phelan.

"It is indeed with great pleasure that I welcome the guests of the local Kiwanis Club to the city of Peterborough," declared Acting Mayor Nagle E. Phelan. He congratulated the members of the local club on the foresight that they had shown in inaugurating the inter-club picnic. The Peterborough Kiwanis Club, he said, was one of the most prominent organizations in the city and had done a great deal of good work during the time it had been in existence. On behalf of his colleagues of the City Council and the citizens of the city, he welcomed the guests and extended to them a cordial greeting. In conclusion, said Acting Mayor Phelan, "the city is yours—go as far as you like."

President John J. Craig.

It was his privilege to welcome the Kiwanians who were present on this occasion, declared President Jack Craig. "We have made all preparations for your enjoyment and pleasure, and our only wish is that you enjoy being with us," he declared. The fact that the visitors were here, he said, would leave an inspiration with the members of the local club, and would enable them to understand the principles underlying the great movement of Kiwanis.

Lieut.-Gov. William Cockburn.

"My duty is to introduce to you District Governor H. Stanley Higman," said Lieut.-Gov. "Bill" Cockburn. He was not known to every member, he said, but he was one of the hardest workers for Kiwanis International. There were buttons for presidents and past presidents, he said, but there had never been a button issued to the Governor. He felt it was a privilege that a governor's button should be presented at the Peterborough club's picnic as this club has always been one of the outstanding clubs in the district. At this juncture Lieut.-Gov. Cockburn pinned the governor's badge on the lapel of the Governor's coat, stating that it was the gift of the Toronto Convention Committee.

District Governor H. Stanley Higman.

Governor Stan. Higman expressed his appreciation of the privilege in being asked to attend the picnic. It was the second time, he declared, that he had met the Peterborough boys, and he hoped it would be a pleasure that would be often repeated. "In all sincerity," he declared, "and it was not with the intention of giving swelled heads to the members of the Peterborough Club—but it was the outstanding club in the Ontario-Quebec district." A person could not help but wonder how the city of Peterborough ever got along without it. It worked for the benefit of the community and the glory of Kiwanis, he declared. The Peterborough Club had met in full its obligations as a fully fledged club. In conclusion, said Governor Higman, "I thank you for your many kindnesses to me."

Visit Lift Lock.

At the conclusion of the luncheon the entire assembly proceeded to the Lift Lock. A. L. Killally, superintendent of the Trent Canal, had a special staff of men on hand to explain the mechanism to the visitors. From the top of the lock, the visitors were conducted by the guides, travelling down the spiral staircase to the base of the famous structure. Several groups became separated during the tour and caused much merriment when they would pop out in unexpected corners to greet their friends who had reached the same place by devious routes. Lieut.-Gov. Bill Cockburn during his trip through the lock, was successful in catching a fish, which he claimed was the biggest ever caught in the district. He reiterated his claim many times during the day, and apparently his claim was warranted, for not once was his claim disputed by his audience, which included many prominent followers of the sport.

Arrival at Chemong.

Automobiles were on hand to transport the visitors to Chemong where the sports were staged. The softball tournament between the various clubs got away to a fast start, Riverdale club of Toronto defeated Belleville; Peterborough defeated Orillia. In the finals Peterborough defeated Riverdale and won the trophy, a handsome cup which was present by the Kiwanis Club of Belleville for competition among the teams in the district. This makes the second occasion for Peterborough to win this trophy, they having won it at the Belleville club picnic some weeks ago. Several times during the progress of the different games the decisions of the umpires led to considerable feeling. Charlie Cook of Peterborough and Bob Gorman of Belleville were led from the field by Art Slade and J. John who were dressed as policemen and were placed in a special cage which had been built for that purpose. The cage resembled a huge cell and was attached to a block and tackle suspended from the branch of a tree. The umpires were placed inside and were hoisted some fifteen feet from the ground. They were left suspended in this state for some minutes much to the merriment of the spectators.

Bathing Beauty Contest.

This contest probably the first of its kind ever held in the Province if not indeed in the Dominion was unique in the fact that it was for males only, the winner being crowned "Mr. Kawartha."

Bob Gorman, Belleville; Jack McKone, Art Reynolds and Ed. Wood were the entrants. Some wonderful and dazzling costumes were displayed the general effect being a riot of color blended with an artistic selection

TO ASK CANADA FOR AGREEMENT TO STOP LIQUOR

United States Wishes To Have Conference With Minister of Customs.

SENTIMENT CHANGES.

Other Nations Willing To Make Clearance of Vessels Harder.

PAUL SMITHS, N. Y., Aug. 19.—Great Britain intends to aid the United States to the utmost in enforcing the Volstead Act, and in accordance with the agreement reached by General Andrews in negotiation with the British Government, Canada will follow the same policy and enact laws to check the flow of liquor by vessels from the Maritime Provinces, and to stop the smuggling over the border.

This became known here yesterday when Secretary Kellogg was requested by General Andrews to arrange, through the Consul-General at Ottawa, for a conference with the Canadian Minister of Customs to negotiate an understanding with that Government with respect to the character of registration of vessels and other matters incident to the illicit liquor traffic.

It is probable that an official of the Department of Justice as well as a representative of the State Department will accompany General Andrews to Canada.

Secretary to Study Request.

Secretary Kellogg received the request, and it is understood did not approve it at once, but will take up the proposed conference upon his return from Plattsburg. According to information here, General Andrews will spend a short vacation on Lake Champlain and devote a part of his stay to the prohibition enforcement troubles that have arisen between the United States and Canada.

The reaching of an agreement with Canada, it is said, is only a matter of formality, as earlier negotiations have paved the way for prompt action on the weakness in

Farmer Burning Rubbish Causes Near Riot In Cavan

CAVAN, Aug. 19.—On Tuesday evening Mr. Archie Kennedy was burning straw. It made a great blaze and as Mr. Kennedy's farm is situated on a hill, it could be seen for quite a distance.

Soon telephones began to ring, inquiring, "where is the fire?" The fire appeared so large that the report quickly circulated that Mr. Kennedy's house and barn were on fire. A number of cars filled with helpers quickly gathered, but luckily it was only straw and rubbish that was being destroyed.

DROWNED BOYS RECEIVE BURIAL AFTER SERVICES

Large Crowd Throngs Salvation Army Temple Before Funeral.

PUBLIC SYMPATHY

Caskets Carried Out by Fellow-Scholars and Playmates.

Amid many manifestations of public sympathy, Allan and Leonard Barnes and Bertie Cookman, the three young victims of Monday's drowning tragedy in the Otonabee River were buried yesterday afternoon. After short services conducted in Mr. Barnes' home, by Rev. J. D. Richardson, pastor of St. James' United church, and in Mrs. Cookman's house, by Adjutant Frank Ham of the Salvation Army, the caskets were taken to the Salvation Army Temple, where a more lengthy service was held. During the service it was intimated that a memorial service will be held on Sunday evening in the Temple.

Relatives of the dead boys who attended were: Mr. and Mrs. William H. Barnes, grandparents, Monaghan Road; Mrs. Edith Cookman, mother of Bertie, Monaghan Road; Mr. Geo. Cookman, uncle; Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Barnes, parents of Allan and Leonard, St. James street; Mr. John Barnes, Cottesmore, uncle; Mr. and Mrs. Barnes, Mount Dennis, Ont. uncle; Mrs. Coustance, McLaren, aunt, Montreal.

Eight boys—Ashton Fife, Kenneth Meredith, Jack Richardson, Garnet Jamieson, Arthur McLaren, Osgorne Wells, Earl Grose and Tom Smart—all from St. James' United church Sunday school, of which Allan and Leonard Barnes had been scholars, and R. Bell, M. Parnell, J.Young and H. Brooks from the Salvation Army Sunday school troop of Scouts, carried the caskets containing their playmates and fellow scholars into the Temple and brought them out again at the end of the service.

The Temple was crowded to capacity when the service began with the singing of the hymn, "When Our Heads Are Bowed With Grief." Rev. J. D. Richardson read a number of appropriate passages from the Old and New Testaments. Sergeant Major A. J. Lashbrook, who spoke on behalf of the teachers of the Salvation Army Sunday school, of which Bertie Cookman was a scholar, tendered the sympathy of the school to the relatives of the three boys.

A solo, "Precious Promise God Hath Given" was sung by Cadet Clark.

Adjutant Frank Ham.

Basing his address on two passages of scripture, Psalm 91:2: "I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress; my God, in Him will I trust", and John 14:2: "In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I got to prepare a place for you." Adjutant Ham said: "This week, sorrow and gloom came not only to the homes of those most immediately affected but also into the entire city. When we realized that the boys had indeed gone, our tears mingled with the tears of those who were most deeply touched by sorrow. We have read the words of comfort, "I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress; my God; in Him will I trust." God alone knows the measure of human sorow. We may sympathize with those in sorrow, but how little can we do to help them. But He knows our need. He said: "I go away but I will send you a Comforter." That Comforter is with us to-day.

It was easy for us to see what was present but difficult to discern that which was afar off. Job saw the affliction that came upon him, but he also saw the glory in the distance. "Though He slay me," said Job, "yet will I trust Him." This was the only thing that gave us calmness and confidence, loyalty and trust. We had to trust God in the darkness and not only in the light. There was also on record in His Book, words of hope. To the Christian Jesus was the light. Out of the wreck would come a reconstruction.

Death was a gateway to life. They sorrowed not as those without hope.

The Bible also contained words of assurance, "If a man die shall he live again?" asked Job. Here was the answer. For as in Adam all die, so in Christ shall all be made alive.

It also brought from God words of preparation, "He lives most, who feels most, who thinks noblest and acts best."

At the conclusion of the address the congregation sang the hymn, "Safe in the Arms of Jesus."

Mrs. McElhinney, who with her husband was formerly stationed in Peterboro, pronounced the benediction.

A large number of cars followed the two hearse to Little Lake cemetery.

Don't Be Afraid To Wed—Spinsters' Lives Shorter Doctor Tells Women That Many Faces Need Scrubbing

DURHAM, N.H., Aug. 19 (Canadian Press).—Don't be afraid to get married—married women live longer than spinsters, though they havn't the long lead married men have over bachelors, Dr. Eugene Fisk, Medical Director of the Life Extension Institute, advised women yesterday. Time does not cause old age, he declared, speaking at the Farmers' and Homemakers' Conference at the University of New Hampshire. He offered a health recipe for retaining youth and said that many young women's faces would benefit by scrubbing. He questioned whether modern women were healthier than those of a generation ago. Of 100,000 women examined in twelve years, he said, not a perfect one was found.

"There is no short cut to youth and beauty," said Dr. Fisk. "Limit night life, take daily exercise, and try to expose a good portion of the skin each day to direct sunlight. Keep worry and fear out of your life, and forget your birthdays."

CONFERENCE TO INAUGURATE NEW PEACE FORMULA

Expected Government Will Name Neutral Chairman for the Committee.

GREATER TAXATION

Winston Churchill Severely Criticizes Principals for Not Settling Strike.

LONDON, Aug. 19. —(Canadian Press). — A conference between the miners and mine owners yesterday, will inaugurate a new series for a peace formula in Great Britain's prolonged coal dispute. The negotiations, however, are not expected to progress far without the guiding hand of the government, which will probably name the neutral chairman.

Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, speaking at Swansea, yesterday, severely criticized the coal industry—the miners and mine owners—for not settling the controversy during the nine months of the government subsidy which cost the taxpayers of the country £23,000,000.

The Chancellor said that if all the miners returned to work to-day, additional taxation could be avoided only with the greatest exertion, for funds needed for cultural and economic development had been consumed in the hateful internal warfare.

"Our hard pressed island community," he declared, "has added to all its burdens that of preying on itself."

Mr. Churchill went on to say that the government's good offices were available to both miners and owners. "But," he declared, "whatever happens, there can be no more subsidy. On that we are determined. We will NOT accept the position that one industry is to quarter itself indefinately upon the public exchequer at the cost of the whole mass of the people."

The miners executive board was authorized Monday to re-open negotiations, the vote in favor of this step being 428,000 to 360,000 and yesterday A. J. Cook, Secretary of the Miners' Federation communicated with Coal Owners, who agreed to the new conference.

YOUTH DROWNS IN PALS SIGHT

Clever Swimmer Is Caught In Undertow at Hamilton.

RESCUE ATTEMPTED.

HAMILTON, Aug. 19—Ronald Walker, nineteen years old, son of Deputy Postmaster Walker of Guelph, lost his life yesterday afternoon while swimming in the lake near the canal.

Walker, a clever swimmer, was the seventh victim this year of the lake and bay in the vicinity of the Beach and Hamilton. He got beyond his depth in the water and found a heavy sea and strong undertow too much for him. Other swimmers in the vicinity, realizing his plight, made a heroic effort to save him.

Harry Gilbert, Harry Graham and Thomas Simpson of Burlington started out for the unfortunate swimmer. Gilbert, who has saved many lives at the Beach, swam to Walker and started to assist him to shore. He had helped him a considerable distance when he found the task impossible. Watchers on the shore thought both youths were going down, but Gilbert managed to get into shallow water before collapsing. At a late hour last night Walker's body had not been recovered.

The fatality will no doubt revive the insistent demand which followed the last drowning in the vicinity of the canal for proper life-saving apparatus, and, if necessary, a lifeguard for the protection of the thousands who daily bathe there.

FRENCH EXCITED OVER RETURN OF TWO TOWNS

Prospect of Restoration of Border Cities To Germany Is Discussed.

MAY BE OPPOSED.

Belgium Is Tempted By Offer of Billion Marks For Cities.

PARIS, August 19.—French opinion is greatly excited over the possibilities of the retrocession by Belgium to Germany of two important frontier towns, Eupen and Malmedy, which were given to Belgium under the Treaty of Versailles.

The French realize that Belgium is tempted by the price of one billion gold marks, but hope that consideration for the security of Franco-Belgian solidarity will prevail. The strategic value of these two frontier towns is pointed out, apart from the humiliation of seeing the western frontier become the first to suffer from modification since the war.

From a strictly legal viewpoint, the French are not sure but what they can invoke the sanctity of the Versailles Treaty in order to prevent the cession, but the Franco-Belgian Treaty of 1920 certainly will be brandished and friendly efforts will be made to turn Belgium from the idea of restitution to the former enemy of two towns which possess considerable strategic importance in war time.

French Nationalists bitterly remark, moreover, that if Germany can find one billion gold marks so easily and overcome the transfer difficulties she might be asked to produce more cash on the reparations' account.

One financing method proposed by Germany is the redemption of part of the 6,000,000,000 marks issued by the German army during the occupation of Belgium and forced on the country as legal currency.

One Ton Of Elephant Captured By Indians

CRANBROOK, B. C., Aug. 19. —(Associated Press). —Myrtle, 6 years old and weighing about a ton, one of the three circus elephants that escaped 10 days ago, has been captured, but her two mates are still at large being sought in the mountains by organized bands of hunters. Myrtle was found by Indians who sent word to town. Circus employes went out and easily hobbled the hungry elephant with chains. She was brought here and confined in a cattle corral.

BUSINESS MEN URGE PARLEYS

Wish Peace and Prosperity in Mexico, Say Their Letters.

NO COMMENT.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 19 (Canadian Press).—Mexican business men, mostly Roman Catholics, have proposed to the Government and the Catholic Episcopate that a conference be held for adjustment of the present religious controversy.

In their letters to President Calles the business men say they are only seeking peace and prosperity in Mexico in proposing the conference and assert they are not actuated by personal losses due to the economic boycott or by religious motives.

"The Government has said it is not concerning itself with the creed or discipline of the Catholic Church," the letters read, "while the Church says it is ready to obey the law if the Government regulations are only administrative measures and do not affect religious discipline. Therefore it should be possible to reconcile these attitudes."

So far the President's office has declined to comment on the proposals for peace.

FIRE THREATENS TO WIPE OUT BEAVERTON BUSINESS SECTION AT EARLY HOUR THIS MORNING

Block of Stores Owned By William Young Is Burned Down.

LOSS $35,000.

Two Stores, With Hall and Apartment, Burned With Contents.

LINDSAY, Aug. 19 (Special to The Examiner).—Destruction of the entire business section of the village of Beaverton was threatened early this morning when a business block, owned by William Young, was totally destroyed by fire. Only good work by the local fire brigade, assisted by the brigades from Cannington and Woodville saved other buildings.

The fire was discovered about 2.30 this morning, and had been burning then for some time. It is thought to have been caused by a cigar or cigarette stub. None of the contents of the buildings were saved and the total loss is about $35,000 or $40,000. Insurance on the building amounted to $3,500.

The lower storey of the building was occupied by A. C. Taylor, dry goods, and by Fred King, butcher. Mrs. Clay lived in the apartment above the dry good stores, and Beaverton L.O.L. had lodge rooms above the butcher shop.

Returns To Court 24 Hours After Release On Suspended Sentence.

SIXTEEN YEARS OLD.

KINGSTON, Ont., August 19.—Twenty-four hours after he had been given his freedom on suspended sentence on a charge of theft, a sixteen-year-old Kingston boy found himself back in the same court on a similar charge. He was remanded a day for sentence.

The boy paid a visit to the George Richardson bathing house on Tuesday night and it is alleged stole $18 and a railway ticket to Toronto from one of the lockers, while the owner was enjoying a dip. The police ascertained that the boy who stole the money paid a visit to the city station of the C.N.R. and producing the ticket was bold enough to ask for a refund, stating that he did not intend to use the ticket.

COAL PARLEY IS SHORT LIVED

Owners and Miners Refuse To Recede From Old Positions.

LONDON, Aug. 19 (Canadian Press).—Negotiations between the British coal owners and the coal miners, which had been looked to bring peace in the long coal tie-up collapsed shortly after they opened this afternoon.

It is understood that both sides took up their old positions in the controversy from which neither would recede. The owners stood for an eight hour day, settling of wages according to the economic position of the industry, and a district settlement. The miners insisted on the seven hour day, a national agreement and refused to move on the question of wages until they had definite guarantees concerning re-organization of the industry.

Lady Clarendon and her two children who are now in Canada with the Earl of Clarendon. The Earl, who is Under Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs in the British Government, is in Canada on immigration affairs. In the photo are their daughter, Lady Joan Villiers, and their son, Hon. Nicholas Villiers.

The Princess Miguel de Braganza, widow of the Bourbon Pretender to the throne of Portugal, snapped at Newport, Rhode Island. The princess inherited a fortune from the estate of her mother, Mrs. St. Cyr, of San Mateo, California.

When the Prince of Wales visited Reading recently to open the new Caversham Bridge, he was shown some giant green peas of the balloon tire variety, produced with the aid of science and said to be the largest in the world. His Royal Highness also visited the Reading Industrial Co-operative Bakery, upper right, and the photographer shows an enthusiastic young member of the staff cheering the world's Prince Charming. The lower picture shows the Duke of York when he attended the Founder's Day celebrations of Dr. Barnardo's Homes at the Girls' Village Home, Barkingside, Essex.

As a guest of honor in the Columbia River Historical Expedition, J. B. Tyrrell, mining engineer and well-known Canadian historian, will accompany the party which left Chicago Friday, July 16, to follow the trails of the old explorers into the western lands beyond the Rockies. While on the trip many points of historic interest will be visited, valuable material will be collected and monuments will be dedicated throughout the Western States to the memory of the heroic explorers, traders and pioneers who opened up the land to civilization. Tyrrell will be the speaker at several points. Above is reproduced a photo of the invitation received by Tyrrell and his wife asking them to be members of the expedition. It is signed by Theodore Christianson, Governor of the State of Minnesota, and member of the Minnesota Historical Society to which Tyrrell has been elected as honorary member.

A new portrait of Hon. Frank Carrell L.L.D., member of the Quebec legislative council, president of the Telegraph Printing Company in Quebec, and one of Quebec's foremost journalists, who declared in Toronto that Canada was on the eve of a remarkable period of expansion and prosperity. He forsees great development in northern Quebec, especially around Arvilla, the aluminum town, which, he says will soon be a great city.

The Canadian Henley held recently at Port Dalhousie, Ont., makes the more interesting this photo from the Henley Royal Regatta, England, recently held. It shows two river maidens enjoying the sunshine and races beneath the shelter of their parasols.

Lord Londonderry, prominent British coal owner, who, according to a cable despatch, declares that England will never stand for nationalization of mines.

YOUTHFUL DRIVERS

A citizen, commenting upon traffic accidents, complains to The Examiner that much of the trouble is caused by youthful drivers of both sexes and advocates a more careful check-up of the ages of motorists.

Undoubtedly, there seems to be a generous sprinkling of young drivers at the wheels of local automobiles, and it is possible to think of much more innocuous toys to be entrusted to children than high-powered motor cars.

Youthful judgment is not always to be trusted, and the temptation to speed has a peculiar effect upon young drivers who are not mature enough to realize that danger as well as excitement goes with "stepping on the gas."

The whole system in regard to the control of drivers is open to criticism.

It is a system that turns loose on the public street an army of people who may be physically or mentally unfit to control the powerful machine they attempt to guide and whose knowledge of driving is, to say the least, scanty.

BEAUTY CONTESTS

As a curious crowd tried to get a glimpse of the winner of the Toronto beauty contest, who was on exhibition in the window of a store in the Queen City yesterday, three women were pushed through the plate glass and sustained painful injuries.

The incident explains without justifying the vogue of beauty contests.

So long as the curiosity of the mob can be commercialized there will be found promoters greedy enough to stage such affairs, and girls foolish enough to let themselves be used.

In many of its details the modern beauty contest differs but little from the old time slave market.

The assistants who displayed the girl slaves caused the patrons to bid more liberally by a cunning shifting of the slight draperies that but sketchily veiled the charms of the human chattels.

In 1926 the promoters insist upon the contestants revealing themselves in bathing suits that leave but little to the imagination.

And 40,000 people fought to get a better view of the silly girls who lent themselves to the scheme.

Such contests are a sad commentary upon the vaunted superiority of present day civilization.

THE POLLUTED OTONABEE.

Once more the question of the pollution of the water at one of the civic bathing beaches is before the authorities.

The Santary Inspector has reported to the Board of Health that the water of the Lake street beach is unfit to be used by bathers.

That is a serious condition of affairs.

It is practically an impossibility to swim without taking in some water, and if the pollution of this point is very great, the risk to bathers need not be emphasized.

It is not a new matter by any means.

Similar complaints have been made in other seasons.

The pollution of the water, however, continues.

The Examiner believes that the source of the contamination should be traced and every effort made to stop the pollution of the Otonabee.

We ourselves have been offenders in the past, so far as the river below the city is concerned, but we have seen the error of our ways, and at heavy expense are arranging for the disposal of our sewage in a manner that saves the Otonabee.

And having done so, it is our duty to our people to insist that the water flowing through our city shall be kept free from pollution.

Our citizens are entitled to safe bathing, and it is the duty of the authorities to provide it for them.

It cannot be done by half-hearted efforts.

BIGGER THINGS.

"The customs matter has done its work. The constitutional issue is thin stuff at best. These men who ask to be given the direction of this great land's affairs, in whose care it may stagnate or advance, may rightly be asked now to put the little things aside and deal with essentials. What will they do to maintain a high standard of public morality? What will they do to promote Canada's all-round development? What will they do to improve the general welfare and the individual prosperity of all citizens?"

With this quotation from The Calgary Herald, The Examiner feels confident that many of its readers, while their political allegiance may differ, are in hearty accord.

The heads of the two great political parties may well give the people of this country something more substantial to ponder over than the customs scandal on one side and the constitutional issue on the other.

The voters have followed the customs investigation and the debates in the House closely, and their minds are no doubt made up as to this question; similarly they have their own views in regard to the constitutional controversy and are not keen to hear anything more of it.

These two issues can be safely left to the judgment of the electorate.

What is important is to hear from both parties something alive, definitive and substantial in regard to the big problems facing this country.

On September 14th we are asked to select an administration to which we will have to entrust the carrying on of our business for some years.

We want the best we can get.

Yet if the parties persist in back-yard, over-the-fence battling over minor issues, how are we to choose?

Almost four weeks of the campaign remain.

It is to be hoped they will be used by the leaders in constructive and helpful discussion of major issues and policies.

To quote again from The Calgary Herald:

"Canada's expenditures have been high, in proportion to the country's income and population. Canada has never subjected these expenditures of strict examination. This should be done. Outlets of unnecessary outlay ought to be closed. Every dollar of unproductive expenditure should be saved. This country can do what the United Kingdom and the United States did respecting national spending, and benefit in proportion as they benefited. What have Premier Meighen and Mr. King to say on this subject?

"The electors waht to hear policies expounded, the gospel of Canada preached, the plans for the future, not personal, acrimonious debates about the past."

PRODUCTION AND MANAGEMENT.

(Farm and Ranch Review, Calgary.)

The recent European war and its aftermath brought home to the world a multitude of strange economic facts, many of them old as the hills, but up to that time wholly unrecognized. One of the outstanding lessons taught mankind was that there is absolutely no limit to the amount of work to be done in this world, or to the amount of business to be developed. The truth is that over-production is inconceivable. The purchasing power of every country lies in its own power of production, and the more each country produces, the greater may be its trade with other countries, and the more they all produce together, the greater the variety of comforts and necessities available for the world's population. We have not even approached within measurable distance of satisfying reasonable human wants leave alone over supplying them.

What Canada, and most other countries, has suffered from during recent years, and what has given rise to general unemloyment, is not over-production, but unbalanced production. While Canada's population has been unequally distributed, our aggregate working force has been, and still is, vastly below our minimum national requirements. With millions of acres of the world's richest agricultural lands lying idle and undeveloped, and the world clamoring for food, it is paradoxical to harbor an unemployment problem. Widespread unemployment under such conditions is prima facie evidence of bankrupt statesmanship insofar as sufficient intelligence and energy has not been focussed on the solution of a problem which obviously lends itself to correction by well-known and proven methods.

In a vast country like Canada, containing within its boundaries so great a wealth of natural resources, there should be only two major problems in public policy, first, to provide for the gradual development of these resources by the introduction of new capital and by promoting a healthy increase in the working population, and, secondly, to so direct the quest for and distribution of such new population as to insure, as far as possible, that their energies shall be devoted to such occupations as will ensure a fairly balanced national production. Canada's present primary need is an increased rural producing and consuming population. With this need supplied, our industrial and transportation plants would be working over-time.

HOW TOURISTS MAKE TROUBLE.

(New York Herald-Tribune.)

An American newspaper correspondent in Paris, known to be a close and accurate observer, recently stated that while anti-American demonstrations were due partly to French jealousy of this country's prosperity, tactlessness on the part of American tourists was a contributing cause. On being told the price of something, American visitors often say to the keepers of shops and restaurants, "How much is that in real money?" This is meant as a jest, but, as the correspondent pointed out, it is not taken as such, the French naturally being sensitive about their deflated currency.

We find precisely the same attitude displayed in an article carried the other day by a New York paper. The article, the tone of which is patronizing and offensive throughout, purports to be an American impression of the Eton-Harrow cricket match at Lord's. Speaking of the coaches in which spectators dine, the writer says: "These cost twenty pounds, or one hundred fish in legitimate currency. As British currency has returned to normal, the sneer has not even a point."

It appears that the enterprising writer of the article, perceiving a crowd of people standing in Hyde Park, pushed his way through on general principles and found himself almost at the side of the Prince of Wales and the Home Secretary, who were reviewing a parade of special constables. "Not even the Prince of Wales' face corresponds to the advertised upper class face," he continues. "It is a tired face—the face of a boy who would look merry and engaging if he ever had enough sleep. He also needs a hair-cut." The Home Secretary is described as "a little man in a frock coat and a plug hat, who had a sick, worried face."

This is the voice of the bounder, the "smart aleck," the "wisecracker," who undoes the work of diplomats and makes things awkward for his more sensitive compatriots. To print such an article was a lapse of editorial judgment. We commend to the writer and the editor the wise and tolerant words of Sir Thomas Browne: "I feel not in myself those common antipathies that I can discover in others; those national repugnances do not touch me, nor do I behold with prejudices the French, Italian, Spaniard or Dutch; but where I find their actions in balance with my countrymen's, I honor, love and embrace them in the same degree."

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT

"Every one a swimmer by 1927" should be something more than a slogan. Peterborough should make it a reality.

Out in Athabaska they didn't vote as they liked, but apparently as the returning officer liked.

Mr. Ferguson may be planning a Hallowe'en election, with spirits as the main issue.

There must be times when every political leader regrets that some of his followers feel it necessary to make speeches.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Aug. 19.—(Canadian Press).—Evidence that export buying of wheat has been much more active than supposed helped to put fresh strength into wheat values yesterday. Largely as a result, the wheat market closed firm 7-8 to 1 3-8 net higher with corn 3-8 to 7-8 up, oats 3-8 to 3-4 advance and provisions showing a rise of 2 to 15 cents.

Active demand for future deliveries of wheat manifested itself especially in the latter part of the day, and there was a moderate amount of purchasing believed to be for foreign account. In addition, the fact was revealed that vessel charters for 1,250,000 bushels of wheat to be shipped from here to Montreal were made here late yesterday and today. Besides, with primary receipts smaller and with the case wheat trading basis firm both here and in the southwest, selelrs were in a minority the greater part of the time.

Threshing delays in spring wheat territory were again a bullish factor, owing to reports of additional wet weather northwest. A reduction of 20,000,000 bushels, in the official estimate of the wehat crop of Roumania was also a subject of comment in view of the fact that Liverpool quotations today were steadier than due. On the other hand, the United States department of Agriculture reported that domestic winter wheat farmers expect to increase their average 44 per cent this fall.

Corn and oats rallied with wheat. The Missouri state crop report was bullish on corn, saying rains came too late to help a great deal of the crop.

Provisions were responsive to upturns both in hog values and in grain.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 19. — (Canadian Press). — Outside of a little business worked over night in Canadian Western oats with foreign buyers, the Montreal export grain market was very quiet yesterday. There continued to be a steady demand from United States exporters for continental freight room here, but as the available supply at present is very limited the volume of business was curtailed but rates are firm.

There was some demand from exporters for Canadian western oats in the domestic cash grain market and sales of odd round lots were made at C. I. F., prices, but apart from this the market was inactive The tone of the market was steady and prices were unchanged.

The enquiry for spring wheat grades of flour was small but prices were steady. A little business was done in winter wheat flour and the undertone to the market was firm.

Prices for all grades of mill feed were well maintained under a moderate demand. Business in standard grades of rolled oats was quiet at $3.20 per bag.

Owing to a scarcity of supplies indications in the egg market point to an early upward revision in prices. The trade treaty to-day was active. The receipts were 2,541 cases.

A steady feeling prevailed in the market for beans with a moderate amount of business passing. Sales of car lots of choice white handpicked were made at $2.25 per bushel and smaller quantities at $2.35 to $2.45 per bushel.

The volume of business accomplished in butter was small but values were unchanged. The receipts were 430 packages.

The cheese market was without any new feature to note, the trade was quiet and prices steady. The receipts were 6,186 boxes.

STERLING EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, Aug. 19 (Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

Sterling demand $4.84 3-4.
Sterling cables $4.85 3-8.

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

WHAT IS A "REPLICA?"

"Nashville is building a replica of the Parthenon; Tennesseans plan an exact to-the-inch reproduction of the famous Grecian temple," says a headline in one of the leading newspapers of America.

The English is faulty; the word "replica" should not have been used. "Replica" means "a duplicate executed by the artist himself and regarded, equally with the first, as an original." Of course, it will be seen, when one keeps this only correct use of "replica" in mind, that it is impossible forNashville or any other place to have a replica of the Parthenon, since Ictinus ands Callicrates, who designed the famou building, and Phidias, the sculptor who supervised the construction, have been dead many centuries. The newspaper should have said that Nashville is building a "copy," a "duplicate" or a "reproduction" of the Parthenon.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

It's all right to toe the mark yourself but someone else is always toeing the easy mark.

Nothing seems to matter very much when you are sleepy.

Small boys are a nuisance to the neighbors. But then, neighbors are a nuisance to small boys.

No one can make a fool out of you without your help.

The fellow who wants but little here below has it in his head.

It's rather silly to criticize an office holder. He's bound to be smarter than those who elected him.

The muscle about Muscle Shoals seems to be mostly jaw muscle.

Whenever a ship is lost the newspapers always say, "Ship Lost at Sea." Probably to save people the trouble of looking in vacant lots and alleys.

If you are fond of moving pictures, lend the wife a hand at house cleaning time.

He walked right in and kissed his wife.
Of course it set her thinking.

A FOOD THOUGHT FOR TODAY

A GONE GOOSE.

Indecision is much more harmful than making an occasional fool of yourself by some unwise or unprofitable move. Better do something than do nothing.

The perpetual postponer, the dead-stop delayer puts off everything but his own funeral.

Lacking the courage to act is a common fault. Waiting for the most favorable time to start something means that you will probably end up as a waiter.

Dive in and strike out. You will never learn to swim while standing on the shore.

Try a thing and from your experience get your education.

Every great and commanding man in the history of humans has been a tryer. The failures have been the fellows who have waited for the most favorable moment to move and as a result they have never moved.

The great danger in always delaying is that you lose the practice to try.

No prospect has an advance assurance of success. All plans must be proved up.

Waiting and weighing things for days, weeks, months, is a waste of time. The highest human intelligence acts and usually on what we call a "hunch." And when that "hunch" leaps hot from your heart or your head, act, and act immediately, for then you have your heart and your head working with you and without these two factors, you are a gone goose.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

All letters must be signed by the writer, and must bear his address. A pen-name may be used for publication except in letters on political subjects, which must bear the writer's name for publication.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—The war policy of Mr. Meighen is rapidly developing throughout Canada into the storm centre of the election. It is bound to be so. No more important issue than the existence of the Empire could be laid before the people. Unless we have grown mentally useless we must realize that this is no cry of "Wolf! Wolf!" but a startling fact raised by Mr. Meighen to a matter of the highest import when he says that so far as he is concerned he is content to abide by the result of a general election as to whether we shall take part in the defence of the Empire and therefore be a part of the Empire or not. If he had said I will place my policy of war, if there has to be a war, before the people at a general election in time of peace and this is the general election, this 1926 general election, I could have understood it. But to hold the whole thing off until the necessity of defence arises and then not to know till after the long drawn out humbug of a general election what he will do is not to lead the people of Canada into the Empire but out of it. Lest someone should say that I am possibly animated by some feeling of unfriendliness in the matter locally I can only say that I wrote and offered Mr. Peck my services in this campaign expecting that at his nomination by the convention he would stand four-square for the British Empire but not a word regarding this momentous question was uttered by him. I will gladly support him now if he will repudiate the Meighen policy of subserviency and disloyalty. This issue is the one issue that causes me to refuse to cast my lot in with him. Does Mr. Meighen or does Mr. Peck expect that the veterans will support such a policy? There are some who would make a sort of pet of the Conservative candidate here and beg support of him on such a ground. I do not believe that Mr. Peck is that sort. I do not believe he wishes to be shorn of the full stature of a man on any pretence and that he can be made a mere pet of. Let him come forward boldly and assert that Canada says now with no uncertain sound that her policy is that if the Empire is in danger from any cause whatever Canada and Canadians will spring instantly to its defence. The U. S. feels with remarkable poignancy the disgrace of having sung with the hysterical neurotics that it didn't raise its boys to be soldiers. According to these wild women and near-women the U. S. didn't raise its boys to be men! But all that nonsense met its fate and received its reply in the promptness and brilliance of American participation in the war.. It would almost have paid Canada to have hired one German regiment to come through Canada practising its policy of kultur and frightfulness on our women. How soon their hysteria would have taken a different turn. Are we then to be always at the mercy of silly sentimentalists or are we becoming such ourselves. But whatever happen let us here in Peterborough, the home of the 93rd, that gave the lives of 246 of its brave men to the cause of Empire and civilization, refuse to approve any such so-called policy as the miserable subterfuge so denominated by Mr. Meighen.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

WHEN THE SUN COMES THROUGH

Have you ever seen the sun
Trying to come through a cloud?—
Takes a peep, a little one,
Though the wind is roaring loud,
Looks around a corner, breaks
Through the mist a little while,
Silvers all the edges—takes
Every chance it finds to smile!

So a cloud will drift across
Skies of ours, and bring the rain;
So much gain must have its loss,
So much joy must have its pain.
But I know no better way
Our own hearts to reconcile
Than to seize, some gloomy day,
Every chance we find to smile!

Other lives have other ills,
We must struggle with our own,
When a cloud our heaven fills
We must master it alone.
But I know the cloud will break,
Linger but a little while
In our skies, if we will take
Every chance we find to smile!

SHOCKS AND HABIT
By Dr. Frank Crane

What would you do if you were handed a million dollars?

Would you throw your hat up in the air, if you were wearing one? Or yourself? Or call up all your friends? Or arrange a big party to celebrate?

The chances are ninety-nine to one that you would go on doing what you were doing before.

In California the other day the wife of a tire-shop worker was frying eggs for supper.

She was notified that she had been left a hundred million dollars by the death of a forgotten uncle who had made his fortune in the Kimberly mines of South Africa.

What did she do?

She went on frying the eggs, carefully turning them to be sure they would not burn.

It takes time to adjust yourself to a big shock and in the meantime habit carries you along.

During the Santa Barbara earthquake last year a street sweeper was at work when the tremors began.

He was observed to continue his sweeping and shoveling while he gazed in amazement at the rocking buildings and the trembling pavement.

The shock was so great that it left him unconsciously going on in the things habit had made automatic.

In the east a man who ran a small welding place became, by inheritance, a millionaire over night.

The next morning he went to work as usual, saying he didn't know anything else to do to have any more fun.

The habits of a lifetime won't change over night even for a million dollars.

A sudden change in the way a person lives is as difficult as a sudden change in direction by a speeding automobile.

The centrifugal force of habit resists.

The great majority of us, under the sudden shock of altered conditions, would show the same characteristic as the feed store driver who had never taken a day off in fifty years.

He was given a day's vacation and spent it loafing around the store.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.— A strange ticket landed Wong Young, of Mott street, in police court. The same ticket got him out. Young was accused of selling lottery tickets, but a court interpreter could not tell whether it was a laundry ticket, a love letter or a lottery slip.

CAMPBELLFORD HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS WIN MANY HONOURS

Middle School Examination Results Announced—Fine Showing For School.

TWO GIRLS HIGHEST.

Margery Ackerman and Cherrie Turner Rivals For Years.

(Eaminer Correspondence).

CAMPBELLFORD, August 19.— The Middle School examination results for Campbellford's High School, received Wednesday from the Department of Education, are highly pleasing to the students, their teachers, the Board of Education, and also very gratifying to the citizens, who are thus given new proof of the excellent work being done in the local schools. A month ago the high efficiency and collective ability of the Public School staff was shown in entrance examination results, and now attention is agreeably drawn to the achievement of the High School in the last academic year.

Briefly, the students were successful in 87 per cent. of the aggregate of the subjects upon which they were individually examined, and 67 per cent. of the successful candidates attained honor standing. These are figures which stoutly sustain the reputation of Campbellford's High School. The old building has given place to new, but there has been no depreciation of the traditional scholarship re-incarnated in the modern institution of recent structure. The principal, Mr. E. H. Greig, and his staff, have well deserved the congratulations of the students and the citizens generally. The people have provided the best and most congenial of facilities, and the staff respond to their duty with a fidelity that rounds out a rich offering to those earnest students from the town and district who realize the opportunity that requires only their acceptance.

From such success as this year's, an increased attendance is expected when the fall term opens on September 7. The High School has the accommodation for more than the town's students, and each year sends more and more from the adjacent district.

An interesting detail of the results is the fact that Margery Ackerman and Cherrie Turner are tied at the head of the honors list. Each girl has seven first-class and one second-class honor scores, but the total marks each received is not yet available. These figures will determine which of the two students has won the highest rank in the examinations. Since they passed the entrance they have been close, friendly rivals, with the fortunes of the annual class tests or rather contests about equally divided between them.

In the results below, the rating of the students is indicated as follows:

First-class honors (75-100)—I.
Second-class honors (66-74)—II.
Third-class honors (60-65)—III.
Pass—C.

Abbreviations of the subjects include: British History, Br. His.; Physics, Phys.; Chemistry, Chem.; Composition, Comp.; Algebra, Alg.; French Authors, Fr. Au.; French Composition, Fr. Comp.; Latin Authors, Lat. Au., etc.

Cleta Abernethy—Br. His., C.; Phys., C; Chem., I.

Margery Ackerman—Comp., I.; Lit., I.; Br. His., I.; Alg., I.; Geom., II.; Phys. I.; Fr. Au. I; Fr. Comp. I.

FAT WAS BENEFICIAL.

George H. Corsan Says It Helped Gertrude Ederle Swim Channel.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 19 (Canadian Press) — At last the fat girl has come into her own! Increased fat, almost as much as her great natural speed, enabled Miss Gertrude Ederle of New York to conquer the English Channel, according to George Hebden Corsan Sr., himself a swimmer of international note, and one of Canada's foremost swimming instructors. He says:

"There is no reason in the world why a woman should not swim the English channel far more easily than a man because a woman can stand the cold water better. Miss Ederle is a very fast swimmer. She has a flutter leg drive that fairly hurls her through the water and she learned to swim in a bathtub just nine years ago. She has been constantly coached on the crawl stroke and is good on either speed or distance. Miss Ederle has flat broad feet that are almost as good as fins, has enormous broad shoulders, a flat back and large hands. Besides this she is fat. Fatter than she was last year, thus she has practically every natural advantage in her favor."

RELIGIOUS PEACE RUMORS DENIED BY THE CHURCH

Leaders State Neither Side Has Withdrawn From Previous Side.

HOPE FOR CONGRESS.

Will Send Letter Proposing For Suspension of the Regulation.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 19 (Canadian Press)—Mexico City is flooded with many rumors that an agreement may be reached but when representatives of the governmnt and the Episcopate leaders were asked concerning this, it developed that neither had withdrawn from the previously announced stand.

The Episcopate let it be known a few days ago that while making no official statement, it intended to send a letter to the government proposing suspension of the regulations, pending hoped for efforts in congress to amend the religious clauses of the constitution or enact new regulations.

The government spokesman declared that the government's position was not changed and that it could not agree to disregard the constitution or enforcement of the law. The Episcopate still declines to make a formal statement but it is generaly believed that a letter has been sent to the government and that the government will not comply with the request.

The Episcopate reiterates its position that the regulations make impossible the life of the church in Mexico; but that the church is willing to come to any agreement whereby the regulations may be suspended, pending constitutional amendment by Congressional enactment or a plebiscite.

The government's reply has been that the question will be automatically settled when Catholics accept the constitution and not before.

OLD RESIDENTS CELEBRATE AT RIDEAU HALL

Came From All Parts of the Globe for the Celebration.

PUBLIC HOLIDAY.

Is Third Day's Programme of the Capitol City's Centennial Exposition.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 19. —(Canadian Press). — From many parts of the globe old residents of the Dominion's capital have "come home" for the celebration of Ottawa's one hundredth birthday and to-day they were feted upon the spacious lawns and about the beautiful gardens of Rideau Hall. Old boys and girls who knew this city when it was called Bytown were present; some from Australia, many from the British Isles, an equally large number from the United States and at least one from practically every large center in the Dominion. A party of 500 former residents of Ottawa arrived this morning from Montreal. From Ogdensburg, N. Y., a train of twenty one automobiles chugged in at an early hour bringing members of the American Legion headed by Adjutant W. L. Briggs and Mayor Westbrook.

Lord and Lady Byng are out of town and could not personally welcome the guests at the Rideau Hall garden party but Mayor and Mrs. Balharrie together with other civic officials performed this duty.

The usually staid capital city as a whole had taken on its best celebration dress yesterday for this had been declared a civic holiday by the Mayor. Practically all the Federal government offices were shut down and commercial business was for the most part halted. Early this evening a mile long parade of floats, depicting the development of Ottawa and representing its commercial and industrial establisments wended its way through the downtown section. To the accompaniment of military bands. Transportation facilities were brought to a dead halt by the large throng which turned out to view the spectacle.

A new form of amusement for this city was introduced in the form of "block dancing." Two entire blocks of a street adjoining the business section were roped off, flooded with varied colored lights and an augmented orchestra blared forth the latest jazz for the celebraters to practice the terpsichorean art

DELEGATES MAKE NO ADVANCEMENT

Two Policies Are Suggested at Conference on International Disarmament.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Aug. 19.—(Canadian Press). — The delegates of the Preparation Disarmament commission spent several hours yesterday in an endeavor to reach an agreement on the question of international control over armaments, but the divergent views were clung to so tenaciously by the respective sides that no advance was made.

Two lines of policy were suggested—one, the submission to two reports and the other, reference of the whole matter to the fall session of the commission with the declaration that the political aspects of the problem were so multitudinous that a decision could not be reached on technical grounds, and therefore must be solved purely as a political question.

It is expected that the delegates will adjourn at an early date to meet again in October.

Irish Delegation Honor Memory Of Fellow Citizen

OTTAWA, Aug. 18.—(Canadian Press.)—"To the glory of God and the Honor of Ireland," was the simple but expressive inscription on the wreath placed yesterday by the Irish Free State delegates to the Empire Parliamentary Association meeting in Australia upon the statue of Thomas D'Arcy McGee in the House of Commons grounds, when visiting the capital.

"We are glad to do this honor to our countryman who served Canada and laid down his life for her," said Major Bryan R. Cooper, heading the Free State party. "His memory is still green in the land of his birth."

BOY DROWNED NEAR STIRLING

Thomas Prince Fails To Come To Surface After Dive.

BARNARDO BOY.

STIRLING, Aug. 19.—On Sunday afternoon some boys were bathing in the creek at the rear of J. B. Belshaw's home, when one of their number, Thomas Prince, a Barnardo boy, 15 years of age, who lived with Percy Craighead just east of the village, was drowned. He was diving off a spring board and had done it successfully once, but upon trying the second time did not come to the surface. By the time assistance came, which was only a few minutes, Dr. Alger being summoned also, efforts to resuscitate him were of no avail. An inquest has been ordered to settle upon the real facts of the drowning, this being necessary to satisfy those who have the bringing out of these boys from England. This particular boy was well thought of by those who knew him. The funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Craighead. Rev. R. Simpson of St. Andrew's church was in charge. In his remarks he spoke well of the boy as he had known him for the past three years. Mr. Robert Eggleton, his Sunday school teacher, also had good words to say about him. There were seven boys in Mr. Eggleton's class and the six boys who remain were the bearers.

The floral tributes were profuse and beautiful.

A brother of the deceased lives at Mr. R. R. Sarles' home near Oak Lake, and another brother at a home near Toronto, also a mother and two sisters in the old country.

FEATHER BOAS

CHEMONG PARK FIRE

Sunday morn at 1 a.m.
The cottagers all retired,
Canary voices rang through the Park
And gave the alarm of fire.
Arise ye sleepers one and all
The weak, the brave, the strong.
The old pavilion is all ablaze.
In dear old park Chemong.

Lawyer Kerr, the fire chief,
Is a hero in heat and smoke.
And Jerry Mac with shirt peeled off
He said it was no joke.
Carrying water from the Lake
To put the fire out.
While through the park brave Charlie ran,
You should have heard him shoot.

At Curve Lake village miles away
The Indians heard his cry
Come help us put the fire out
Or we will surely die.
Just then Ed. Cooney came around
Looking for a water-can
To take his place right in the flames
As a fire fighting man.

Bill Bradburn he was all dressed up
With diamond pin in tie
And said "Boys, if there was a wind
We would all speed up in high
But if the Lord will keep it calm
I promise you as an M.P. man
A brigade that's active, quick and strong
Will be installed at dear old Park Chemong.

Adjt. Bunton came to the scene
What can I do pray tell;
But Lawyer Kerr informed him everything was going well.
Harry, pulling down the fence, said it was hot as ——.
Keep the home fires burning was Danny Sullivan's song
While the fire reels from Peterborough
Made their way to Park Chemong.

ITALY PROSPERS UNDER FASCISTI

Professor From Rome Lauds Policies of Italian Dictator.

YOUTH PROTECTED.

TORONTO, August 18.—"About two and a half years ago, in an interview, I expressed my trust in the Government of Mussolini, and I am happy to be able to say that my hopes, which were the hopes of all good Italians, have been realized beyond all expectations," said Rev. Professor Alfredo Taglialatela, president of the Methodist Episcopal Theological School, Rome, who is a visitor in Toronto. "The fact that the Government is still there, while all around in the States of old Europe there has been such a perpetual changing of Cabinets, shows that the roots of the present regime have grown deeper in the conscience of the nation. Its enemies do not exist any more as a party, and individually you seldom find one who does not admit that many benefits have been given to the nation by Mussolini's Government."

Opposite Solutions of Problem.

Commenting on the great improvement in Italy's finances and trade balance, Professor Taglialatela claimed that this was perhaps the greatest work achieved since the reorganization of Italian labor and the relationship between capital and labor. "Two real revolutions have taken place in Europe since the Great War, the Russian and the Italian, and they represent the opposite solution of the one and the same problem, the biggest left by the last century — the relationship between capital and labor. In Russia they aimed at killing capital and by so doing killed both. In Italy both have been preserved and strengthened."

Spirit of Georgics Revived.

"Italy is energetically aiming to bring back the time of the sixteenth century when all the country, as the old historians tell us, was like a garden," said Prof. Taglialatela, speaking in regard to the frequent comment of the foreign press that the development of industry was greater than agriculture in Italy. "While our civil engineers are wonderfully developing our water power to emancipate us from buying coal, the soil of the nation is being forced to produce more abundant food. Special courses are being given in all the Provinces to teach both the young and the old better methods of farming. It seems as if the spirit of our old poet, Virgil, who sang the song of the cultivation of the land as no other poet has done, is being revived."

Fascismo Not Materialistic.

Vigorously opposing criticism which labelled Mussolini's Government as only materialistic, Professor Taglialatela contended that, to save a nation from her debts, to render her able to maintain and govern herself, were no more "material" ends than for an individual not to depend on others, but to earn his own livelihood. Recently some new laws have been passed, one effecting a curtailment of luxuries, all being rigidly enforced. The artistic temperament is predominant among Italians, which carries its defects along with its merits; that is, to follow every one his own inspiration in an individualistic way. Do you think it a material aim to teach discipline to such temperaments—to give them a deeper sense of the debt that individuals have to pay to the country?" he asked. He commented on the extra hour of work added to the eight-hour day, which was a high moral law, and the way in which the working people had accepted it showed that the moral atmosphere of the country had improved.

War Declared on Illiteracy.

A law was in force prohibiting the sale of liquor or tobacco to young people under 18 years of age, and forbidding them to act upon the stage. Mussolini's aims could not be only materialistic, he claimed, since the first of all the reforms was educational, and in reforming her schools in the reconstructive way that Italy had done she had declared war against illiteracy as well.

"Mussolini is truly a political genius. He possesses those qualities of deep insight, clear conception, strong will, prompt determination, audacity, passion and eloquence, that conquer the soul of a nation, even if she counts millenniums of history," stated Professor Taglialatela. "I do not intend to say that, in my opinion, everything done by the Fascisti Government is excellent. This would be pure eulogy. Rather, I believe, that its ecclesiastical policy is far from what it should be. But I am sure that the passionate love that Mussolini and his colleague have for the country will act as a light to guide them in the right direction."

Speaking of the rumors abroad that the liberty of non-Catholic religious bodies had been limited by the Fascisti Government, Professor Taglialatela said that the incidents referred to were only an occasional suppression of a few articles published in the Protestant papers, regarded by the censor as too strong against the religion of the State, and might lie wholly with the local authorities, rather than with the Government. "Not one of our churches, schools or institutions has been closed, and the work is going on the same as before. In Italy, as elsewhere, the Protestants are loyal to the State, and the Government can always depend on their loyal support."

TWO DROWNED AT DORCHESTER

London Man Caught By Undercurrent and Friend Attempts Rescue.

IN THAMES RIVER.

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 19. — Arthur H. B. Keene and Shurly Stanbush, both of London, were drowned about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the Thames River, about three miles south of Dorchester. Keene was in swimming when he was caught in a strong undercurrent. When he called for help Stanbush went to his assistance and was drawn under by the current. John M. Jeffrey, another member of the party, was nearly drowned in an attempt to save the other two.

Taking advantage of the Wednesday half-holiday, a party of nine went to an old fishing spot to spend the afternoon. After a couple of hours' enjoyment Keene decided to go in swimming and had been in the water some time when he was caught in a tricky current, and, being somewhat fatigued, was not able to get to safety. When he called for help Stanbush threw off his clothes and started to assist Keene, but the sudden chill of the water and the excitement were too much for him, and he was caught in the same current and also went down.

Keene's Body Recovered.

Keene's body was recovered about thre hours after the accident, but Stanbush's body had not been recovered at a late hour last night.

Keene was widely known in the motoring and business world. He was secretary of the local Motor Club for some time, but most of his life has been spent in the house furnishings and furniture business. For years he was head of Keene Bros. retail business, and when this was closed out a year or so ago, he established the Home Furnishings Company, of which he was head.

Stanbush is a comparatively newcomer to the city, having been here only about four months. He was one of the owners of the London Confectionery Company, coming here from Cleveland, Ohio, to take an interest in the local business.

Fire Department Assists.

Members of the London Fire Department, working under the personal supervision of Chief John Aitken, were sent to the scene of the fatality and recovered the body of Keene and later continued dragging operations for the body of Stanbush.

Keene is survived by his widow and two children, while Stanbush is survived by his widow.

Dr. Cameron Wilson, coroner, has declared an inquest unnecessary.

DELORO WINS LEAGUE TITLE

Beats Point Anne 13-4 in the Second Game of Play-offs.

COME FROM BEHIND.

MARMORA, Aug. 19. — For the second year in succession the Bay of Quinte League Championship has gone to Deloro through their victory on the home diamond yesterday over Point Anne, the score being 13 to 4. For the first five innings, it appeared that a third game would be necessary to complete the play-off. The visitors, getting the breaks, led at the end of the fifth, 4 to 0, Deloro then got going and characteristic hitting changed the complexion of the game.

Shea took the mound for Deloro and pitched good ball. Bennett, for Point Anne, hurled well for six innings, when he was relieved by Strachan who finished the game.

In the first innings, E. Green singled. Gaulin flied out. Goyer doubled, advancing E. Green to third, the latter scoring on an error. Maracle was out at first, retiring the side.

The next scoring came in the third, E. Green doubled. Gaulin singled, making second on an overthrow. Goyer flied to right field, E. Green scoring. M. Green flied to centrefield, Gaulin passing the plate. Maracle was out at first, retiring the side.

Point Anne got their last run in the fifth. In Deloro's half of this frame a double play by their opponents robbed them of a score. In the sixth Jack flied out. J. Quinn singled. Brown walked. Hughes struck out. Regan doubled, scoring Quinn.. Shea singled, scoring Brown Ralph reached first on the pitcher's error. A. Quinn was out at first, retiring the side.

In the seventh Boudreau singled. Jack tripled, scoring Boudreau. J. Quinn singled, scoring Jack. Brown singled and Hughes doubled, scoring Quinn and Brown.

In the eighth A. Quinn singled. Boudreau walked. A. Quinn stole third. Jack bunted safely, scoring A. Quinn. J. Quinn was out at first. Brown walked, and Hughes singled, Boudreau and Jack scoring. Regan with a fine two base hit scored Brown and Hughes. Shea was out at first. Regan scoring. Ralph flied out, retiring the side. In the ninth innings a double play by Deloro ended the game.

The weather conditions being delightful, a good crowd witnessed the game, many supporters of Point Anne making the journey. Deloro will in all probability meet Odessa, next in the O.B.A.A. semi-finals in a sudden death game.

WOMEN INDIFFERENT.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Aug. 19 (Canadian Press) — Canadian women, it is to be hoped, will, in the coming election, prove beyond all doubt that they do not merit the scathing rebuke given their American sisters by Mrs. Olive Joy Wright in her presidential address to the 3,000 delegates of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs in convention in Des Moines, Ia. She said: "The indifference of the average woman to the privileges and responsibilities of citizenship is a matter of great concern. The women are needed, and could make a great contribution to the political life of our nation, just as they have proven so valuable an addition to the business and professional world."

KIWANIS' INTER-CLUB

of make up colors.

The spectators were in a regular uproar as the four competitors paraded up and down the grounds and the click of cameras could be heard in all directions as the owners attempted to place on record a photographic memory of a scene that would undoubtedly live long in their memories. Bob Gorman of Belleville was adjudged winner of this novel contest and earned for himself the honored title of "Mr. Kawartha."

The Relay Race.

Three teams, Riverdale, Belleville and Peterborough entered the relay race for which a trophy was donated by the local club. Each team consisted of four men, the line up being as follows:

Riverdale— M. R. McKee, N. A. McIntosh, J. Pillar and G. Murray.

Belleville — Tom Hutchinson, C. Read, R. Ward and G. Lee.

Peterborough — Bob Mackey, Art Kimel, J. C. Green and C. Elliot.

This race was most exciting, the various runners pacing along almost man to man until in the last lap the Peterborough man gained enough to win the race almost by inches. The Riverdale team came second and were presented with medals as runners-up.

Ladies Novelty Race.

A host of entries came forward for this race, the rules of which declared that each competitor should run the distance set by the committee blow up a large balloon until it burst and then run back to the starting point. Many of the competitors came to grief through tripping and falling but the large majority completed the course. The race was won by Mrs. Hoult, Mrs. Ward coming second.

Presentation of Prizes.

At the conclusion of the dinner the prizes won by the various competitors were distributed.

Charlie Hanna, of Belleville, presented the silver cup, emblematic of the district championship, to the members of the Peterborough team and also the medals to the runners-up, the Rivedale club. In presenting the cup Mr. Hanna complimented the teams and assured them that the next time it was up for competition that they would find his native city, Belleville, would be a strong contender, if not an ultimate winner.

The relay race cup which was presented by the Peterborough club to the district remained with the club, due to the local team winning the race. Lieut. Gov. "Bill" Cockburn made the presentation.

To the ever popular Charlie Cook fell the task of presenting the prizes to the winner and runner-up in the ladies' novelty race, Mrs. Hoult and Mrs. Ward.

The inter-club cup, a handsome trophy, which is given by the district here, was brought here by the Riverdale club and presented to J. I. Allen as trustee of the Peterborough club. In presenting the cup G. Edmunds said that although this was the first gathering of this kind it was only the forerunner of many such occasions. Riverdale club, he declared, had a warm place in its heart for Peterborough. "This cup," he said, "started from Eastern Canada and will stay with you until you take it to some other club. Mr. Allen in returning thanks for the cup stated that the Peterborough club would undoubtedly take the cup with them to the Kingston-Ottawa district on the occasion of the Peterborough club's visit.

The winner of the male bathing beauty contest, Bob Gorman, of Belleville, and the runner up, E. H. Wood, of Peterborough, received their prizes from the hands of Mrs. Guy.

Miss Daisy Murray, of Peterborough, who earlier in the day had rendered two solos at the luncheon in the Empress hotel, was the recipient of a beautiful bouquet of flowers from the Peterborough club. The presentation was made by E. H. Wood.

Still another cup made its appearance towards the close of the presentation of prizes. Isaac McNabb, chairman for the occasion, had just stated that the presentation was over when George Guy, of Orillia, rose to his feet. In a short speech Mr. Guy stated that the Peterborough club had visited the Orillia club a short time ago and had left with them a medal. While they appreciated the medal, he said, they took the first chance they had of giving it away, and had consequently presented it to the Midland club. In return for the compliment that had been paid to them, he declared, and on behalf of the Orillia club he wanted to present a loving cup to the Peterborough club. This cup, he said, would help to show the feelings that the Orillia club cherished toward the Peterborough club.

The Dance

The pavilion was reserved for the use of the Kiwanians and their guests until 8.30 p.m. After this hour it was thrown open to the public and in a short time room was at a premium the dance developing into a community affair of a most unusual size. Fifteen couples from Omemee were there travelling in a special bus and many other representatives of neighboring towns and villages were also present.

During the evening a lucky number dance was held which resulted in Mrs. Cook and Lloyd Hamilton being declared the winners. Members of the Riverdale club despite the fact that they had to motor to Toronto apparently loath to leave the gathering were still on the floor dancing when at midnight came the close of what has one of the biggest days in the of any organization in the Peterborough.

Among those present were and Mrs. Reg. Burnet, Mr. a B. L. Thomson, Mr. and George L. Guy, Mrs. E. Lon Lillian Long, Mrs. Tom Mr. and Mrs. Bert Harris, M Mrs. W. J. Boyle and J. A. CHURCH RE-OPENED AND RE-DEDICATED

St. Andrew's Church of Stirling Has Been Painted and Repaired.

STIRLING, Aug. 19.—The services at St. Andrew's Presbyterian church last Sunday were fitting for the occasion, it being the re-opening services after the re-decorating of the church. Rev. Mr. Grier of Campbellford preached both morning and evening to large congregations. At the evening service Rev. Mr. Simpson was present and the church was re-dedicated to the purpose for which it was built and dedicated in the first place. Special music was rendered by the choir for the occasion, Arthur Duncan being the soloist at the morning service and Mrs. Williams in the evening.

At a recent meeting of the Women's Institute $100.00 was voted to the memorial fund and also supplied funds for the purpose of building dressing rooms at the swimming pool. A large electric light has been placed immediately over the pool, and it is the scene every night now of a happy lot of youngsters enjoying themselves in the water and a large crowd of people on the banks watching them.

Personals.

For being on the border line of two constituencies, and a part of each, election matters are very quiet. The only evidence that a Federal election is now pending are the registrars' notices to electors posted in several places, also the proclamation notices of the returning officers of the two ridings, South Hastings and Hastings-Peterboro. Mrs. E. G. Bailey has been appointed registrar for that part of the village in South Hastings and Mr. Thomas Solmes for that in Hastings-Peterboro.

INVALID CLAIMS WORLD'S RECORD

Has Received Stations in South America and Europe on One Tube.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—A world's record for reception on a one tube set is claimed for Miss Jennie R. Miller, a bedridden invalid radio enthusiast, who resides at 139 West Seneca Street, Oswego, N.Y. She heard LOW, Buenos Aires, Argentina. Her record came to light in the annual Miss Radio contest conducted by the Radio World's Fair to determine the champion feminine radio fan. Hearing long distance stations is nothing new to Miss Miller, whose log includes 316 broadcasters. She listens in during the late hours of the night, her room in total darkness. She has heard 5NO, Newcastle, England; and gets the Pacific coast quite frequently, including stations in Seattle rarely heard in the East. She has won several prizes in DK contests.

ATOMIC ENERGY MAY RUIN WORLD

Scientists Seeking Force Which May Prove Very Destructive.

MAY BE USEFUL.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 19.— (Canadian Press.)— Chemists, in their search for a means of releasing the energy of atoms and other radio active substances, are leading toward either catastrophic destruction or unlimited riches for the world, speakers asserted at the Institute of Politics.

Dr. Umberto Pomilio, Italian chemist, predicted that the secret of wresting energy from atoms would be discovered within the next 25 years, and declares that the certain progress of science toward releasing and harnessing radio active substance points toward either destruction or unlimited riches.

Sir Frederick Soddy, English chemist, agreeing that chemists are advancing along "the only road likely to bring success, at a rate which makes it possible that one day we will see its achievement," likewise warned that the discovery might be used to the detriment rather than the good of mankind. At any moment, he said, someone among the little group of researchers might find the clue that is being sought.

"Should that day arirve," he said, "let no one be blind to the magnitude of the stake, or suppose that such an acquistion to the physical resources of humanity can safely be entrusted to those who in the past have converted the blessing conferred by science into a curse."

ARMY AMMUNITION STATION DESTROYED

Authorities Appeal To Portsmouth City Fire Department For Aid.

NORFOLK, Va., Aug. 19. —(Canadian Press). — A explosion occurred at the army ammunition depot at Piw Point shortly after 7 o'clock last night. Whether there was any loss of life had not been learned half an hour afterwards. Army authorities appealed to the Portsmouth city fire department for aid.

The depot is 15 miles from Portsmouth on the James River. A considerable quantity of ammunition left over from the World War is said to be stored there.

DARNS STOCKINGS LIKE WEAVING

Working on the principle of a loom, a new device has been invented to perform the ancient task of darning stockings. This little tool has teeth which lift simultaneously every alternate thread, so the needle can be slipped through with one movement. Then the device is turned on its other side, causing the other set of threads to be lifted, and the needle is sent back to the opposite side.—Popular Science Monthly.

FASHIONS

By HEDDA HOYT
(Written for the United Press).

NEW YORK, Aug. 18 (United Press).—The flower corsage matches the frock in color and material if it's up-to-the-minute. Most of the mid-summer and early fall frocks carry their own corsages and very huge petaled affairs they are! Huge chrysanthemums and dahlias of chiffon, silk crepe or even velvet are attached to the left shoulder of each dress. Sports frocks as well as dressy models sponsor the flower idea. For instance, a claret-colored crepe de chene jumper frock has a huge claret-colored chrysanthemum perched flat against the shoulder. In Paris, the flower cannot be too huge.

Have you seen the black satin evening slippers trimmed with gold leather appliques? If not, you will see them in numbers before long.

Black chiffon handkerchiefs edged with wide ecru silk lace are being carried with the new black satin dresses.

Newer shoes extend well up over the instep. One-strap ideas prevail for day wear.

High square crowns are found on some of the new felt millinery models from Paris. These crowns are difficult to wear, however, and none save the round or oval-faced woman should attempt them.

Velvet ribbon trims many sheer georgette frocks of dressy type this season. Two-toned ribbon of a darker shade than the frock is suggested.

Shirring will add a decorative touch to the early fall frocks. It is introduced as a band effect about the hips, as cuffs, vests or yokes.

Blond shoes continue to rule for day as well as evening wear. Blond satin is preferred for evening while kid is considered most suitable for street wear.

Fashionable women are adopting cotton frocks for warm days. Dark silk dresses, such as we have seen previous seasons are not being worn since the pastel frock rules during the summer months. Voiles and linens are quite as conspicuous as crepe de chenes on Fifth Avenue.

Sunburnt-colored stockings are those most popular at nearby resorts. For evening wear, lighter blond tones prevail.

Edmonton women are doing something really worth while in presenting a grand historical pageant of Edmonton, and by this portrayal will make those stirring days live once again in the minds of all who see them. Miss Canada will be greeted as Miss Edmonton's guest of honor in a beautiful prologue which will follow the opening trumpet blast and each night officially open the great production. Miss Edmonton will be surrounded by 15 attendants representing the varied atributes of the city; Miss Canada will be attended by her provinecs. The pageant nueens, together with their attendants, will haold court of honor later.

Ausonia on Aug. 21 and on his return to this country will probably speak before various literary soiceties on the subject of his visit to Canada.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

The carnelian is the talismanic gem for today. Especially recommended is it to those who are timorous of speech. It is believed to benefit singers and public speakers by giving them perfect control of their voices.

The ruby, symbol of bodily strength, should be worn today by those whose birth anniversary it is, for they will require all the vitality which the gem can give to combat certain menacing elements which prevail today.

Orange is today's color. It is especially potent in bringing good luck to those engaged in sporting contests where success depends on mental ability as well as on physical strength.

The orchid is today's flower, and brings unexpected pleasure to those who wear it.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorncliff

SHE DESCRIBES A LOVELY COAT FOR EARLY FALL

I lunched today with a friend, at one of the smart restaurants where one always sees well-dressed women.

It happened to be warm, so we had crisp lettuce and tomato aspic salad, with iced tea, lunching leisurely and watching the people drift in and out.

"By the way," Jean exclaimed on one of those characteristic quick inspirations of hers' "I've been invited to a showing of early Fall coats this afternoon. Couldn't you go with me?"

"I'd adore to," I answered truthfully, "but I wonder if Madame can spare me."

"Do phone her and find out," Jean urged. "Tell her it will be instructive as well as pleasant."

I followed Jean's advice, and Madame said she could let me off for a while.

"This man is a very exclusive women's tailor," Jean explained, after she had given instructions to the taxi driver.

I was charmed at the opportunity, for I felt sure I could give the girls at Madame's some pointers on their Fall coats.

We stopped at a building on upper Fifth Avenue, and I followed Jean into the elevator and out at a spacious floor done in soft gray. There were chairs ranged all about, in the familiar manner of Madame's salon on the afternoon of a fashion showing.

"I feel very much at home, only it seems queer to be sitting and watching, instead of parading as a manikin," I whispered to Jean.

The room was almost full when we arrived, but smart-looking women continued to stream in, and soon the show began.

We saw many stunning coats, fur-trimmed and plain, many of them with deep armholes and bloused effects. Others had loose straightback panels, buttoned at one side or both.

Jean and I decided in favor of the simpler coats, and Jean, as is her habit, couldn't leave without first ordering one of the best-looking models shown.

I'm saving a drawing of it here in my diary, as I think it quite typical of the smart traveling or sports coat of this Fall. The material is grayish-blue tweed, and the collar gray fox. At each side there is an unusual tab arrangement drawn through a slit in the material and held by a gray-blue bone button. There are also tabs fastened to the cuffs, held by smaller matching buttons.

HER OWN WAY by a Girl of Today

SLEEP, BLESSED SLEEP

"Come on, Judy," said Jerry, as Joan came away from the phone. "You two girls both of you, must get a good night's rest, for it looks to me as though you are going to have a long, hard day tomorrow."

Sometimes I think it is most fortunate that we poor mortals cannot see ahead of us twenty-four hours.

Although Jerry wanted to talk with me and would have lingered even after he had stopped the car at the curb in front of Mamie's house for a little while, I told him that I was too tired to be decent to anyone, which was the truth. After I left Joan and I knew the day was over I was so tired I didn't want to open my mouth or crook a finger.

Fortunately, both Mamie and her mother were out as I dragged myself up the stairs, and pulling off my clothes dropped into bed.

Mamie tapped on my door when she came, and as I did not answer I knew that she thought I was asleep. But I lay awake for a long time wondering what my next adventure would be.

The moonlight made a great patch of silver across the floor, just in front of my bed. It seemed to make a path out of the window clear up to the sky.

Was it a good omen, I wonder? Should I go with Joan to Europe, asked myself? Or should I remain at home and marry Jerry? I was trying to answer those questions when I evidently feell asleep from pure fatigue.

For the first thing I knew was a feeling of surprise that where the moonlight had made a silver path there was now a flood of golden sunshine.

I lay quite still. I could not gather my thoughts together. My consciousness seemed to waver, but at last came a knocking on my door, or at least I became more fully awake, for I also distinguished a bell ringing in the hall and Mamie's voice calling:

"Wake up, Judy. I know that telephone is for you. Someone has been calling for you for the last hour."

I grumbled a little as I slipped my feet into my house slippers and threw a kimona over my shoulders.

When I got near enough to shut off the insistent clamor of the telephone bell I heard Joan's voice through the receiver saying:

"Will you please get Miss Dean to come to the phone?"

"This is Judy, Joan," I answered, "but I am only half awake. I didn,t go to sleep for a long while after I went to bed."

"Well, listen, dear," she answered, "I am sure what I have to say "I am sure what I have to say will wake you up. You know those letters opened. Well, the special delivery one said that he was going to town, and he will be here this morning."

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

(By Mildred Marshall.)

Facts about your name, its history; its meaning; whence it was derived; its significance; your lucky day, and lucky jewel.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

LENORE

Made famous in this country by Poe, is in realiy the Spanish transformation of one of the most ancient of femina ine names—Helen. Its original root was "Helios," the Greek sun-god who drove his heavenly chariot around the heavenly vault day by day, the name signifying light and brightness.

Every language, practically, has brought its distinguishing mark to the original name, and Lenor is one of the most beautiful and musical of the derivatives. In Italy, Leonora is one Eileen in Ireland, and so on.

The original Spanish was Lenore, in which the "n" gradually displaced the "m."

The jewel assigned to bearers of this name is the beautiful yellow jacinth—a stone formerly carried by travellers to insure them against accident and disease. A fantasy associated with this gem is that it warns its wearer of approaching danger by growing pale in color and it also is supposed to guarantee protection from bolts of lightning. The lucky day of Lenore is Sunday and six is her lucky number. To dream of her natal stone the yellow jacinth, is interpreted to mean success in any undertaking she may be interested in at the time.

HOROSCOPE

"The Stars Incline, but do not Compel"

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

THURSDAY, AUGUST 19, 1926

Astrologers read this as an unfortunate day in which caution should be the watchword.

Money difficulties are likely to be exaggerated while this configuration prevails. It is well to be unusually exact and careful in all financial transactions.

News more or less disconcerting to the United States may be received before the end of the month.

Politics and politicians are subject to newspaper publicity that may be caustic and critical under this planetary government.

Women are to be prominent in public affairs, but they will not be lucky as office-seekers, if the stars are rightly interpreted.

Neptune is in an aspect today supposed to be encouraging to deceit and double-dealing.

The configuration may accentuate vanity and egotism, which may be conspicuous in many personalities.

Trend toward individualism which becomes selfishness is strongly indicated. Both men and women may be susceptible to this menacing influence.

Better feeling regarding international financial relations, debts and agreements is indicated with the coming of the autumn.

Many municipal improvements and developments are forecast for smaller as well as the larger centers of population.

Publishing is to be greatly stimulated, and there will be a return to the habit of reading, which may disturb motion picture theatres, the seers foretell.

Travel is to continue all through the autumn when there will be much movement of population from one city to another.

Persons whose birthdate it is should push all business affairs in the coming year, which will be more propitious for business than for pleasure.

Children born on this day may be extraordinarily changeable and temperamental, but these subjects of Leo who are on the cusp have many Virgo tendencies and they are successful to a remarkable degree.

RED ROSE "is good COFFEE"

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

JOHN RUSKIN, CLOTILDE DOMECQ AND EUPHEMIA GRAY

(The McClure Syndicate.)

Ruskin's love romances are extremely interesting stories, such as one would hardly expect the great art critic and social reformer to play a part in. At seventeen he fell in love with a captivating French girl of fifteen, Clotilde Domecq, the daughter of his father's partner. For an outlet of his overcharged feelings, the young Ruskin resorted to poetry and imaginative narratives, in which brigands, fair ladies and chivalrous youths were the important personages. Clotilde, being a rather hard name to find rhymes for, he changed it to Adele, which could be suitably combined with "shell," "spell," "knell," etc. But Adele was inclined to see more amusement than passion in Ruskin's love and met the boy's protestations and poetic offerings with gay laughter. Two years later Ruskin received the news of her engagement to a French baron. He was so affected that he wrote the most worthwhile poem of all those that were inspired by Clotilde. He wrote:

The grief of my words were weak to tell,
And thine unable to console.

And further on, describing her smile as wakening the night flowers, he says:

It fell on the cold rock and the free
Unfeeling waves—Oh! wherefore not on me?

When Clotilde married her baron, Ruskin was preparing for a degree at Oxford but the unfortunate ending to his love brought on a touch of consumption, of which he was later cured.

Ruskin met Euphemia Gray a few years after Clotilde's marriage. She asked him to write her a fairy tale—she was about 12 then—and Ruskin consented. The result was the popular story, "The King of the Golden River." Seven years later Ruskin's parents decided that matrimony would help their son to a better state of health and a more cheerful frame of mind, marriage with Miss Gray wilan ranged.

Euphemia Gray was a very be. young woman and fond of clothe society. Ruskin was absorbed work and gave little heed to amuse But in his own way he loved his w this poetic declaration of his fe written on the occasion of her bir shows:

"Thorn and meadow grass, sweet
Twine them as I may,
'Deemest thou a darksome garla
thy natal day?
Thou thyself art fairer, sister,
Than all the flowers in May!
Had I brought thee buds and blo
Shamed were I and they!"

This is the only love writing that have from Ruskin to Miss Gray. S sequent events made both fami jealously guard all correspondence tween the pair.

At that time Ruskin took under h protection the painter, Millais, and friendship was formed between the tw men. This friendship ripened into a love between Millais and Mrs. Ruskin and one day six years after their marriage, Mrs. Ruskin left her home and went back to her parents. She immediately sued for a divorce, obtained it, and married Millais. Ruskin had thought it best to resign from the triangle without offering opposition.

The life of Lady Millais was a very happy one. She assisted her husband in his work, found pleasure in doing so, and also reigned in society. Her portrait can be found in the famous Millais painting, "The Order For Release," for which she posed while she was yet Mrs. Ruskin.

CREPE SATIN.

The fad for using both sides of crepe satin has produced street and afternoon dresses of elegant simplicity. No other trimming is needed than the contrast in surfaces.

ONCE UPON A TIME — THE FLYING SHIP—VI

by W. J. ENRIGHT.

THE STORY UP TO NOW

A KING ONCE OFFERED HIS DAUGHTER AND HALF HIS KINGDOM TO ANYONE WHO WOULD BRING HIM A FLYING BOAT. AN OLD MAN TOLD A SOLDIER HOW TO GET IT AND HE STARTED FLYING TO THE KING. HE TOOK AS PASSENGERS A MAN WHO COULD HEAR EVERYTHING, A RAPID RUNNER, AND OTHER QUEER FRIENDS.

THE MAN WITH THE MAGIC STRAW JOINED THE PARTY AND AT LAST THE SHIP WITH ITS STRANGE CREW CAME IN SIGHT OF THE KING'S PALACE. 8-19-26

THE KING WAS HAVING HIS DINNER, BUT SENT A MESSENGER TO FIND OUT WHAT THE HUGE, STRANGE NEW BIRD COULD BE THAT HAD COME FLYING THROUGH THE AIR. THE MESSENGER SOON RETURNED WITH THE NEWS THAT IT WAS A FLYING SHIP IN COMMAND OF A COMMON SOLDIER.

THEN THE KING REMEMBERED HIS OATH, BUT MADE UP HIS MIND THAT HE WOULD NEVER CONSENT TO THE MARRIAGE OF THE PRINCESS TO A COMMON SOLDIER. SO, HE SAID TO HIMSELF, "I WILL GIVE HIM SOME IMPOSSIBLE TASKS TO PERFORM. THAT WILL BE THE BEST WAY OF GETTING RID OF HIM." © McClure Newspaper Syndicate

HE TOLD ONE OF THE COURTIERS TO GO TO THE SOLDIER WITH THE COMMAND THAT HE WAS TO FETCH THE KING THE HEALING WATER FROM THE WORLD'S END BEFORE HE HAD FINISHED HIS DINNER. BUT THE MAN WITH THE WONDERFUL POWER OF HEARING HAD OVERHEARD THE KING'S WORDS AND HASTILY REPEATED THEM TO THE SOLDIER.

TOMORROW—THE HEALING WATER.

S. H. D.—You have one of these indeterminate characters which are encountered so often, and yet you have within yourself much ability. You will always be a changeable and vacillating type, with indecision in your ways, a good deal of charm, but no great depth. You will find most success in bringing joy and happiness to the lives of those about you, and you should not find this difficult, as you have capabilities for making others happy. You are very fond of home and its comforts and will make an admirable wife. You are very sincere and try to be agreeable on all occasions. You can be both inspiring and helpful if you reach out for spiritual development at all times. Learn to be self-reliant, and study hard how to concentrate. Marry a man born in October, January or June. Yes, you were born on Friday. Your color is pink in all shades.

HOW TO SWIM
by William Cannon

PROPER KICK FOR CRAWL

The crawl kick is perhaps the most difficult, and certainly the most important, matter of this stroke.

The legs should be kicked straight downward alternately. The action should be so fast that at least six kicks should be attained for each completed actions of the two hands.

In the Trudgeon Crawl there is a slight scissors kick used, but for purposes of instruction I think it best to depend solely upon the straight backward and downward kick.

The ration of four kicks to the completed arm movement should be possible at the start.

As the swimmer becomes more expert the speed of the kicks should be increased until six at least, eight if possible, and even ten kicks come to the stroke.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

(By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.)

Charles E. Morris, editor of The News League, including The Dayton (Ohio) News, says

That one of the most impressive evidences of human progress is the change which has come over the presentation of advertising matter in the magazines and newspapers.

It is not so much that editors, competent and high-minded, guard as jealously the integrity of their advertising columns as they do the run of the paper, which has brought the agreeable change, because every worthy editor always has sought to make his medium a helpful, human agency. More, it is the change which has come over business of which advertising is the chief agency. Business has been humanized and business men realize that once good-will has been established nothing can destroy it some deliberately overt act of their own.

Caveat emptor long ago has ceased to be the business rule: now it is the buyer must be given honest service. This means honest advertising and honest advertising carries with it the idea of helpfulness to others.

Just note from day to day and month to month how much advertising deals with essential current topics, even as the commercial picture of goods and prices is presented.

I am not sure that we who have to deal with these things have as yet grasped the full meaning. But to me it indicates that there are better days ahead, developed out of a co-operation which leads as near to that desired brotherhood of man as humanly is possible.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES
By Blanche Silver

PEGGY HAS A SURPRISE.

Peggy started to pick up a twig from the ground when something moved. She jerked her hand away with a squeal.

"Goodness me, what was that?" she cried. "I didn't see anything on that stick. Why, there it is right now! Oh, Squeedee, Squeedee!" Peggy cried at the top of her voice.

There was a rustling in the grasses at her feet and up jumped the little elfin.

"What's the trouble?" Squeedee asked, hopping upon a bush in front of Peggy. "I hope you didn't see a wild animal of some kind."

"You would think so by the way the child squealed," laughed a very tiny voice, as a funny little creature crawled from the stick. She was almost as green as the twig, with a long slender body and six long slender green legs. Her little bead-like eyes danced when she saw the look on Peggy's face.

Then Squeedee said, "Peggy, haven't you ever met Mrs. Walking Stick before? She is one of the dearest little ladies in all the green meadows. How's everything, Mrs. Walking Stick?"

"Just fine, thank you," replied the little green lady. "I'm very glad to know you, Peggy. I'm sorry I frightened you. You see I just came down to lay my eggs and crawled upon this stick."

"I didn't see you until you moved and you startled me," answered Peggy. "You look so much like the twig itself I couldn't see you."

"That's where we female Walking Sticks have it on our mates," chuckled Mrs. Walking Stick. "When we are full-grown all male Walking Sticks turn a sort of grayish-brown, but we ladies still cling to the greener tints."

"Mrs. Walking Stick doesn't bother with a nest, she just drops her eggs on the ground most any place," said Squeedee.

"Yes, here is one," Mrs. Walking Stick said, as she pointed to a wee oval-shaped egg on the ground. It was a polished black color with a white stripe on one side. "Isn't that a pretty egg?"

"Looks like a tiny bead," answered Peggy. "How long will it take before it hatches?"

"Oh, they'll lie there all Winter," replied Mrs. Walking Stick, "unless something happens to them. When they get ready to hatch, the top of the eggs will lift up just like the lid of a pot and out will crawl the wee yellowish-green baby walking sticks. Then in about six weeks they will be full grown."

"Goodness, I must be on my way," declared Mrs. Walking Stick. "Glad to have met you, Peggy. Don't ever be frightened at a walking stick, for they never harm anyone," and away she trotted as fast as her six legs could carry her.

Peggy turned to say something to Squeedee, but found herself alone. Then, laughing merrily, she ran on down the path to the woods.

A Gown of Black Flat Crepe with Double Flounce.

There is no more useful type of frock for the wardrobe than a simple black model that can be worn for various occasions of the day.

For instance, the black flat crepe sketched above is ideal for a simple all-occasion frock. It expresses its individuality in the use of a double flounce, drawn up at the center front and held by a small patch of shirring.

With this is worn a black fox fur piece, of the type that promises growing popularity with the coming of Fall.

UNCLE WIGGILY
Today's Bedtime Story
By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE MAIL BAG

One morning there sounded outside the door of Uncle Wiggily's hollow stump bungalow a loud whistle.

"There's Mr. Flat Tail with the mail!" exclaimed Mrs. Longears. "Hurry down, Nurse Jane, please, and see if there are any letters for us."

And when the muskrat lady housekeeper reached the door she came running back in a hurry, saying:

"Something has happened!"

"What is it?" asked Uncle Wiggily, who also came out at the sound of the beaver gentleman's mail whistle to see if there were any letters for him.

But at the sight of Mr. Flat Tail sitting on the porch in the shade, his mail bag beside him, and Nurse Jane giving the poor letter carrier a drink of cool water, Mr. Longears knew at once there was trouble.

"I'm ill!" gasped Mr. Flat Tail. "The heat bothers me so! I'm afraid I can't deliver the rest of the mail that's in my bag. Oh, dear, what shall I do?"

"Have no fear about that," said Uncle Wiggily. "I will take your place and deliver the rest of the mail. I don't mind the heat and my fur isn't as thick as yours. Besides, you are used to being in water a great deal of the time, and you miss it."

This was true enough. The beaver fur of Mr. Flat Tail was much heavier than that of Uncle Wiggily. And beavers spend much of their time in the cool water.

"I never should have taken the work of being a mail carrier," sighed Mr. Flat Tail. "It doesn't agree with me. But I needed the money."

"Don't worry," said Uncle Wiggily. "I will deliver the mail for you on hot days and you can work when it is cool. Summer will not last much longer, and with your fur coat you will be just the one to leave the letters in the winter.

"Thank you," said Mr. Flat Tail, as Mr. Whitewash, the polar bear gentleman, took the beaver to his cave to cool off on a cake of ice. Uncle Wiggily picked up the mail bag and started to deliver the letters and parcels that remained in it. He took a letter to Mr. No Tail, the frog gentleman, and one to Mr. Bow Wow, the father of Jackie and Peetie, the puppies, at the knot hole house of Mrs. Longtail, the mouse lady came scampering out much excited and she squeaked:

"Oh, Uncle Wiggily, I didn't know you were a postman! But have you seen anything of Squeakie Eekie, the cousin mouse? She is lost! She was out playing in front here about an hour ago, but I can't find her anywhere, now. Jollie and Jillie are looking all over for her. Have you seen her?"

"I am sorry to say I have not," answered the bunny gentleman. "But as I go along, leaving letters, I shall ask." However, inquire as he did, no one had seen Squeakie Eeekie, and it began to look as if the cousin mouse was gone forever.

There was just one little package left in the bottom of the mail bag. It was to go to Aunt Lettie, the lady goat, and as Uncle Wiggily handed it to her he asked:

"Have you seen Squeakie Eeeike, the cousin mouse? She is lost, and Mrs. Longtail is much worried."

"No, I haven't seen her," bleated Aunt Lettie. "But I wonder what is in this package? Oh, I know, it's some cheese I sent for by mail. I'm so glad it came. Uncle Butter is fond of cheese!" And when Aunt Lettie opened the package of cheese, lo! and behold! In one end was gnawed a little hole and inside the hole was lost Squeakie Eeekie, fast asleep.

"How did you get in my mail bag?" asked Uncle Wiggily of the little mouse child.

"Oh, when the bag was down onyour steps," squeaked Squeakie, "I smelled the cheese and I crawled in and gnawed a hole so I could get some and then I fell asleep. I'm sorry if I scared everybody."

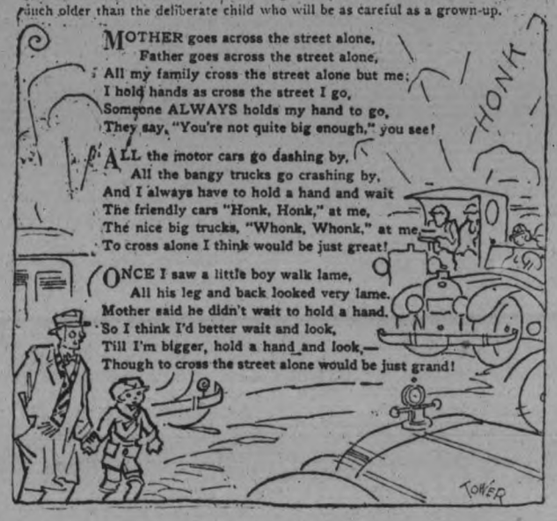
"You did," said Uncle Wggily "and please don't do it again," and Squeakie Eekie never did. Aunt Lettie forgave the mouse child for nibbling the cheese, as there was enough left for Uncle Butter.

So everything happened for the best, and the bunny postman took Squeak home in the mail bag. And if the ton in the laced shoe will speak kindly to the rubber boot, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the slamming door.

Healthy children are usually partial to green and yellow garments, while they dislike black.

Crossing the Street
By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

CROSSING the street has a powerful attraction for the child, yet there is no set age at which we can say, "Now he is old enough to cross the street alone," because children vary so in their ability to take responsibility seriously. Impulsive children dash off the curb without looking and can't be trusted until they are much older than the deliberate child who will be as careful as a grown-up.



MOTHER goes across the street alone,
Father goes across the street alone,
All my family cross the street alone but me;
I hold hands as cross the street I go,
Someone ALWAYS holds my hand to go,
They say, "You're not quite big enough," you see!

ALL the motor cars go dashing by,
All the bangy trucks go crashing by,
And I always have to hold a hand and wait
The friendly cars "Honk, Honk," at me,
The nice big trucks, "Whonk, Whonk," at me,
To cross alone I think would be just great!

ONCE I saw a little boy walk lame,
All his leg and back looked very lame.
Mother said he didn't wait to hold a hand.
So I think I'd better wait and look,
Till I'm bigger, hold a hand and look,—
Though to cross the street alone would be just grand!

Daily Short Story

SAY IN WITH PLACE CARDS.

(By Henry Holland.)

Anne Cranshaw, debutante daughter of John Cranshaw, the coffee king, slowly circled the gleaming table set for twelve. That her mother should be giving a dinner dance for her prior to the Lovell's affair at the Country Club was a matter of small moment. All mothers of debs were continually doing that sort of thing.

What did matter was whether her mother had put her next to the new secretary whom her father had brought home with him from his last visit to his South American coffee plantations, and whom Anne had at once endowed with the mystery of distant lands and an unexplored personality.

Finding the bit of pasteboard with his name on it, Cowles Livingston, she mured to herself, "that's downright mean of you. Putting him beside that flirty little minx of a Belle Saunders!"

Carrying the card to the other side of the table, she exchanged it for one which bore the name of Roger Carter. Roger was merely the boy who lived next door, who, having grown up with Anne, was naturally always included.

Suddenly mischief shone in Anne's black eyes. Whipping out a tiny silver pencil hanging on a silver chain about her neck, she wrote "over" just beneath the name of Cowles Livingston. Then, on the other side, "The fifth hole after the fourth dance."

Of course, he would know that but one person would have had the chance to write it. If he came, in any way proved difficult, she'd pretend. Oh something! She could decide that when the emergency arose.

Demurely, she took herself off into the long living-room to await the first guest. And, as she did so, she said softly, "Cowles Livingston!" Then, tentatively, "Mrs. Cowles Livingston."

The guests began to arrive before Anne's mother appeared. And then she entered rather hurriedly, as if delayed on the way. There was an odd little expression in her dark eyes, so like Anne's own.

Seated at the table, Anne toyed with her napkin, watching out of one corner of her eye young Linvigston as he managed, unostentatiously, to turn his place card. She caught the slight quiver of his shapely mouth before he said quietly that which all the table might have heard, "I suppose you play a clever game of—golf!" There was a slight pause before that last word.

Anne's eyes fluttered, then fell.

"Righto!" she said. But her heart was beating rapidly. What had she done? This quiet stranger might prove a very different sort of person to deal with than one of the boys in her own crowd.

It was a decidedly panicky Anne who excused herself from her partner at the close of the fourth dance, and ran across the links to the little settee by the fifth hole. There was no one there as she sat down.

Then—and her heart skipped a beat—she saw a dark figure come down the veranda steps and walk toward her. But there was someone coming behind him! And someone else! Yes—and still another.

Anne rose, not knowing what to make of it. She wanted to run, yet there was nowhere to run except the club house, which would precipitate her into the very dilemma she now sought to avoid—meeting with the men now hastening toward her.

Nor was the first arrival the South American. It prived to be Bert Streeter, whom she couldn't bear.

"Well, here I am, my dear Anne," he announced in his superior way.

"What's this—a surprise party?" interrupted her cousin Henry. "What's the big idea?"

"I ventured, Miss Cranshaw—" and this time it really was Cowles Livingston. Oh, what mortification.

Then Anne gathered what dignity she could about her. "Boys," she said quietly, "thus was intended to be a sort of—joke. But the joke has been turned on me. I'm sorry and—oh, I think you are all horrid!" With which unreasonable outburst, she gathered her cape about her, in place of her dignity, and fled up the steps, and almost into the arms of a young man who was coming out of the hall where the next dance was under way.

"Oh, Roger!" she sobbed. "You were the only one who didn't take advantage!"

"Why, Anne darling!" Roger did not in the least know what it was all about, but some happy stroke of fortune had thrown an opportunity not to be lost his way. "Tell me." He drew her back into the shadow of the building and took her tenderly in his arms. And, to her great surprise, Anne felt as if she belonged there.

Anne's mother was waiting when Anne came in.

"A good time, dear?" she asked casually.

Anne regarded her mother quizzically before replying. Then, "Someone threw a monkey wrench into a little scheme of mine, Was it you?"

Her mother nodded. "Yes, dear," she said cheerfully. "I just happened, as I took a last look around, to find out. Didn't have much time, but was afraid you'd make a little idiot of yourself, and knowing there's safety in numbers I duplicated your little impertinence on every other man's card—except that of nice old Roger."

"Hmm!" grunted Anne. Then she flung herself down beside her mother. "Oh, isn't Roger wonderful!" she cried.

"Proper Food and Exercise," by ARTHUR ... McGOVERN
Former physical director, Cornell Medical College.

Faulty carriage often result of habit

THIS IS THE PROPER WAY TO STAND

THE position of a soldier at attention illustrates the proper way to stand. He is seen with his feet almost parallel; the knees are straight without stiffness, and the body erect; the hips incline slightly forward while the shoulders are square and fall equally. His arms and hands hang naturally, the back of the hands being turned outward and the elbows held close to the body.

It is essential to the person who would stand properly that he should at all times hold the upper chest forward and never assume a stiff attitude. The way to do this is to keep the chin, chest and toes in a perpendicular line when standing.

Some people naturally develop a habit of proper carriage, but they are a minority. Children who are not properly guided in posture often grow into habits which may prove serious in later years. Round shoulders usually represent a faulty habit rather than a physical defect. The psychological effect of this was proved during the war when many men went into service with a slouchy posture. Immediately upon putting on uniforms they straightened up, threw back their shoulders and stepped out with a springy step.

You rarely see a vigorous person with round shoulders or improper carriage. Children often acquire the habit of slouching while sitting at a desk or resting their heads in their hands while reading.

Send a self-addressed and stamped envelope to Arthur A. McGovern, 5 West Sixty-sixth street, New York city, and he will furnish free a chart of twelve exercises which will aid one's posture if the instructions are followed.

KING AND FORKE SPEAK TOGETHER

Liberal and Progressive Leaders Speak of Scenes in House.

NOT CONSULTED.

BRANDON, Aug. 19.—(Canadian Press.)—The Right Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King, Liberal leader, addressed two meetings in Manitoba yesterday. His first meeting was at Portage La Prairie in the afternoon. He spoke here last night.

At Portage La Prairie, Mr. King said he was amazed at the terms Mr. Meighen had used in the House of Commons in describing the Progressive party. Yet it was to these same Progressives that Mr. Meighen looked when he sought support as Prime Minister.

"When Mr. Meighen advised His Excellency that he could carry on he must have counted on the support of the party he had denounced," said Mr. King.

Speaking from the same platform as the Liberal leader, Robert Forke declared that if Mr. Meighen had endeavored to form a real ministry instead of a temporary one, the Progressives would have seen the legislation through to the end.

Of the Liberal-Progressive cooperation there was nothing clandestine, secret or dishonorable.

"The Government," he said, "lived loyally up to its promises and gave us the legislation promised early in the session. There was nothing for us to do but live up to our part of the agreement."

The Senate was "a hard nut to crack." Its pensioners had refused old pensions to Canada. "I think there is a place in Canada for a second chamber, but not the kind we have in Ottawa. There ought to be something more sensitive to the will of the people," said Mr. Forke.

Mr. Forke made a strong denial of the story that he had been consulted by Lord Byng on the subject of Progressive support to the Conservatives.

SPEAKER MAY RETIRE FROM BRITISH HOUSE

Mr. Whitley Has Respect Of All Members of Parliament.

TOO GENTLE.

Younger Men Think He Treats Disorderly Members Too Easily.

LONDON, Aug. 19 (Canadian Press Cable).—Repeated rumors of the impending retirement of J. H. Whitley from the Speakership of the House of Commons have been going around, and these have been fostered by the barely concealed discontent of the younger Conservative members of the House at Speaker Whitley's inability or unwillingness to deal drastically with the disorderly element on the Labor benches.

No Speaker of the House of Commons in modern times has possessed more wholeheartedly the respect of the House generally than Mr. Whitley, or has proved himself more completely master of procedure; nevertheless, a good many members on the Government side consider the Speaker's gentle methods as useless against the turbulent forces that increasingly confront him.

May Be Made a Peer

Speaker Whitley recently lost his wife, and doubtless he would welcome the serenity of his translation from the House of Commons to the House of Lords, an honor that is invariably reserved for the Speaker on retirement. Mr. Whitley, who has been Liberal M.P. for the English Borough of Halifax since 1900, and Speaker since 1921, was born in Halifax, and is in his sixty-first year.

The choice of a successor to Speaker Whitley may be difficult. The House of Commons usually looks first for a Speaker toward the Chairmen of committees, and the claims of Right Hon. James Fitzalan Hope, who has been Chairman of committees and Deputy Speaker since 1921, and Conservative member for Central Sheffield since 1908, would certainly be received with due consideration, although there are reports that the younger Tories have a dark horse waiting for the Speakership.

Unknown May Win

While the Speakership of the House of Commons is regarded here as being outside of political influences, and once a member is elected Speaker he is re-elected usually, even by a Government of another complexion than that which first named him for the position, it has happened not infrequently that a comparatively unknown man has been selected.

The late Viscount Selby, who, as William Court Gully, M.P., was Speaker from 1895 to 1905, and was created first Viscount Selby in 1905, was one of the most efective of the Speakers in modern times, yet he was one of the most effective of the bers of the House of Commons, and not intimate with half a dozen of them, when he slipped into the office which he occupied so worthily.

Easy to Gain With Yeast and Iron
New Combination of Yeast with Vegetable Iron Quick Way to Build Up Weight

This new combination of yeast vitamines with vegetable iron, renews the action of sluggish blood cells, drives out dangerous body poisons, increases energy and endurance and supplies the system with vitamines that build up weight.

For years yeast has been known as a rich vitamine food; but not until we perfected "ironized yeast" —which comes in concentrated tablet form, was it possible to take yeast and iron in the right proportions to build up weight.

Vegetable "Iron" when combined with yeast is quite easy to digest, therefore better for the system. And "yeast" when ironized, becomes just twice as beneficial as ordinary fresh or cake yeast.

Ironized Yeast Tablets are composed of concentrated food elements, therefore, they are pleasant to take and free from drug-like effects. If you are under weight, do not enjoy good health, lacking in energy and force, "ironized yeast" tablets will pick you right up, and if they fail, you get your money back.

Sold by druggists at $1.00 for a large 60-tablet package or sent direct from laboratory on receipt of price. Ironized Yeast Co., Fort Erie, Ontario, Canada

PETES NOSED OUT IN THE NINTH AND ARE TIED WITH BELLEVILLE FOR SECOND PLACE HONOURS

Lose Scrappy Game in Belleville By 5 To 4 After Leading Most of the Journey.

PLAY-OFF NECESSARY.

Teams Will Play Sudden Death Game To See Which Will Meet the Ponies.

(By F. D. C.)

A ninth inning rally by Belleville in which good base running by Wicky Ross and timely hitting by Weir and W. Mills were the principal factors, gave the Gerow clan two run and enabled the Nationals to come from behind and win yesterday's replay game at Belleville.

The final count was 5 to 4 and the victory leaves Peterboro and Belleville tied for second place in the League standing and necessitates a sudden death game between the two old rivals to decide which will meet the Kingston Ponies in the final series for the Central League honors.

The standing is as follows:

	Won	Lost
Kingston	10	6
Peterboro	7	9
Belleville	7	9

Yesterday's battle was one of the scrappiest of the season, full of wrangling with the umpires and of sharp-tongued repartee among the players. Although the riot act was read to the managers and captains of the two teams before the game by Chief Umpire Colling, the curtain lecture had no effect and jams were frequent. Base Umpire Woodley got in wrong with both teams and neither acted nor looked like an official capable of working in such an important game while the Petes claimed that Ken Colling's work behind the bat was far from perfect, especially complaining about the walk issued to Ross in the ninth As it turned out the game hinged on that complimentary and it is the Peterboro contention that Colling missed not one but two strikes on Ross in that frame.

Until the ninth frame the Petes looked like winners. They were twice two runs in the lead, were never worse than on even terms until Peeney Mills singled the winning run in with two out in the last inning and the Belleville fans were beginning to leave the stands when the Gerowmen made their drive for victory.

The two old rivals, Heckman and Ouellet, were on the firing line, and neither was hit very hard, although the Peterboro right-hander allowed ten hits as against seven by his opponent. Only two extra base hits, neither of which counted in the run-making were interjected into the pastime and both hurlers suffered from fielding lapses by their team mates, although at that there was plenty of nice defensive work.

A factor that gave Belleville a decided edge was the absence of Max Swanston. The Nationals took advantage of the inexperience and erratic throwing of Collins to run wild on the sacks. They stole ten bases during the battle and twice wild throws to second were disastrous, Weir going from first to third on the first of these and scoring from first on the other, aided by slow work on the part of Ray Rose. Ross stole second and third in the ninth to get in position to score the tieing run and Weir's theft of second, his fifth of the game, put him in line to carry home the winning tally. Collins' arm was sore and the Gerowmen, realizing their opening wasted no time in moving round the base paths.

The Petes started off well. Wolfe was safe on Weir's wide throw but in stealing second was hit by a grounder from Rose's bat. The play of course retired the runner and gave Rose a hit automatically. Blakely made a poor throw on Hall's roller and the runner was safe. Heckman singled past third, to fill the bases, and Ash sent two runs in with a single back of third, scoring Rose and Hall. Harrison struck out and Collins raised a fly to Harry Mills back of first.

For Belleville Wicky Ross fouled to Helson. Weir bounced a single off Helson and stole second. Harry Mills singled to left, Hall's accurate throw to the plate holding Weir at third. Harry Mills stole second. W. Mills lined into Harrison's hands and brother Harry was doubled off second. The Belleville catcher in disgust hurled his bat fifty yards down the race track.

In the second Helson grounded to Meagher, Holyman flied to Palmer and Wolfe was tossed out by Blakely.

There was plenty of action in Belleville's half. Palmer, with Blakely out of the way, came through with a long clout over Jimmy Hall's head. It was a clean triple but the batter tried to stretch it into a homer and was run down between third and home. Meagher and Hagerman drew passes. Ouellet bounded one to Rose and the throw reached Harrison two feet in front of the runner but Umpire Woodley called Ouellet safe and when Holyman tossed his glove into the air in derision of the verdict he was chased out of the game, Johnston replacing him at short stop. This raw decision filled the bases, but Ross produced only a bounder to Heckman which retired the side.

Rose led off in the third with a single to right centre but Hall was called out on strikes and Heckman forced Rose at second with a roller to Blakely. The Petes' pitcher was in turn forced by Ash, Weir fielding the tap.

The Nationals got their first run in their half. Weir singled to left, stole second, continuing on to third when Collins threw wildly to second and scoring on H. Mills' single to centre. W. Mills forced his brother, Johnston to Rose, and Blakely hit to Heckman, who tossed W. Mills out at second. Palmer was thrown out by Johnston.

In the fourth Harrison was called out on strikes, Collins flied to Ross and Helson rolled to Blakely.

Belleville tied it up. Meagher struck out but Hagerman was safe on Helson's high throw and Ouellet singled to right, sending Hagerman to third. Ross hit to Rose, who instead of trying for the double play, which looked sure, threw to the plate too late to get Hagerman. Weir hit to Helson and Ouellet was called out for running off the line when Helson tried to tag him. The Belleville crew howled vigorously at the decision. Ross and Weir pulled off a double steal. Harry Mills drew a pass, filling the bases, but Peeney's best was a fly to right which found Ash waiting for it.

Johnston, first up in the fifth, rolled to Ouellet. Wolfe was thrown out by Meagher and Rose flied to Ross. Belleville did no better. Blakely was tossed out by Helson, Palmer popped to Rose and Meagher gave Ash an easy fly.

In the sixth Hall was out on a roller to Blakely. Heckman was hit. Ash hit to Weir, forcing Heckman at second, but Meagher threw high to first trying to double Ash, who reached second. Meagher made a fine stop of Harrison's smash to retire the side.

Johnston was the big noise in Belleville's half, throwing out Hagerman, Ouellet and Ross in fine style.

The Petes took what looked to be the winning lead in the seventh. Collins walked to start with and Helson caught Belleville flat-footed by bunting safely with two strikes on him. Johnston bunted for a sacrifice but everybody was safe when Ouellet threw low to third. With the bases full Wolfe cracked a hot single over second, scoring Collins and Helson. Rose forced Wolfe at second with a grounder to Meagher and Hall's hard hit drive was right in Blakely's hands, the Belleville short stop doubling Rose on the play.

Belleville got one back; a soft one. Weir singled between short and third. He stole second, went to third when Collins threw to centre field and kept right on to the plate when Rose dropped Wolfe's return throw and loafed in recovering the ball. Harry Mills' grounder got away from Helson but W. Mills popped to Rose and Blakely struck out. Collins dropped the third strike but the batter was, of course, out automatically and Harry Mills was doubled out when he tried to go to second on the play.

Bad coaching hurt the Petes a lot in the eighth., Heckman drew a pass and was sacrificed to second by Ash. Harrison doubled on a long fly to right. It looked at first as if the drive would be caught and Heckman played safe by holding second until the ball dropped. Manager Johnston sent him in from third and he was an easy out at the plate. On the next ball Ouellet uncorked a wild pitch sending Harrison to third. Collins drew a walk but Helson rolled to Ouellet.

In Belleville's half Palmer flied to Helson and Meagher to Harrison while Hagerman struck out.

The Petes' ninth was soon over. Johnston rolled to Ouellet, Weir made a fine catch of Wolfe's foul and Rose flied to Palmer.

The Nationals won out in their end of the frame. Ouellet was called out on strikes. Ross drew a pass, although the Petes claimed the Belleville centre fielder had been struck out. He stole second and third and carried the tieing run in when Weir singled between short and third. Weir stole second and was on his way to third when H. Mills rolled out to Rose. That made two out but Peeney Mills slapped a single down the third base line and the game was over when Weir trotted in with the winning run.

COGS HOLD CITY CHAMPS TO TIE IN FIRST GAME

Smashing Attack Against Masterson Scores Four Runs in the Fourth.

SCORE IS 6 TO 6.

Cogs Twice Come From Behind in First Game of Series.

Cognawagas, with Johnny Wilson, their clever short stop in charge of the team, and Harvey Smith pitching carefully and steadily, gave baseball fandom a pleasant surprise by standing up to the Crescents and holding the city Intermediate winners to a 6 to 6 tie, at Exhibition park last evening. Always given credit as a smart fielding team, the Cogs excelled themselves last evening, and, to add to the excitement, rapped Casey Masterson good and plenty. Manager Wilson became the hero of the engagement, when after playing a great defensive game at short, he came through with a triple with the bases loaded in the fourth.

Crescents put in a futile evening endeavoring to wallop Smith's pitching, while the Cogs were more successful with the willow and took advantage of Masterson's wild streaks.

The game abounded in fine fielding plays contributed by both teams, and the second contest on Friday evening will probably attract a record crowd.

Joe Jones leading off for Crescents drew a walk and stole second. McCarney popped to Crary and Scully scored Jones with his single into right. Ranger was safe as Crary fumbled his grounder but when Corbett lined one at Crary, Scully was caught off second. Smith threw out Masterson.

Scully fumbled Wilson's grounder down third and the runner took second on Masterson's peg to first. Smith fanned. Mahood's choice to Scully caught Wilson away from second. Mahood took second and scored on Rooke's long fly to left. Billingsley looped one between third and short and with Rooke on third, went out ambling down to second.

Johnny Wilson's fine fielding enabled Smith to retire the Crescents in a row in the second. Masterson duplicated the feat.

The third saw Crescents go out in order, Bud Weese getting a hand for his fine catch of McCarney's fly, on which he fell and came up with the ball.

Masterson fanned the Cogs in their half, Wilson alone getting to base on a pass.

Crescents took a lead of two runs in the fourth which Ranger opened with a single through second. He stole. Cripps made a nice catch of Corbett's long fly. Ranger drew a throw from the catcher to second and made third, scoring when Masterson slammed one through first. LeBarr sacrificed, and a wild throw off this play to get Masterson between the lines allowed him to score. Rishea went out at first.

Cogs came back with a vengeance. Rooke rifled one through Ranger for a double. Billingsley went after a high one and hit down third. Cripps sent up a foul to Rishea and the pitcher took Crary's pop. McGee filled the bases by accepting a pass, and when Weese also waited, Masterson forced in Rooke. Manager Wilson poled out a smashing drive to centre sending in three runners. Smith ended the rally by fanning.

Crescents got one back in the fifth. Hall fanned, J. Jones walked and stole second and made third to score on McCarney's infield out, Crary working fast on the play to get McCarney. Weese threw out Scully.

Mahood bounced a hit off Hall and took second on a passed ball. Ranger made a beautiful play after falling with Rooke's grounder and got the runner. Hall took Billingsley's fly and Masterson stopped Cripps.

Crescents took the lead again in the sixth. Ranger fanned. Freddy Jones replacing Corbett hit down third and Masterson beat out a bunt. LeBarr was passed. Rishea hooked one through first to score Jones and Masterson. It was a line drive over the bag. Hall and J. Jones struck out.

Crary tied it up for Cogs when after walking to first, he took second and stole third, and scored on a passed ball. Casey Masterson fanned the next three in order.

Starting the seventh, McCarney was thrown out by Crary, Scully fanned and with Ranger at bat, the game was called on account of darkness.

SATURDAY GAME SHOULD BE GOOD

Frontenac Regiment Team of Kingston Plays Firemen at Riverside Park.

AT SOFTBALL.

Great surprise is expressed by the Kingston papers at the defeat in a practice game of the Frontenac Regiment team, which will play the Firemen at Riverside park on Saturday afternoon. The Soldiers were playing the Tileworkers, whom they defeated in the league finals, and the runners-up, who were strengthened by several men from the other teams, administered a sound trimming. The losers, it is said, played much below their real form and are still confident of winning here on Saturday.

With the Firemen right at the top of their form, having finished a hard post season series, Saturday's game, which is the first of the Ontario Softball Association playoffs, should be a hard battle from start to finish. Those who attended the games at Central park know the calibre of the Firemen and will be out in force to see them play against the pick of the Kingston league. A good afternoon's sport is promised, as the rivalry between Kingston and Peterboro is strong in every sport.

JUNIOR RUGBY

A good junior rugby team is again promised this year by Max Sloan who has coached the junior entry from here for the past three years if only all the players eligible can be got out. Over half of last year's good little team are still available, among them being, MacIntosh, "Charlie" McLeish, "Pete" Mulholland, "Ken" Miller, Allen Henry, Bruce Fraser, "Ron" Fleming, Eric Fawcett and a number of others.

The team will be augmented by a number of players of last year's Collegiate Institute team, among them being Carl Woods, Ken Graham and other star performers on the gridiron for the P.C.I. With one or two chaps in from other places who have played rugby the groundwork of a good experienced team has been obtained.

Besides these, there are always a number of others, who have a desire to play the game, but possibly did not have the opportunity of attending P.C.I. to learn it and these are always welcome and in a great many cases have become so proficient at it in their first year that they have caused older and more experienced players to give first place to them on the line-up. It has always been the desire of the coach and the rugby executive to encourage any aspirants in the rugby game to come up to the practices and to make a place on the team and this year it is hoped that even more than usual will take advantage of the opportunity to learn to play the game.

The organiaztion meeting to organize junior rugby again for the season will be held at the Y.M.C.A. on Wednesday, August 25th, at 8 p.m.

STATE CHAMPION WINS SINGLES

Quarter Finals in Invitation Tennis Tournament at Madow Club.

SCORE 5-7, 6-2, 6-0

Southampton, N.Y., Aug. 19 (Canadian Press).—Jerome Lang of New York, State champion, won the only singles match contested in the invitation tennis tournament at Meadow Club yeserday. Lang advanced to the quarter finals round with a victory over Manuel Rainville of Quebec, a Canadian intermediate champion, 5—7, 6—2, 6—0.

This was Rainville's first appearance in an eastern invitation tournament. He played strong tennis in the first set, but finally succumbed under the pressure of Lang's crosscourt stroking and variations of depth.

RUGBY PROSPECTS BRIGHT THIS YEAR

Enough Good Players and Recruits to Form Four-Team League.

Rugby prospects are exceedingly bright in Peterboro this year, both for good teams and for enthusiasm among the Rugby fans, for a great number of old players and lovers of the sport have announced their intention of attending the organization meeting to be held in the Y.M.C.A. next Wednesday, August 25th.

There are surely enough rugby players and those desirious of learning to play the game to form a four team league like the one that operated so successfully three or four years ago, and there is no doubt that from this a strong Intermediate team to represent the city in the O.R.F.U. series could be chosen. A great many of the junior players of the past few years who have become too old to play in the junior series are still in the city and are desirous of keeping on with the game, while every team in the league could make use of a number of willing recruits and coach them along and make places for them on their first team line ups. An example of a player who in his first year of rugby gained a place on the Intermediate team representing Peterboro and played brilliant rugby was "Angie" McLeod. There are certainly numbers of others who, if given encouragement and training, would make good in their first year in the game. Every year the Junior team is represented by at least a third of the players who have played little or no rugby before.

So come out to the meeting and boost and see if a good City League composed of three or four rugby teams cannot be formed, having from this a team representing Peterboro in the Intermediate O.R.F.U. series.

Proverbial Luck of the Aussies Deserts Them at Last.

LOST THE TOSS.

England Wins Only Completed Game of the Present Series.

LONDON, Aug. 19 (Canadian Press).—Amidst scenes of extraordinary enthusiasm displayed by a huge crowd at the Kennington Oval the cricket team representing England yesterday crushed the Australian team in the fifth and last test match. England won by 289. It is only fair to say that the proverbial luck of the Australians deserted them. To begin with their skipper, Collins, lost the toss to the youthful, Chapman, captaining England for the first time. England was sent to bat first and thereby got the best of the pitch, which wore very well for the first three days, but was in bad shape for the Australian's crucial second innings yesterday. Rain followed by a bright sun completed the work of natural wear and tear. So, faced with the huge task of getting 415 to win yesterday, the Antipodeans were at the mercy of the bowlers, and could only get 125. England thus won the only completed game of the test match series of the Australian tour this year. The game was not restricted to three days' play as heretofore, but was played to a finish.

England's victory brings back to its shores the mythical "ashes," emblematic of the cricket championship, and which were held by Australia by virture of their winning the last test match series at home in 1925.

The heroes of the match for England were Sutcliffe and Hobbs, who by scoring centuries Monday gave England such a commanding lead; Strudwick, the wicket keeper, brought back into the team after being deposed for Brown, a younger man, but who was prevented by injury from playing; Rhodes, the veteran Yorkshire left hander bowler, also brought out of retirement, and Larwood, the bowler.

The fall of the wickets yesterday was as follows: 1 for 1 run; 2 for 31; 3 for 31; 4 for 35, 5 for 74; 6 for 83; 8 for 87; 9 for 114; and 10 for 125.

The match attracted a crowd of about 30,000 yesterday. Among those present were Prince Arthur of Connaught and Premier Baldwin.

DEMPSEY AND TUNNEY WILL MEET IN THE QUAKER CITY

Pennsylvania Athletic Commission Promise There Will Be No Interference.

PLACES GUARANTEE.

Bout Will Be of Ten Rounds To a Judges' Decision.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19 (Canadian Press)—Dempsey and Gene Tunney will meet for the heavyweight championship in the Sesqui-Centennial stadium in Philadelphia, September 23, Tex Rickard announced yesterday.

Rickard said that he had his decision after receiving assurances from the Pennsylvania Athletic Commission and exposition officials that there would be no interference with the match.

"I did not desire to bring the New York State Athletic Commission into court in the matter," he said.

Governor Pinchot has given his approval, according to the promoter, and Mayor Kendrick, of Philadelphia, has joined in the invitation. Negotiations were concluded yesterday with Robert H. Young, Secretary of the Pennsylvania Boxing Board.

Rickard deposited $50,000 with Young, guaranteeing that he will stage the fight in the Quaker City.

Present plans call for a seating capacity of 150,000 at the stadium with prices ranging from $5 to $30.

Rickard said that he would order Dempsey and Tunney out of their training camps in New York State immediately and that the champion undoubtedly will prepare himself at Atlantic City as he did for the bout with Luis Firpo.

The bout will be of ten rounds to a judges' decision and the New York and Pennsylvania Commissions are understood to be in accord on the matter.

Ten per cent. of the gross receipts will go to the exposition while the state will receive five per cent.

Only 75,000 can be accommodated in the stadium at the present time, the plans for the fight calling for doubling of the capacity by the erection of wooden seats.

What happens if the ball comes into contact with the batsman's person as he swings for a third strike without hitting the ball?

The batsman is automatically out. It is not necessary that the ball be caught by the catcher. The moment it hits the batsman, who strikes at it but misses it for the third strike, he is out.

The ball immediately becomes dead and no runners who happen to be on the bases at such a time can advance. Runners simply hold their original bases.

The ball must be returned to the pitcher and he must get on the rubber before the umpire should resume play.

BILLY EVANS SAYS.

Problem for Harris.

Proper handling of his pitching staff is the biggest task of every major league manager.

In this connection I doubt if any big league leader has a tougher proposition ahead in juggling his pitchers than "Bucky" Harris of the American League champs.

The Washington staff is composed almost entirely of veterans. All four regulars have been in the big show 10 or more years.

Walter Johnson leads with 20 seasons to his credit, Joe Bush is second in years of service with 15, Coveleskie an even dozen and Reuther 10.

Veteran pitchers of 10 or more years in the majors often lose their stuff quickly. This is where the rub comes in as far as the manager is concerned.

Pitchers reasonably certain of going the route make the managerial job much easier. When to pull the faltering twirler is the bane of every big league leader.

Griffith Explains.

Probably no one is better aware of the task that daily confronts Manager Harris than Clark Griffith, president of the Washington club.

A great pitcher in his day, Griffith hung on for years after his arm had lost much of its cunning. He was smart.

"There is no way to figure a veteran pitcher," was a remark Griffith made to me recently. "There is always a question mark attached to his arm.

"Often a manager purposely rests an old-timer for a week, only to have him fail to show a thing when called upon.

"On the other hand, a veteran pitcher, after working a hard game, is called upon say only two days later and has a world of stuff.

"I speak from experience when I say there is no way in the world to figure a veteran pitcher and his stuff. He may have everything when you least expect it and nothing after you have 'prepped' him for some big game."

When to pull his pitchers is going to be a tough situation that Manager "Bucky" Harris of the Washington club will face many a time before the close of the season.

Remarkable Showing.

A young man of 29 years, who didn't reach the majors until 1920, Harris became a manager in his fifth year of service, winning a pennant and world series and repeating with a second flag. Some stepping!

He has early in his career set something to shoot at, having accomplished the ultimate in baseball, a pennant and a world series title.

Not only must he play the difficult role of second baseman, direct the play of his club but also constantly keep his eye on the work of his veteran pitchers.

To yank or not to yank will be the ig thing with "Bucky" Harris this summer.

Managerial Wail.

While the problem of "Bucky" Harris relative to his pitchers is perhaps more perplexing than that of most managers, it is the real issue with every one of them.

In the south, Rogers Hornsby feared for his pitching and not without reason. Rhem and Keen are the only two who have done consistently good work.

McGraw, who expected much better pitching this season, has been badly disappointed. George Sisler of the St. Louis Browns has been up against it. Even Connie Mack, with one of the best staffs in the majors, has suffered because of erratic work on the rubber.

Managing a ball club in the big leagues is filled with problems but none quite so difficult to handle as the proper selection of pitchers. It is often nothing more than a big gamble.

SECRETS of STARS on INSIDE BASEBALL

as told by Billy Evans

By "Stuffy McInnis.

A first baseman should make a careful study of each batsman on the opposition. He also must give much consideration to either their speed or slowness of foot.

Knowing the batting possibilities of each player, also being familiar with their ability to step down to first base, is a tremendous advantage in the proper playing of the position.

On a batsman with the reputation of being fast, I make it a point to hurry to the bag the moment the ball is hit to any portion of the field other than in the direction of first base.

This enables you to properly position yourself, thereby giving the fielder making the play a good target, as usually it is necessary for him to make a hurried throw to get a fast man.

It also enables the first baseman to so position himself that he will be able to stretch to the very limit, thereby giving the infielder's throw the benefit of the distance so gained.

Often the cutting off of several feet that the ball would be forced to travel, if the first baseman received it in an upright position rather than stretched, is the difference between out and safe.

ORDERED TO PLAY OFF IN KINGSTON

Belleville and Petes To Battle For Right To Meet Ponies.

Belleville and the Petes have been ordered by President Kennedy of the Central Ontario League, to settle their argument by a sudden death game to take place in Kingston to-morrow (Friday) afternoon, at 5 o'clock standard time. The umpires will be selected by President Kennedy.

The arrangement is far from satisfactory to the Petes, who object to the long trip to Kingston, which calls for them to travel nearly three times as far as the Railroaders. The Petes were willing to toss a coin to see whether the game would take place in Belleville or Peterborough, but this sporting offer was rejected.

The winners of to-morrow's game will meet Kingston in home and home games next week for the Central Ontario League honours, the first game likely at Kingston on Wednesday.

LOCAL KIWANIANS CAPTURE TROPHY

Defeat Riverdale in Finals at Inter-Club Picnic Yesterday.

Peterboro Kiwanis Club emerged the victors in the softball tournament staged at the inter-club picnic yesterday. This is the second time the local club has won the trophy in this connection, they having won it from the Belleville club some few weeks ago. Four teams, Riverdale, Toronto, Orillia, Belleville, and the locals, were entered. Riverdale banished Belleville in the first round by a large score. Peterborough defeated Orillia by a close margin. In the finals Riverdale and Peterborough were the rivals, the locals coming through to win after the score had been tied.

Belleville vs. Riverdale.

This game proved to be a one-sided affair, the Belleville boys not seeming able to get under way until near the end of the game. The game was by no means a dead one, as the umpires made up for what was lacking in the play by their weird and wonderful decisions.

The teams were:

Belleville—Lee, Smith, Wotten, Dr. Ward, Hutchinson, Bryant, Aylsworth, Power, McIntosh.

Riverdale—McIntosh, Smith, McKee, Bachelor, Pillar, Waters, Bowden, Edmonds, Grobert.

Umpires—Bob Gorman, Belleville, and C. D. Cook, Peterboro.

Orillia vs. Peterborough.

The result of this game remained in doubt until the last innings. The locals managed to get a two-run lead in the first innings, blanking Orillia. Orillia, however, came back strong and dismissed the locals in three successive innings without letting them score. In the final frame each team scored two runs, the locals winning the contest by a score of 5-3.

The sensation of the day was pulled in this game when Bob Mackey of the Peterborough team picked up a red hot drive near second base and whipped it over to first almost before the crowd realized that it had left the bat.

The teams were:

Orillia—Dick, Watson, Pinkerton, Price, Thomson, Jones, Quibell, Burnet, Guy.

Peterborough — Green, Mackey, Weber, Bredin, McLean, Kimmel, Smith, Niven, Elliot and Huffman.

Umpires—Blade and Smith.

Riverdale-Peterborough.

The finals between these two teams provided softball of a first-class variety. From the go off it was evident that it would be a close finish. The pitchers in both cases were experienced and held the number of hits to a minimum. The locals were in great form, and during a regular epidemic of stealing bases they managed to pile up a three-run lead which they maintained until the sixth inning. The Riverdale crew, however, came back strong and succeded in establishing a one-run lead which the Petes did not overtake until the last innings. The work of the Riverdale first baseman, Bachelor, and Bowden, in the outfield, was at times spectacular, both men covering a great deal of ground and making some splendid catches. The final score was 12-10 in favor of Peterborough.

The teams were:

Riverdale—McIntosh, Smith, McKee, Bachelor, Pillar, Waters, Bowden, Edmonds, Grobert.

Peterborough — Green, Mackey, Weber, Bredin, McLean, Kimmel, Smith, Huffman, Elliot.

Umpires — Lee, Belleville, and Hoult, Riverdale.

MULLINS READY TO PUT UP CASH

Will Post $150,000 as Soon as Dempsey Does.

BELIEVES IT BLUFF.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19 (Canadian Press).—Paddy Mullins, manager of Harry Wills, said today he would post $150,000 to cover the side bet demanded by Jack Dempsey for a world's heavyweight championship match as soon as Dempsey could prove that his $150,000 had been posted.

Mullins said he believed Dempsey was bluffing.

BENEFIT CONCERT ATTENDANCE GOOD

Collection Taken For Raymond Allen Memorial Fund.

Over 2000 people attended the Band Concert given in Victoria Park, last night, by the Caledonian Pipe Band, and listened with evident appreciation and enjoyment to the martial music and plaintive melodies of the Scottish national musical instrument.

The collection taken up on behalf of the Ray Allen Memorial Fund yielded $67.67 after clearing all expenses.

Rev. J. D. Paterson briefly addressed the crowd on behalf of the fund, explaining that no decision had yet been made as to the form which he memorial would take.

A waltz selection "Mrs. Elder's Welcome," was particularly well received.

The national dances of the Land of the Heather were danced by Piper Thomson; and Master Joseph Leith sigging "A Hundred Pipers," made a great hit.

"Never enough," was the cry when Bob Hendry sang.

The band desires to express its sincere appreciation of the response made by the crowd to the appeal, and for the hearty applause which was accorded to its efforts.

NEW MICROCOSM IS BELIVED FOUND

Doctor Tells Congress About Simple Living Atoms.

ITHACA, N. Y., Aug. 19. — (Canadian Press). — New microcosm of "simple living atoms," possibly representing a new world of life "intermediary between the living and the non-living form," is thought to have been discovered, Dr. B. M. Duggar of St. Louis, told the International Congress of Plant Science to-day.

As a new bio-chemic factor it was traced as the causing agent, he said, of th mosaic blight, costing the tobacco industry enormous losses annually. It is ultra-microsopic and as yet has never been seen.

The failure of attempts to isolate it by filtration, precipitation, grinding, and other known methods, led to the belief Dr. Duggar asserted, "that it is a simple living organism and possibly represents a world of simple living atoms, as yet unknown."

PREMIER TALKS TO RAILWAYMEN

Says Statement of Intention To Merge Line Is Malicious Falsehood.

TO STEAL VOTES.

BLIND RIVER, B.C., August 19 (Canadian Press). — Despite a drenching rain, the railway workers of Blind River were gathered on the platform when Premier Meighen arrived yesterday afternoon.

The Premier declared in a few minutes' speech that he had no intention of amalgamating the Canadian National Railways with the Canadian Pacific Railway.

"I do not know," he said, "how it is but the malicious falsehood that I have murderous designs against the Canadian National is harder to down than any other. A more vile falsehood never was circulated among honest people than to say that I propose to amalgamate the two systems. It is just an effort to steal votes by frightening the employees of the Canadian National.

"Canada for Canadians," he said, was the aim of the fiscal policy of the Conservative party.

INQUIRE INTO PLANE CRASH

British Authorities Are Investigating Accident Which Killed Three.

PILOT IS DEAD.

FOLKSTONE, Aug. 19.—(Canadian Press.) — The Air Ministry to-day began an investigation of the crash of the French channel aeroplane at Aldington, Kent, yesterday, which caused the deaths of Robert Blaney, Boston, Mass., and Vigo Rizzi, manager of London's noted Ambassador Club, who were passengers, and Pilot De Lisle, and the injury of eleven persons and mechanician.

The accident occurred during a misty rain and the pilot was compelled to fly low. The passengers had a terrifying experience as the plane, careening toward the earth, struck a barn and several haystacks before it collapsed.

EDUCATION IS NOT CRAMMING

Examinations Are Milestones Along Path of Progress, Says Duchess.

QUOTES RUSKIN.

LONDON, Aug. 19 (Canadian Press).—College examinations are to be regarded as milestones along the road of educational progress. Education is something very different from cramming—the main thing is to keep along the road of educational advancement.

These opinions were forthcoming from the Duchess of Atholl, M.P., Under-Secretary of Education, when she presented prizes at Manchester Girls' High School. The Duchess went on to site Ruskin's definition of education, as being, "To make people not only do the right things but enjoy the right things, not merely industrious but to love industry, not merely learned but to love knowledge, not merely pure but to love purity, not merely just but to hunger and thirst after justice."

The Duchess remarked that the training they received in their school ought to enabled the students to go out into the world with clear standards of honor and truth and of consideration for others.

She thought that Ruskin's words, "We should love industry" had rather a special significance today, when, through bad trade, there was so much unemployment. It might well happen that young people leaving school could not always find just the kind of work they had most wished for. If that should happen to any of those she was addressing, she would ask them not to be ashamed of taking up any other kind of work.

JUDGES' ROBES CAUSE DEBATE

Irish Free State Senate Votes To Retain Wig and Gown.

MUCH OPPOSITION.

LONDON, Aug. 19 (Canadian Press).—The design of the costumes to be worn by judges of the Irish Free State was the subject of discussion in the Free State Senate when the rules of the court came before the upper chamber. W. B. Yeats moved the deletion of the rule on the subject, which maintains the traditional wig and gown of the British courts, and was defeated by 13 votes to 12.

Mr. Yeats declared that no country that he knew after a revolution such as they had passed through, had been content to adopt without examination the traditions of the past. They wanted the people to realize that the law was their own creation.

Sir John Keane said they should be very cautious before they broke with tradition. "English tradition," interjected Mrs. Costello.

"English tradition, yes," he replied, "I am not ashamed to say it. It is the tradition to which the people are accustomed." With the exception of occasional appearances of the Irish language on strange occasions, the procedure of the two houses was, he proceded, moulded naturally and unconsciously on the English tradition. He preferred the present wig to the proposed "biretta." A "biretta" was a costume closely associated with the church and would bring closer the church and the judiciary.

Dr. O. St. J. Gogarty said they desired to have a change of costume because the wig and gown to the Irish mind were associated with injustice and place-hunting. There was no such thing as a "biretta," but a cap which if starched and stiffened might be called a "biretta." They were using an Irish design of Irish material.

TO ASK CANADA

the Canadian regulations as to the clearance of vessels.

Canada has been disposed to assist the United State for the last four years, in this respect, it is stated but no action has resulted because of a divided opinion as to its d in respect to assistance in enforcing a sumptuary law of another nountry.

Sentiment is Changing.

The changed sentiment reflected, not only in Great Britain, but in Canada, has brought about a situation where both Governments are prepared to comply with any reasonable requests made upon them by this Government, it is asserted respecting illicit liquor traffic.

While abroad, General Andrews negotiated an understanding with Great Britain by which that Government will inform the United States of any shipments of liquor designed for the United States. Canada has agreed to do the same, and, in addition, has promised to rectify her shipping laws and strengthen her Customs relations to aid the United States in enforcing the Volstead Act at the border and on the coast.

Advance in Curbing Smugglers.

The agreements reached and those in prospect with Canada, it is declared by officials here, represent the greatest advance yet made to stop the shipment in a wholesale way of illicit liquor into the United States. After the agreements are in operation, it is declared, no ships can get clearance papers out or any British ports or have these clearances changed by the Canadian authorities without the United States authorities being notified.

The result of this, it is pointed out, is that the United States will be informed along in advance of any ship movements of liquor in this direction, and will be able under the treaty with Britain to pick these ships up in the twelve-mile limit

But the great advantage in the proposed agreements is that both Governments will co-operate to the limit in enforcing the prohibition law and keeping the United States advised of all attempts to break it down.

Approval of Coolidge.

President Coolidge regards the arrangements as the most effective moves yet made by this Government to enforce prohibtion. It is believed that with the Canadian border made easier to guard under the stronger customs regulations the Canadian Government offers to enforce, and in the refusal of taht Government to sanction changes in the restrictions of vessels, the United States will have all her coasts protected as effectively as possible. The next move will be to reinforce the patrol guard on the Mexican border and influence Mexico to assist in upholding the law.

Treaties have been negotiated with Great Britain, France, Italy, Norway Denmark, Sweden, the etherlands and Panada extending from the three miles to twelve miles the zone in which vessels suspected of carrying liquor can be searched. A treaty also exists with Canada to prevent smuggling of liquor, narcotics and other articles.

President Coolidge is of the opinion that General Andrews may continue as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury beyond the next session of Congress. It is thought here the General will not resign if Congress enacts laws that will put "teeth' in the enforcement laws. If Congress fails again, friends of General Andrews say he will retire, as he believes he is helpless properly to enforce the Volstead law under the present acts.

The prohibtion question is so interesting just now that President Coolidge may ask General Andrews to come here for a few days to confer on the situation before conference with the Canadian authorities begins.

OTTAWA, Aug. 19 (Canadian Press).—"This government is very much interested in putting down bootlegging, smuggling, and all such improper practices," declared Sir Henry Drayton, acting Prime Minister, this morning, in reference to a despatch from New York to the effect that Canada will assist the United States in the enforcement of the Volstead Act.

The request of General Andrews, U. S. official responsible for the carrying out of the Volstead Act, for an interview with the Minister of Customs and Excise, has not yet been received here.

The acting Prime Minister intimated, however, that any request from General Andrews for an interview with a member of the Government would receive immediate attention.

The Government, it was pointed out, had already taken definite steps towards putting into effect recommendations for the suppression of smuggling approved by Parliament, shortly before prorogation two months ago, following the sensational Customs probe.

Andrews on Vacation.

WASHINGTON, August 19 (Canadian Press). — General Andrews, prohibition chief, is now on vacation at Lake Champlain, and the Treasury considers it possible that he may go to Ottawa before returning to Washington, and confer with Canadian officials on the border rum situation.

His principal purpose will be to secure a better understanding for the direct exchange of information between Canada and the United States prohibition officers.

Stricter enforcement along the border has been one particular ambition of General Andrews.

PLANES FIGHT FOREST FIRES

Expense Greatest Handicap To Wider Use; Canada Leads the Way.

FRANCE USES MANY.

PARIS, Aug. 19.—The airplane has become one of the most effective weapons to combat forest fires. Wherever in the world there are large timber tracts and a public opinion alive to the necessity of preventing the huge annual losses from fires, planes usually will be found at work. They are used to patrol and report back fires in embryo stages, to transport men and equipment, and for reconnaissance by chiefs directing campaigns against fires that have already spread.

The greatest handicap to their more general use is the expense. As in ordinary commercial work, there is demand for a machine with a low first cost and small maintenance charges. Most of the planes hitherto available were designed for military uses and are not efficient for general purposes.

France has used airplanes in fighting forest fires since early in 1924. French forests suffered during the war years. Then there followed a series of bad fires in many parts of France. The Aero Club finally succeeded in arousing public interest and airplanes were brought into use. Since that time, as result of their effectiveness and favorable weather conditions, no extensive fires have ravaged the French timber lands.

Canada Uses Planes.

Canada has probably carried the use of airplanes in fighting fires farther than any other country, according to H. C. Loeffler, of the Relief Division, League of Red Cross Societies, who has collected considerable information on the subject. The British Imperial Forestry Conference in its 1923 convention in Canada adopted a report in which the following quotation appeared:

"We are impressed not only with the value but with the necessity of using aircraft in protecting the forests of the inaccessible and uninhabited north country of Canada, where absence of means of transportation and communication prohibits fire detection or quick action on fires starting, by any other means.

"The use of aircraft is fundamental to fire protection in such cases because only by their use can access to the location of the fire be obtained within a period of time short enough to permit of successful efforts at control. Unfortunately costs of operation are so high as to restrict use below the point of efficiency, where forest authorities are required to pay in full for services rendered.

Urge Subsidies.

"In view of the importance of this uject, we feel that the attention of this government should be drawn to the national necessity of providing free, or at moderate rates, the use of existing air services to the fullest extent in forest protection work. Where government air service facilities are not adequate, we are of the opinion that subsidies should be granted."

Ontario inaugurated its own aerial fire fighting service in 1924 when 15 seaplanes were purchased. The great prevalence of lakes and rivers dictated the choice of this type of machine. Camps with full facilities for mothering the planes were established at strategic points. The 15 planes, equipped with wireless apparatus and for transporting men with pumps, are protecting 100,000,000 acres of forests at a cost of approximately $800,000 a year. All of their costs can not be charged to fire protection, however, as they also make aerial surveys and cruise timber. Alberta and Manitoba maintain similar services.

The United States Government has appropriated only a limited amount of money for aerial fire fighting—$50,00 in 1925—so it has not been possible to accomplish much. Five bases have been maintained, two in California, one in Oregon, one in Washington, and one in northern Idaho. The planes are used as patrols and for reconnaissance work.

Japan Began In 1924.

Japan began using airplanes for the same purposes in 1924, and Germany is also utilizing them.

In India airplanes have been of great assistance in mapping the forests. Similar timber surveys are reported from Mexico, South America, and Canada. From an aerial photograph an expert can determine the variety of trees and their densities over a given tract. Increased use of airplanes in forestry work is predicted by experts in the field.

REFORESTATION IS CONSIDERED

Warning Given That Canadian Forests Are Being Depleted.

MANY METHODS.

ITHACA, N.Y., Aug. 19 (Canadian Press).—Personalities of giant forest trees and the pigmy mechanical processes of tiny plant cells were the range of topics discussed at the International Congress of Plant Sciences.

Reforestation cannot be treated in a cut-and-dried manner because physiological and biological problems involved in proper forest management necessitate the choice of methods for each individual forest, A. K. Cajander, of Helsingfors, Finland, said. A survey in Finland disclosed, he said, that the problem of treating forest growths must be attacked from the standpoint of site types, sometimes requiring complicated research to arrive at the proper care of different forests.

Clifton D. Howe, of the University of Toronto, warned that the soft wood timbers of Canada would last the United States only ten or fifteen years at the present rate of cutting. The forests, he said, could be made continuous for all time if properly protected and managed.

The section on plant physiology heard Dr. A. Ursprung, of the University of Freibourg, Switzerland, describe his studies of the suction force of tiny cells that feed plants, working as a suction pump and reduction valves.

His researches showed that the suction force is at a minimum in the root hairs and increases in the tissues in proportion to their distance from the absorption zone of the root tip or conducting vessel. He measured to the tenth degree these tiny suction forces. After a rain, the suction force of leaves drop and the mechanism is so delicate that it likewise increases and decreases in proportion to the humidity of the air.

Development of a hardy apple that could stand the rigorous weather of Canada, finaly obtained after 36 years' work by crossing the Siberian crab-apple with other specimens, was related by Dr. W. T. Macoun, of the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa, Canada.

William Seifriz, of the University of Pennsylvania, told the section on cytology of results of the study of protoplasmis structure whereby it was found that, through the use of micro needles and micromanipulators, the nucleus of amphibean corpuscles could be stretched nearly 25 times their original length.

10 YEARS BURIED BODY REMOVED

Police Seeking People Who Desecrated Grave In Detroit.

SECOND ATTEMPT.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 19 —Police are working on one of the most mysterious grave-robbing cases ever to come to their notice, it having been learned yesterday that the body of Mrs. Emma Wilketwitz, who was buried in Woodmere Cemetery, on February 27, 1917, had been removed from its grave three days ago.

The open grave was discovered by the cemetery caretaker Sunday morning. Wilktwitz's son changed to enter the cemetery Sunday on his regular visit to his mother's grave and noticed a crowd standing around the open space. He found that the cover of the "rough box" had been smashed to bits with some heavy instrument and the cover of the coffin itself also demolished.

Wilkewitz declared the gold ring and gold chain and locket which his wife wore when buried were of too insignificant an intrinsic value to warrant robbery of the grave. The affair marks the second robbery attempt in the past month, the caretaker of the cemetery declaring that ghouls recently had made an attempt to enter a mausoleum, but found the solid construction of the vault too much for their efforts.

SCIENTISTS HAVE ANNOUNCED NEW ACHIEVEMENTS

Solidifying of Helium and New Diabetes Cure Are Among Them.

TELEVISION.

Progress Made in Depicting Movements—Telephone Principle Used.

PARIS, Aug. 19.—Experiments which indicate the time is not far distant when it will be possible to see long distances by electricity, the success of two Dutch scientists in solidifying helium, the curative actions of nickel and cobalt against diabetes, and discovery of a species of butterfly in Madagascar which not only lives after being decapitated but lives longer than its fellows with heads, are among the results announced recently by European scientists.

Long distance vision through electricity is promised by the results of the work of M. Belin and M. Holweck, chief of the Radium Institute, in their laboratory at Malmaison. In a recent demonstration before Gen. Ferrie, director of military telegraphy, Commander Mesny, and M. Fabry, professor of physics at the Sorbonne, they were able to transmit the movements of a pencil and a finger. With larger and improved apparatus they expect to be able to send whole scenes, until finally it is predicted the man who picks up a telephone will be able to observe the listener at the other end of the wire, or to watch a sporting event being played in another city.

The apparatus works on a similar principle to the telephone but by different means. In a telephone, the speaker's voice modifies an electric current. The modifications are carried over the wire and actuate the reproductory mechanism in the received. Television works the same way.

Revolving Mirrors.

The scene must first be broken up into tiny units. This is accomplished through two mirrors revolving on perpendicular axes, one much faster than the other. The reflexion from these mirrors falls on a sending screen composed of photo-electric cells. The different degrees in intensity of light modify each of these cells. The minute modifications in the currents from the cells are amplified and sent either by wire or by wireless. At the receiving end they are used to modify a jet of electrons playing on the receiving screen. A picture in varying shades from black to white results.

While the bare explanation sounds simple, the difficulites offered by the execution are enormous. The tiny units which go to make up the picture not only must be transmitted and assembled but in their proper order. The transmission must also be very fast as the duration of each unit is only about one-sixteenth of a second.

The extreme speed necessary to obtain simultaneousness in reproducing the moving scene at the other end of the wire can be understood when it is realized that to send a picture 10 centimetres square is equivalent to emitting 100,000 separate and distinct signals a second.

The work of two Dutch scientists, Kammerlingh Ones and M. Keesom, working in the laboratories of the University of Leyden, in succeeding helium, is no less remarkable. To achieve their results, they were forced to devise apparatus which would lower the temperatur to within a fraction of a degree of absolute cold — or in other words nearly to the point where it is impossible to be any colder.

Helium Solidified.

All gasses have the properties of being liquified and then solidified when subjected to extreme cold. Hydrogen, for example, when brought to a temperature of 243 degrees below zero Centigrad is transformed into a metallic mass somewhat resembling lead. Scientists always have been balked in their attempts to solidify helium because no one had ever been able to obtain a temperature cold enough.

The coldest temperature possible under physical laws is 273 degrees below zero Centrigrade. After 25 years of work, or up until 1912, Kammerlingh Onnes was able to obtain the extremely low temperature of 271.85 degrees below zero Centigrade. During the last 14 years he has been able to drop this down another quarter of a per cent to 272.1, which is nearly the practical limit.

But even in this close proximity to the point of absolute cold, helium obstinately refused to pass from a liquid in a solid state. The Dutch scientists persevered, however, and finally after subjecting the helium in this extremely cold state to a pressure of 26 atmospheres were rewarded to see transparent crystals appear floating in the liquid. Helium had been solidified.

In the field of medicine, Messrs. Gabriel Bertrand and Machebeuf recently revealed to the French Academy of Sciences the presence in the pancreas and in the insuline extract of interesting proportions of nickel and cobalt.

Aid for Diabetes

They reported they had studied the action of these two materials on cases of diabetes and found that in a good number of cases, the specific effects of the disease were reduced. Their conclusions were supported by clinical results obtained by M. Rathery and Mlle. Levina and presented to the academy by M. G. Bertrand.

The curious effects of decapitation on some species of butterflies was reported to the Academy of Sciences by M. Bouvier, professor in the museum, based on the work of R. P. Cambouet, a missionary in Madagascar. In his experiments he took more than 80 butterflies of three different families, and decapitated them, being careful not to waste much blood.

A similar number of individuals from the same families were confined as checks. The decapitated butterflies not only survived the operations, but lived longer than their relatives fully equipped with heads. M. Bouvier explained that the longer life probably was due to a diminution of physical activity necessitated by lack of heads. Edmond Perrier reported in 1911 to the academy similar results in the case of caterpillars.

TETANUS CLAIMS A TORONTO BOY

Wound in Eyebrow Becomes Infected and Results Fatally.

TORONTO, August 19 (Canadian Press).—Tetanus, commonly known as "lockjaw," claimed as a victim to-day, Gordon Ferris, six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Ferris, Toronto, who died in the Hospital for Sick Children after an illness of only a few days. The death is the second that has occurred within the last few weeks in this city from the dread ailment, the first victim having become infected from a twig of a lilac bush.

While playing alone in the grounds of his grandfather's home at Bracebridge on August 9, the Ferris child jumped from the roof of a chicken coop to the ground, and a stick which he held pierced his eyebrow. The injury appeared to be of minor character, but infection set in. A week later the child could open his mouth only with great difficulty. He was taken to the hospital, and there the cause was diagnosed as one of tetanus.

CANADA'S NEED IS MORE POWER

Ontario and Quebec Must Progress in Development Says Bank Letter.

SPEND A BILLION.

MONTREAL, Aug 19 (Canadian Press).—According to the August letter of the Royal Bank of Canada the amount of electricity generated in Canada for Canadian use during the first five months of 1926 surpassed that produced in the corresponding months in 1925 by 17 per cent and that of 1923 by 38 per cent.

"Increased growth in Canadian use of electric power is indicative of increasing industrial activity, since a much larger proportion of the electric power generated in Canada is used for industrial purposes than in more thickly settled coutries where there is a larger proportional amount used for lighting," says the report.

"A study of the probable cost of future turbine installation in Eastern Canada indicates that between 1926 and 1945 nearly $1,300,000,000 will be required in capital expenditure or that the average expenditure per year for the next 20 years will be close to $65,000,000. In making this estimate the Dominion Water Power Branch of the Department of the Interior conclude that of this total about $600,000,000 will be required in Ontario and nearly $700,000,000 in Quebec.

"Such figures as those of the Royal Bank of Canada showing the rapid rise in kilowatt hours generated, or the tables from the Dominion Water Power Branch showing the rapid increase which has already taken place in installed turbine capacity in Canada have indicated the rapid growth in this industry, but the economic importance of the subject stands out more clearly when these changes are transformed into new terms giving the amount of capital required. Even more startling results would be obtained by showing the capital investment and the man power necessary for the growth of the power-using industries which wil develop during the next 20 years."

Former Student Here Wins Royal Art Diploma

TORONTO, Aug. 19 (Canadian Press). — Miss Annette Marsh, who returned to her home here today, is the first Canadian to receive a diploma from the Royal College of Art, London, England, where she has been a student for the last two years. Born in Victoria County, she is a graduate of Lindsay Collegiate Institute, Peterborough Normal School, and the Ontario College of Art, and she also studied in New York before going to England.

STILL SEEKING MISSING MAN

Ridge in Rear of McManus Farm Being Searched To-day.

NO TRACE FOUND.

Search was resumed this morning for John Tighe, the 81-year-old retired farmer of Smith Township, who disappeared from the home of his son, Howard, on the Fifth Line of Smith, on Monday morning.

The search party to-day concentrated efforts on the ridge in the rear of the farm of "Buff" McManus, who about noon on Monday sighted in the distance a figure which he thinks bore some resemblance to the missing man.

The belief is now generally held among the searchers that the old man is no longer alive.

The Examiner to-day investigated a report that an old man called at the house of Thomas Post, a farmer in Smith, who is located some distance from the Tighe homestead. Mr. Post has not been long in the district, and was not personally acquainted with Mr. Tighe, who rarely ventured beyond the gate of his son's farm. From Mr. Post's description, it is clear, however, that the stranger who visited him is not the old farmer who is being sought far and wide by neighbors and friends of many years' standing. Mr. Post's visitor was a wayfarer, journeying to Omemee, who had taken a wrong turning. He was a somewhat younger man, was wretchedly dressed, and carried no cane, while Mr. Tighe always made use of such an auxiliary in walking.

The Rev. W. B. Tighe, pastor of McPhail Memorial Baptist Church, Ottawa, who left his father's home after a visit of several days, just two hours before the old man disappeared, has been notified of the occurrence.

Some of the swamps in the neighborhood are very treacherous. Neighbors recall a case of a man many years ago who was lost in the great swamp near the Fox Farm, and whose body was never found.

Provincial Constable N. F. Maker has taken the case in hand, and will conduct further investigations.

Will Stay In Europe If He Finds Liberty

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—(United News). —Irving Cobb, a humorist from Paducah, Ky., is on his way to Italy. Before sailing he timidly outlined his plans. Here they are:

When I reach Italy I shall send word to Mussolini that I have arrived and will receive him. I am not going to visit any art galleries though I may go to some of the shooting galleries. One thing I intend doing is to visit hot dog stands, merry go rounds and bowling alleys in Italy. I shall not collect antiques unless they have corks in them. If I find a country in Europe which enjoys real liberty I may stay there."

"If I manage to pick up a little liberty I will try to retain some of it and bring it back but I'm afraid I would not be permitted to enter the United States with it."

AUSTRALIAN GOLD SENT TO NEW YORK

To Be Held There For Account of Bank of England.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—A shipment of $30,000,000 of gold from Australia arrived in San Francisco yesterday, the largese amount of the metal ever transferred from Australia to the United States. It will be sent to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and held for the account of the Bank of England. While no official statement was made concerning the purpose of the shipment, the financial district assumed that it was made to obviate the necessity of gold shipments from London to New York at the time of heavy seasonal commodity purchases in this market by British interests, or at least to reduce such shipments to a minimum.

The seasonal drain on sterling exchange is beginning, due to British purchases of cotton, grain and other products, and bankers have expected that this would result in a movement of gold from London to New York in the next few months, as the usual purchases have been augmented by the necessity of Great Britain buying large amounts of United States coal as a result of the British strike.

Additional shipments of gold to Canada are expected by bankers here as a result of continued firmness of Canadian exchange. In the last three weeks $9,500,000 of gold has been sent from here to Canada, and it is understood arrangements are now being made for the transfer of $5,000,000 more.

THE STOCK MARKET

Liverpool Wheat Price Influences Chicago Market

CHICAGO, Ills., Aug. 19 (Canadian Press).—Influenced by the unexpected weakness of quotations at Liverpool, the wheat market here averaged lower to-day during the early dealings. Complaints of excessive rains north-west tended to give wheat values here a firmer undertone. Starting at 3-8 cents decline to a like advance, wheat underwent a moderate general sag. Corn and oats were easier, corn opening ¼ to 5-8 cents off, and subsequently receding a little more. Provisions scored gains. Chicago opening—Wheat, Sept. 135 1-8, Dec. 139 3-8; corn, Sept. 79 7-8, Dec. 84 7-8; oats, Sept. 39¼, Dec. 43 1-8.

Reports of a better inquiry from France to-day for wheat from North America helped at times to steady the Chicago market in the face of an unlooked for downward trend shown by Liverpool quotations for wheat. Indications that the domestic and foreign cash trade in wheat is healthier than recent gossip current has suggested were given considerable notice.

Stronger Tendency Shown On Toronto Market To-day

TORONTO, Aug. 19 (Canadian Press).—A stronger tendency, which was general over a fairly broad list in trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange today, was featured by the activity of Brazilian Traction and an 85 point advance by Dome Gold Mines to 11.50. Brazilian had a turnover of nearly 2,500 shares, its quotation firming 5-8 to 111 1-8.

Gains were registered all along the line, Abitibi, with a jump of 2 1-2 to 86 1-2, also being noteworthy. Noranda was strong with a net gain of 35 cents to 19.00. Canners preferred was up 1 point to 68 1-2, and Smelters 2 to 233, while Brompton and Mackay Common firmed 1-4 to 34 1-2. Massey Harris Common was unchanged at 65. Canada Bread Common was up 1-8 to 82.

The oils were firm, British American firming 1-4 to 55 1-4, and Imperial 1-8 to 36 3-8. The bank stocks were also stronger, Commerce being up 1 to 223, Royal 1 to 250 1-2, and Standard 1-4 to 191.

Mine Stocks Make Gains In Active Exchange Session

TORONTO, Aug. 19 (Canadian Press)—Advances by Dome, Noranda, and Lake Shore featured an active session of the Standard Mining Exchange today in which prices were generally stronger. Dome jumped 55 cents to 11.15, Noranda 40 cents to 19.00, and Lake Shore 33 cents to 14.40.

Teck Hughes made a net gain of ten cents to 4.30 while McIntyre lost a like amount to 26.16. Hollinger was seven cents higher at 19.50, while Wright Hargreaves and Gold Hill were unchanged at 8.70 and 65 respectively. The re-opening of the Peterson Lake property in Cobalt was followed by an offering of the stock on the local exchange, the noon close being 17 3-8. West Dome and Barry Holly gold firmed three quarters to 16 1-2 and 59 3-4 respectively.

Trend In New York To-day Shows Great Uncertainty

NEW YORK, August 19 (Canadian Press).—Price movements again lacked uniformity in to-day's Stock Market. Pools resumed operations in a wide assortment of issues.

Chesapeake and Ohio led the advance in the rail group by crossing 154 to a new record price. Missouri Pacific broke through to a new peak for the year, and substantial gains were recorded by a number of other class A carriers.

Such recent favorites as U. S. Steel Common, General Motors, Dupont, and U.S. Industrial Alcohol appeared to be in large supply on every rally, but the reactionary tendency in these issues did not halt constructive operations elsewhere. Oils pointed upward, General Asphalt Common and Preferred touching new 1926 highs.

The demand for railroad equipment shares reflected large inquiries now being put out by some of the large railroads, New York Air Brake being elevated to a new 1926 peak price. Merchandising issues responded to reports of a marked improvement in mail order and retail trade.

DELEGATES FOR MINERS ACCEPT TERMS OF BOLSOVER COMPANY FOR RETURN OF 13,000 WORKERS

First Serious Deflection From Strikers' Ranks is Announced.

COMPROMISE MADE.

Hours Fixed at 7 1-2, a Concession From Each Side.

LONDON, August 20 (Canadian Press).—The biggest breakaway of coal miners from the policy of the Miners' Federation which has occurred since the strike in the mines was called more than three months ago, came last night when delegates representing about 13,000 men and boys employed in the Bolsover Company mines in the Nottinghamshire coal fields accepted the proposal of the mine owners to resume work at their old wages for a seven and a half-hour day. This constituted a compromise between the Federation's insistency that the seven-hour day must be maintained, and the mine owners' demands for an eight-hour day.

Although it is yet to be seen whether the miners generally endorse the action of the delegates, it is predicted that virtually all concerned will eagerly accept the compromise and that work will start again forthwith.

Other Owners Agreeable.

Other mine owners in Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire have announced their readiness to re-open their pits on the same terms. Whether the present development was a result of the breakdown of the negotiations yesterday between the mine owners and miners is not apparent. Miners in various districts have been going back to work in small numbers aggregating a few thousand, but there has been no general movement to the pits. Some observers hope that the acceptance of the Bolsover Company terms will mean the beginning of the end of the strike.

Baldwin on Holiday.

Whatever may happen in connection with the coal miners' strike, Premier Baldwin will not participate in any negotiations for some time to come, as he is leaving almost immediately for a holiday in Aix-Les-Bains, France. He is leaving the cares of state mostly on the shoulders of Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Gems Found In The Lake Provide Ownership Problem

GENEVA, Aug. 20.—(Associated Press). — A wealthy Dutch woman visitor at Brunnen, near Lucerne, accidentally dropped a pearl necklace worth £500 into the lake while taking photographs from a boat. She offered a reward of £40.

When amateur swimmers failed to recover the gems a professional diver was summoned from Zurich. He not only found the necklace, but several other pieces of valuable jewelry, including a diamond ring, the owners of which are not known.

The question has arisen whether the unclaimed property belongs to the diver or to the woman who employed him to find her necklace.

MEIGHEN SPEAKS AS WESTERNER IN WETASKIWIN

Never Has Western Representation Been So Powerful As At Present.

TARIFF PROBLEM.

Will Not Amalgamate Canadian National With the C.P.R. Railway.

WETASKIWIN, Alta., Aug. 20.—(Canadian Press). — "I hope," said Premier Meighen yesterday afternoon "that you will consider me a westerner." The Prime Minister was speaking at an afternoon meeting in support of the candidature of C. H. Russell, Conservative candidate in Westaskiwin, in Westaskiwin, there are two other candidates in the field, S. C. Tobin, Liberal, member for the division in the last parliament and William Irvine, who sat in parliament from 1921 to 1925 as a Labour member from Calgary.

Mr. Meighen pressed the point that never, in any government of Canada had Western representation been so powerful as in the present government.

"Do anyone of you believe," questioned Mr. Meighen, "that I am one of the big interest people of the West, ready to grind the last dollar out of the farmer of the West, if you do certainly you should support no party of which I am leader Mr. Meighen declared that he himself had greater interest in western farming than any man who had been in the House of Commons for the last eighteen years.

"I have more to gain by the success of agriculture in this Western country than any man who has been a member of the house in the last two decades," Mr. Meighen added.

He referred to the portfolios held by Westerners in his government. For the first time in the history of the country, Mr. Meighen said, a Westerner w. Minister of Finance. And its was the Minister of Finonce who was charged with the tariff schedules, with the whole matter of tariff administration.

He referred incidentally to the two other candidates in Wetaskiwin. He humorously spoke of Mr. Irvine as having come down on Ottawa much as Saul of Tarsus came down on Jerusalem, breathing threatenings and slaughter on the Conservative party and especially against its leader but in four years of parliament, Mr. Irvine had changed his opinion both of men and parties. He learned a great deal about the sincerity of the Liberal party in those four years, said Mr. Meighen. and indeed, of some Progressives. Mr. Meighen spoke of Mr. Tobin as "A Liberal of the Old School," against whom personally he had no word to say.

Mr. Meighen was emphatic as in previous meetings through the West that he was against amalgamation of the Canadian National with the C. P. R., and that he had no intention of abrogating the Australian treaty although he proposed to revise it in such a way as to preserve the Canadian market for the Canadian farmer. "What would I have done with the Australian treaty you ask?" Mr. Meighen questioned, "I would have raised the tariff on butter, cheese, eggs, hay, vegetables, and fruit, on

Uses Match To Light Tank Fire Brigade Given Call

Peterborough has within its boundaries one of those men who use matches to investigate the contents of their gasoline tanks. The fire brigade received a call yesterday to a local taxi stand due to this cause. In this case however, the driver escaped injury and the car was only slightly damaged.

THREE DROWNED.

Were Crossing Riviere des Prairies Near Montreal on a Ferry.

MONTREAL, Aug. 20. —(Canadian Press). — Three men were drowned in Riviere des Prairies, on the north side of Montreal Island yesterday, when a small ferry on which they were crossing turned over. One man was rescued. A team of horses and wagon also went down. According to information here a farmer nemed Bertrand and two hired men were drowned. A third farm hand was rescued by Bertrand's son, who came to the rescue in a boat. The others had disappeared.

Finds $1,705 In Box In Taxi; Driver Gives To The Police

NEW YORK, Aug. 20. — "What about it?" asked Lieutenant Edward J. O'Hare, when a taxicab driver walked into the Bathgate Avenue Police Station, Wednesday night, and laid a small tin box on the desk.

"It's full of money—$1,705 in cash," said the cab driver, William L. Kuebler, of 3,000 Randall avenue, Throgg's Neck, the Bronx.

Kuebler said he had taken two negroes from 125th to 137th street, and that when they left, two white men hailed the cab. Before they entered, however, Kuebler saw the box, wrapped in a paper bag, and put it under his coat. Then he took his new fares to their destination.

The box, he discovered, contained fourteen rolls of notes amounting to $100 each, a wallet stuffed with $300 more and a loose $5 gold piece. Besides the money, there were two cards and a note in a foreign language. The police refused to tell what was written on the cards or in the note.

Two Girls in Canoe Find Floating Corpse Aged Smith Farmer

Body of John Tighe Is Discovered Floating Near South End of Lake Yesterday Afternoon—Searchers Passed Near Spot.

USE OF DOG TO FOLLOW TRAIL ADVISED BY CLAIRVOYANT ASKED

Two girls, Florence Hutchison and Marjory H. Gray, while paddling in a canoe on Lake Chemong last evening at 5.45 discovered floating on the waters near Denne's boathouse, the body of John Tighe, the veteran farmer who disappeared from the home of his son, Howard Tighe, of the Fifth line of Smith, about 10.30 on Monday forenoon.

The ladies immediately notified some of the cottagers residing near the spot, and the body was brought to the landing. Provincial Constable N. F. Maker, who had been conducting investigations, at once took charge of the body, which was badly decomposed. The bereaved family were at once informed and Mr. Tighe's two sons Howard and William hurried to the scene. The body was removed to Belleghem's funeral parlor.

A number of the men who have been searching indefatigably during the past few days were present and saw their friend and neighbour before he was enclosed in the undertaker's basket.

The location where the body was found is close to the spot where one of the search parties ended their quest on Wednesday, and where some of the younger men indulged in a swim to refresh themselves after their exhausting journey through swamp, wood and meadow. The bottom of the lake dips abruptly at this point and it is possible that the men were actually swimming many feet above the body for which they had sought.

Clairvoyant Consulted

A curious feature of the tragedy arose from a consultation held by two members of one of the search parties with an aged Lindsay woman who enjoys a local reputation as a clairvoyant, possessed of the gift of second sight. The suggestion that this old lady might be able to thow some light on the mystery was made by the wife of a Smith farmer, who is familiar with Lindsay and its environs. By most of the men the proposal was scouted, but two of them, resolved to leave no stone unturned, journeyed to Lindsay and after some difficulty located the old woman, who is almost deaf and is unable to read. From one of the men making the visit, who requests that his name be not divulged, The Examiner has learned what happened at the interview.

The clairvoyant, on being approached by the men, said they had come to consult her about a great trouble that had befallen the family concerned. She said it involved an old man who had been missing from his home; that on leaving the house, he walked towards the north; that his body would be found in a swamp, and the discoverer would be one of his sons. She also said that the dog belonging to the family should be used, as it would lead them along the route followed by the man whom they were endeavoring to trace.

On comparing these statements with the actual facts of the discovery of the body, it will be observed that they were not in every case accurate forecasts of the events that followed, but after some discussion among the searchers, it was decided to employ the services of the dog. When the search was commenced on Monday, some consideration was given to the question of utilizing a dog, and several members called at the Patte and Wolff fox farm to request the services of the bloodhound, used there as a guard, only to learn that the animal had died.

The dog belonging to the Tighe homestead was taken out and the men followed it. The animal at once headed in the direction of the north, skirted the rear of the farm of "Buff" McManus—who it will be remembered, declared on Monday that earlier in the day, he had seen a traveller who resembled the missing man,—lead the eager, excited men to two places, where there were distinct traces, indicating that someone had lain down among the bushes and finally took them to the path leading from Mr. McManus' farm to Chemmong Road.

On reaching this patch, which has been trampled by hundreds of feet during the last few days, the animal seemed to become bewildered, and ceased to lead the way. The question as to whether the dog was guided by the scent, or whether it had followed the old man part of the way to his death is one that is a subject of speculation among the farmers of Smith.

Howard Tighe, son of the missing man, was naturally somewhat sceptical when he heard of the statements made by the clairvoyant, but his feelings may readily be imagined when he saw one of her predictions fulfilled to the letter, and realized that almost in the same breath she had announced that he would be the one to find the body of his unfortunate father. However, this additional shock was spared him.

Many stories have been current during the last few days, which illustrate the prodigious bodily strength, activity and steadiness of nerve that characterized the late Mr. Tighe during his youth. Even when he was advanced in years, he was eager for work and was always ready to help a neighbour at the raising of a barn or any other work that called for more help than could be furnished by any one farm.

Mr. Tighe spent his early years in Dummer where from his youth up he did a considerable amount of pioneer work. The news of the Brenton murder in Dummer, in which a hired man slew the wife and son of his employer—a tragedy of half a century ago which shocked the entire country—was brought to Peterboro by John Tighe, who, riding on horseback, is said to have passed the fugitive unrecognized, on his way to this city to give the tidings that led to the capture of the miscreant twenty-four hours later.

The funeral will be held tomorrow morning at ten o'clock from D. Belleghem's funeral chapel and will be private. The Rev. W. S. Edgar of Gilmour Memorial Church will conduct the service, and interment will be made in Lakefield Cemetery.

CUSTOMS PROBE OFFICERS LEAVE FOR OPENING

O'Connor, Ahern and Sparks Going From Ottawa To Halifax.

'MARGARET' THERE.

Full Crew of Steamer May Be Present at the Investigation.

OTTAWA, August 20 (Canadian Press).—W. F. O'Connor, K.C., joint counsel with R. L. Calder, K.C., of Montreal, for the Royal Commission which will conduct further investigation into the Customs Department, will leave Ottawa tomorrow for Halifax. He will be accompanied by P. T. Ahern, registrar of the Commission, and R. P. Sparks, president of the Commercial Protective Association. Mr. Sparks has been requested by Commissioner Sir Francois Lemieux and counsel to attend in an advisory capacity with respect to possible improvements in the Customs and Excise Service. Mr. Calder is already in Nova Scotia and will be at Halifax for the opening of the inquiry there on Wednesday, August 25.

The Customs steamer "Margaret," it is learned, with her full personnel, will also be at Halifax for the opening. This indicates that a further investigation into the voyages and general conduct of that now famous craft will be made. A. J. Doucet, former member of Parliament for Kent, and also a former member of the Customs Committee of Parliament, is expected to be present.

It is very probable that the observations made by him or others concerning the "Margaret" will be ventilated.

The Halifax sitting on Wednesday is really the opening of the inquiry by the Royal Commissioner. The session already held at Quebec was of a special character, and at its conclusion the Commissioner stated in effect that other matters touching the "Margaret" could be opened up when the inquiry was convened regularly at Quebec.

Report Received.

Sir Henry Drayton, acting Prime Minister, has received the report of Sir Francois Lemieux, Royal Commissioner appointed to investigate the administration of the Department of Customs and Excise on the "Margaret" case. Statements made from the political platform by A. J. Doucet, former M.P. for Kent, N.B., in regard to the Hon. Ernest Lapointe, former Minister of Justice,

A warning was issued this morning by Fire Chief George Gimblett in connection with persons wearing the celluloid eyeshades that have become so popular this summer. Due to their inflammable nature, said Chief Gimblett, people who wear them should take every precaution that they are not exposed to a naked flame of any kihd. Smokers especially, he said, should be extra careful. Some cases in other cities have occurred where the eye shades have become ignited through combustion caused by having them packed too close or exposed to the rays of the sun while on window dispjlay.

POINCARE PLANS DRASTIC MEANS OF FIXING FRANC

Restriction in Importation of Grain and In Use of Home Products.

STRICTEST ECONOMY.

Government Will Consolidate Departments For Purpose of Saving.

PARIS, August 20 (Canadian Press).—The Poincare Cabinet today outlined a drastic programme of restrictions in an effort to prevent the exportation of French money abroad and to restore the franc to some sort of stability.

The restrictions deal with the importation of grain and other products as well as the curtailment in the use of necessities produced within France. Additional limitation of the importation of wheat by the compulsory introduction of other flours in bread is a part of the present campaign.

The Cabinet has appealed to the patriotism of the nation to aid it in its programme and proposes by strict scrutiny of imported products to cut down the amount of necessities brought into the country.

The Ministry plans at the same time to set up machinery to ensure fair prices for all food products and to encourage the strictest economy in private as well as public expenditure.

All the details were not announced to-day, but it is known that the Government will consolidate a number of departments as a measure of economy, and also that restaurant service will be restricted.

Holds Back Development to Handle Facilities of the Port.

IMMEDIATE DECISION

Will be Similar to That of the Head-of-Lakes.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Aug. 20 (Canadian Press) — Claiming that under the present tariff, elevators in Vancouver cannot obtain sufficient revenue to operate successfully and that the present tariffs retard development to grain handling facilities of the port, the private elevators here have applied to the Grain Board of Canada for a new tariff, similar in almost every respect to that in force at the head of the Lakes.

Leslie H. Boyd, K.C., chief commissioner of the Board, together with Commissioners J. Robinson and M. Snow, heard the application yesterday and after a lengthy discussion announced that a decision would be made immediately following the Board's tariff hearings in Winnipeg on August 25. R. P. Stockton, who was appointed by Premier Brownlee to watch Alberta interests, and O. L. McPherson, M. L.A., of Little Bow, Alta., and C. Buchanan, officials of the Alberta wheat pool, opposed the proposed new tariff.

In opening the sitting Mr. Boyd announced that the Vancouver elevators had applied for an increase from one cent to 1 1-4 cents on elevation, the new rate being about equal to that of the head-of-the-lakes.

Other changes requested corresponded also, except in the case of drying which was now proposed to be five cents on tough, and seven cents on damp and wet, per hundred pounds of mixed grain. In the present tariff the rate is simply a three cent charge for grain.

Lieut.-Col. G. H. Kirkpatrick, chairman of the Vancouver Board of Harbor Commissioners, stated that the Harbor Board had originally intended filing a tariff similar to the one of last year and that the board was prepared to handle grain at the old rate. He was satisfied, however, that no private party could exist and pay its way under the old tariff.

Mr. McPherson said the producers wanted to recognize costs and needs, but they had been made out on the basis of Vancouver and not Fort William. There was greater possibility here for revenue from turnover.

E. A. Woodward, manager of the Columbia Elevator here, stated Vancouver could never compare in the matter of turnover, because it was impossible to regulate shipping as closely as that of the lakes.

WAR TAXATION HOLDS CAPITAL

Britain Has No Money For Investment Here at Present.

EAGER TO HELP.

TORONTO, August 20.—Speaking at the luncheon tendered by the city of Toronto yesterday to the visiting British Parliamentarians, Right Hon Sir Evelyn Cecil, M. P., one of the guests, congratulated Ontario on her energy, enterprise and "go-aheadness," expressed the belief that the British Empire, as a whole, was eager to have the Province and the Dominion attain the success of which they were deserving; and opined that the day would inevitably come when British capital would pour into this country to the ertent expected of it.

At the present time there were, said Sir Evelyn, three obstacles in the way of that attainment. Firstly, a great deal of British capital had been "sunk" in Canada in the period of 1910-1912; secondly, exceeding high taxation in Britain accounted for a scarcity of business margins for overseas loans, and lastly, exchange between Britain and Canada had been very much against any money coming from the Old Land to the Dominion. "But don't imagine for a moment," said Sir Evelyn "that the fact that our capital and cash are not coming your way just now is due to any want of confidence in Ontario on the part of the British people."

were investigated at a special sitting of the Commission held in Quebec on the fifth and seventh of this month.

The report sets forth the statement of R. L. Calder K. C., at the opening inquiry to the effect that the investigation had not shown any ground for the allegation that the Margaret was used for "joy cruises," or that Hon. Ernest Lapointe had been a participant in cruises.

In view of this declaration and those of the lawyers, Sir Francis says the obvious course to pursue was to declare the incident closed. He states that he abstains from commenting on the statements made by evidence which completely exonerated Hon. Ernest Lapointe and Hon. Jacques Bureau.

The commissioner expresses appreciation of the spirit which prompted the holding of a speedy investigation of the charges so as to allow truth to be reached as early as possible.

Sir Francis states that he will not make any remarks on the statements made by Counsel at the hearing. The facts elucidated rehabilitate Messrs Lapointe and Bureau. The report deals only with Quebec evidence. Further evidence in regard to the Margaret may be produced when the inquiry continues at Halifax.

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain—How To Treat

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestents are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

Church Picnic.

The United Church Sunday school picnic for the Westwood, South Dummer and Cotesloe circuit, was held on Wednesday afternoon at Birdsall's beach.

Perfect picnic weather and a good crowd added largely to the success of the day. While bathing offered strong inducements to many for relaxation, others tried the more strenuous amusements and indulged in games and races, carrying off prizes which were worth the effort. About 5.30 all sat down to do justice to the special feature of the day—the picnic supper.

During the evening a game of soft ball by the adult ladies and gents was heartily enjoyed both by those taking part and by the onlookers.

Reluctant but happy the pleasure seekers returned home in the gathering dusk after a day well spent at the lake.

MEIGHEN BOOSTS THE FARMER.

all farm products, right up as high as the American tariff to-day and I will say to the rest of the world, you will find it just as hard to get into the Canadian market and compete with our farmers as you make it for us to get into your market. Then I would give Australia concessions in that market just as she has them to-day. How do I know Australia would accept that?. I know because she did sign a treaty along those lines and the commonwealth parliament approved it. But, added Mr. Meighen, the King Government because it needed Progressive votes, had changed the treaty and opened the Canadian farmer to Australian competition. Mr. Meighen spoke of the tariff. He charged that never would Mr. Dunning dare to move at Ottawa the tariff resolution he had supported in the safe haven of the Saskatchewan legislature, he described Liberal orators as shedding "crocodile tears" over the defeat of a dead reciprocity. This wailing and gnashing of teeth about the defeat of reciprocity is just so much humbug, Mr. Meighen added. "In the House last session I challenged the King Government to re-enact the reciprocity treaty of 1911. I challenged any member of the Government ready to re-enact that treaty to stand up and how many stood up?, not one."

Referring to the customs inquiry report Mr. Meighen declared: "If ever a Government of which I am the head has such a conviction against it, a conviction against it by parliament itself, then there will be another leader, this leader will never be asking for your support.

"You are asked to believe, he said on the constitutional issue, "that you have got to call back men censured for malfeasance in office and put them again in office to save our precious constitution."

Mr. Meighen discussed the Governor-General's refusal for dissolution to Mr. Mackenzie King. "The Governor-General," Mr. Meighen said, "took that step before he had ever seen me, before I had one word with him on matters of state. But that conduct of his if it needs justification. I am proud to justify, but it needs no justification at the hands of any man or woman who understands responsible Government It has been said." Mr. Meigen added, "that I was asked if I could carry on. I was not asked such a question. I was merely asked to form a Government. What was needed in discussing the constitution, was constitutional common sense."

C. H. Russell, Conservative candidate in Wetaskinwin urged that what the country needed most was a settled stable government and that government the Conservative party was most able to give.

...DEFENDER OF CIVIL LIBERTY... STRENGTHENER OF LOYALTY . . . PILLAR AND STAY OF DEMOCRATIC GOVERNMENT.

THE TIME TO ACT IS NOW.

The Examiner's advice to electors to make sure that their names are on the voters' lists is given emphasis by the fact that several well-known citizens, who have long lived in the riding have discovered that they are not on the list.

The lists are to be found posted up in each division, or may be examined at the headquarters of the political parties, so that there is no excuse for any voter to fail to protect his franchise.

Next week His Honour Judge Huycke will commence his duties as revising officer, thus affording the final opportunity for citizens whose names may have been omitted to get on the lists.

If a mistake has been made and your name does not appear on the present list, the omission can be attended to by an appearance before Judge Huycke.

After he has finished the revising it will be too late to have names added, so the importance of making sure now does not need to be stressed.

Election day is a very unfortunate time to discover that you cannot exercise your franchise.

THE SWIMMING CAMPAIGN.

The Rotary Club's campaign to provide an opportunity for every non-swimmer in Peterboro to learn the art will be heartily endorsed.

In spite of the advance along this line made in recent years in this city and of the number of people who have learned to swim through the facilities offered by the Y.M.C.A. and the Y.W.C.A., there must be still a large quota of non-swimmers in Peterboro who would welcome an opportunity to learn.

To them the Rotary campaign is commended in the hope that when the details are announced and the swimming courses commence there will be no lack of response on the part of those for whose benefit the drive is planned.

It is obvious that there is nothing in this scheme for the Rotarians; they are merely trying to deal with a situation that they believe requires remedying.

They feel that a knowledge of how to swim would avert many drowning accidents, and that, therefore, as a service club they should endeavour to see that the machinery necessary to make it possible for many non-swimmers to be trained is provided.

BUY THEM NOW.

The attention of the people of Peterboro and district is called to the fact that next week the advance sale of tickets for the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition will be held.

The usual admission charge to the Exhibition is 35c, but by buying the advance tickets at 4 for $1.00 a considerable saving can be effected, and at the same time the Exhibition directors will have some working capital available.

This year's Exhibition will continue for a week. There will be many new features, more to see than ever, and most people will want to make at least two or three visits to the Exhibition Grounds during the week.

The public will be exercising real economy, therefore, in taking advantage of the advance sale, which for those who buy the strips reduces the admission charge from 35c to 25c.

Peterboro's big Exhibition promises to have a banner year, and last year's attendance record of 36,000 people, it is confidently expected, will be surpassed if the weather conditions are at all favourable.

ONE REASON FOR APATHY.

The press in various sections of the country complains of general apathy and lack of interest among the people in the Federal election.

Locally it must be admitted that these complaints are justified.

With voting less than four weeks away, there is little indication that we are in the midst of a general election.

Possibly the fact that this is vacation time for urban folk and a very busy season for the farmers, may account in some measue for the failure of the public to get excited over the contest.

But for the major reason the politicians need not look any further than themselves.

There is such an evident greed for office, such a ready desire to attack the other fellow, and such a scant attention paid to really big issues—The Examiner includes all parties in this charge—that it is little wonder the man on the street fails to get enthused over the beating of party drums and tom-toms and the unfurling of party banners.

In every party there are shining targets for the speaker who delights to aim shafts of ridicule at such marks, and in every party there seems to be an overabundance of speakers of that type.

But principles are bigger than candidates and policies are more important than personalities.

In deciding what policies offer the best hope for the progress and welfare of the country the candidates will have to be taken "run-of-the-mine," as it were, and political speakers who have nothing better to offer than verbal assaults upon some of their opponents are contributing little to the success of their cause and nothing at all to help the electors decide how to vote.

CRIME.

Two motor cars raced madly up Broadway towards Grand Circus Park in Detroit, at 2.40 in the morning. More than 15 revolver shots were fired between the occupants of the machines, running abreast. An underworld feud is believed by the police to have provoked the affair. As a result three men were taken into custody—and later released on habeas corpus proceedings! All have police records.

Here is the really sensational part of the incident: One of the arrested men, Michael Dipisa, aged 29, is awaiting trial on a charge of shooting and slaying Earl D. Maher in Cadillac Square, March 26, 1925. It will be his second trial. Dipisa, once confined to the Indiana reformatory for conspiracy to commit felony, has been at liberty on a $15,000 bond awaiting his trial for murder.

Whether or not Dipisa had anything to do with the early morning gun exercises on Broadway, think of a legal system that permits any man—and particularly one who has been in trouble before—to be out on bail while facing such a serious charge as that of murder! And note, also, that the crime with which this man is charged was committed on March 26, 1925. It is stated that Dipisa is awaiting a second trial. Presumably the jury disagreed in the first instance.

Serious-minded Americans are frankly worried at the general contempt for law and order that is so boldly exhibited across the line. They have reason to be; things have come to a stage that must create alarm in the breast of every man who believes in a well-ordered society and in the thorough protection of life and property. That life and property are no longer safe in the United States is generally admitted. The machinery of the law has broken down lamentably. The result is a condition which comes perilously near to anarchy.

In Canton, Ohio, a few weeks ago, the editor of a newspaper was brutally murdered on his own residential premises—a victim, apparently, of gunmen associated with underworld interests that the newspaperman had courageously attacked through the columns of his publication. The murder was the answer of the criminal element to those who fought it, to those who believe that criminals should be brought to justice and crime curbed. With the killing of Mr. Mellett, the newspaperman in question, public opinion has become thoroughly aroused and a most determined attempt is being made to bring about the arrest and punishment of those responsible for the dastardly deed. It seems, however, that some outstanding incident of this kind must take place before public indifference can be overcome and real results secured. Perhaps Mr. Mellett, in death, will be of even greater service to his community than in life. Certainly this will be the case if the brutal killing of which he was the victim serves to focus public attention upon the seriousness of conditions, and leads, eventually, to the rounding up of the evil band that appear to have terrorized Canton for a long time back.

Detroit, Chicago and other great American centres have been having their own troubles in recent years. The lawless element have secured the upper hand. The usual thing, of course, is to blame the police. In many cases, probably, they are to blame, but, as a leading American public man pointed out the other day, the absence of inexorable laws for the punishment of wrong-doers is more responsible. Michigan, for instance, labors under the great handicap of having no capital punishment for murder. Every potential murderer in Michigan knows that no matter how vile his crime he will not be hanged, he will not be electrocuted, and that there is always an excellent chance, if he is convicted at all, to serve some years and then be paroled. Chicago, in the State of Illinois, provides for capital punishment, but it is rarely used. Any State that allows killers of the Loeb and Leopold type to escape with prison sentences cannot believed to be using its capital punishment law. Under these and similar conditions elsewhere, is it any wonder that there is little respect for human life, that criminals grow bolder and bolder, that the underworld is almost completely "out of hand?"

The United States will control crime—as Great Britain controls it, as Canada controls it—when criminals are properly punished for their sins against society.—Border Cities Star.

RURAL ONTARIO'S CHANCE.

(From The Brantford Expositor.)

Possibilities of extension of technical or vocational training to the rural districts of Ontario on a worth-while scale are revealed in the annual report of the Provincial Director of Technical Education, D. A. Campbell. He says, "It is becoming known that many of the courses of study available in cities and towns are suited to the needs of rural communities," and adds that the difficulty of obtaining well qualified instructors is the only serious obstacle. But even this, he shows, may be overcome, and he tells how the Boards of Education in the villages of Beeton, Bond Head, Bradford, Cookstown and Tottenham combined to hold day and night classes in motor mechanics. They engaged a teacher to give a day and an evening each week in each of these villages for ten weeks. This man, himself a first-class motor mechanic, carried part of his equipment with him and was able to secure the rest from local people who interested themselves in the project. He gave both theoretical and practical training and his classes were well attended, a large number of the pupils being persons already employed, but, who, with the aid of their employers, were able to arrange to attend either day or night sessions. The classes were amazingly popular. In no cases was the enrolment less than 45, and in one it was 77, with attendance well up to the enrolment.

The scores of inquiries reaching the Department of Education from rural points respecting all kinds of vocational training indicate a wide opportunity, and it is understood that there will be definite action taken to meet it. There does not seem to be any reason why, in our education scheme, any privilege open to the city youth or adult should be denied those of the rural communities, in these days of easy transit and communication. There are obvious difficulties in establishing a scheme that will meet the majority of requirements, but with such co-operation as that shown by the villages referred to it would be a poor Department of Education that could not overcome them.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 20.—(Canadian Press).—The export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market yesterday was dull and featureless. The domestic trade was also quiet but prices for oats were steady. Corn was weaker and prices were reduced one cent per bushel with American No. 3 yellow quoted at 86 1-2 cents per bushel.

The demand for spring and winter wheat grades of flour was limited to small lots but prices were unchanged.

The market for millfeed was active and the undertone was firm. The movement of standard grades of rolled oats was small and prices were unchanged.

Considerable business was done in eggs and prices ruled steady. The receipts were 1,352 cases.

Prices for all qualities of butter were firmly maintained in spite of a small enquiry from local and export sources. The receipts were 2,291 packages.

An easier feeling developed in the cheese market and prices were reduced a fraction. The trade volume was small. The receipts were 6,722 boxes.

The demand for beans continued steady and the tone of the market was steady. Car lots of choice white hand-picked were quoted at $2.25 per bushel, and broken lots at $2.35 to $2.45 per bushel.

CHICAGO GRAINS

CHICAGO, Aug. 20 (Canadian Press).—Enlarged export buying, together with an advance in cash premiums paid to obtain wheat available for immediate use, gave considerable firmness yesterday to the wheat market here. Closing quotations on wheat were irregular at 1-2c net decline to 5-8 gain, with corn 3-4 to 1 3-4 down; oats unchanged to 1-4 to 3-8 off, and provisions varying from 5c setback to an equal advance.

It was estimated that exporters bought as much as 900,000 bushels of North American wheat yesterday for shipment to Europe and that the bulk of the wheat purchased was United States red winter. Furthermore, southwest advices said leading export houses were scrambling for wheat in the country. Meanwhile, the cash wheat trading basis here was 1 1-2c a bushel for choice grades which were in keen demand by domestic mills. Persistent complaints of excessive rains northwest impairing the quality of spring wheat and causing delay to harvest operations had more or less marked effect.

An outstanding feature was an estimate that the French wheat crop this season will amount to only 220,000,000 bushels, against 329,000,000 bushels last year. Indications of a revival of export demand and especially of a better inquiry from France yesterday were given special notice on account of unlooked for downward trend shown by wheat values at Liverpool and because of reports that the French government had decided to reimpose a wheat duty today and to increase the admixture of coarse grain bread flour.

Posting of more corn here as out of condition, exercised a depressing influence of corn values and so, too, did the generally favorable crop outlook. Oats eased down with corn.

Provisions responded to upturns in the hog market but then reacted owing to increased offers to sell.

CHICAGO CATTLE.

CHICAGO, Aug. 20 (Canadian Press).—Cattle 6,000; fed steers and yearlings strong to 15c higher; trade stimulated by small receipts, stock strong to 25 higher, top yearlings, 10.75; heavy steers 9.85; bulls strong; vealers around 25 higher at 13.00 to 14.50.

Hogs 15,000; top 13.90; bulk desirable 160 to 210 pound averages 13.40 to 13.80; good and choice 240 to 280 pound butchers 12.50 to 13.25; desirable packing sows mostly 10.50; bulk strong weight slaughter pigs 12.75 to 13.25.

Sheep 19,000; fat lambs steady to 25 higher; considering lighter sorts, bulk western 14.00 to 14.50; one lot late 14.65; heavy buck lambs around 12.00; culls steady at 9.00 to 9.50; sheep weak to 25 lower, bulk fat ewes 5.50.

MR. PECK AND MR. GORDON.

Mr. Gordon, no doubt much to his surprise, found Mr. Peck an easy victim of the bait he threw out when he charged Mr. Peck with voting against the budget and against the highly-desirable things amongst others less desirable which it contained. In order to enable Mr. Peck to qualify and explain his denial so that it would not look so impossible, I wrote a letter to The Examiner. Had Mr. Peck said, as I suggested, and what every other member of Parliament says, when he votes against a budget that he had to vote against the good things because of the bad things mixed up with it (in this case the low tariff), everybody would have accepted his explanation. Moreover, I doubt if Mr. Gordon would deny that had he been in Mr. Peck's shoes in a similar case, he would have voted against a wicked Tory budget. But no. Possessed by some strange fatuity, even after my warning, Mr. Peck persisted in saying that he did not vote against the budget (and the good things contained in it). Then to make matters worse, if possible, he said that as no one could get a letter about it from the Clerk of the House, the sad affair could not be cleared up. Surely everybody who knows his right hand from his left knows that the whole matter is chronicled in Hansard. But Mr. Gordon, finding Mr. Peck an easy victim, persisted in dramatically demanding proofs that were already officially on record and in the hands of the thousands who receive Hansard. Mr. Peck replies that he cannot get proofs, and to make his statement stronger he said that the Clerk of the House was an impartial non-partisan official, and that he could get nothing on the subject from him of course. I at once saw that Mr. Peck was determined to get himself into trouble, at least so far as his high standing as a sensible and honorable man in the community was concerned. Just think of it. The proof on the official record, and yet Mr. Peck keeps on saying that there is none, and that there couldn't be any because he did not so vote. What then are we to do? We must either think Mr. Peck evasive or incapable. I can't bring myself to think either, but we all make fools of ourselves more or less sometimes, and I offer this suggestion as another loophole for Mr. Peck. Let him say that he had one of these attacks when he made his denial, because if he does not say something in accordance with common-sense and fact he will be put down as obstinate, beyond hope or desirous of getting out of a dangerous hole by a statement that is not true. For goodness sake let some kind friend of Mr. Peck guide him in this matter. Mr. Gordon has got him now on two prongs of his fork, and if this "controversy" keeps on it will end in an explosion of laughter and perhaps worse. A man who aspires to represent us must face the music, and if he can't face it let him do anything rather than turn his back on it, and compromise his position as a man and a member. It is all so juvenile and childish, not to say infantile, to me, that I cannot understand Mr. Peck's attitude at all. I am quite sure that even Mr. Duffus himself would like to see this extremely unhappy episode brought to some sort of a conclusion. Moreover, I know and Mr. Gordon has shown that a letter can be got from the Clerk of the House. I hope Mr. Peck did not wish to perplex us on that point also because all he had to do to back himself up was to write to the Clerk and have the Clerk say, as Mr. Peck says he would, that he could not possibly give Mr. Peck the desired information.

Somebody ought to publish the budget which Mr. Peck is charged with opposing and the amendment for which he voted. It is only fair that this should be done.

"CONVERSATIONAL IRRITANTS"

In a letter over which the editor of the New York Tribune puts the head, "Conversational Irritants," a correspondent of that newspaper writes:

"There are three seeming trifles that insidiously creep into our talk and mar what would otherwise be good conversation. They are 'see,' 'listen' and 'you know.'

"Why not leave out the 'see,' and thereby presume that the hearer comprehends what is being said? It is distinctly uncomplimentary to his intelligence to ask a listener whether he understands or not.

"Why ask anyone to whom you are speaking to 'listen' to you? Give him at least half the time for talking,then assume that he will hear you.

"When relating circumstances or giving information, why say 'you know?' If the hearer knows, why tell him? If you know he does not know, why say 'you know'? These expressions imply discourtesy, and should be banished."

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

AN AID TO ANY ONE

Instinct rather than reason may prompt the association of beauty with truth and goodness, for beauty touches the soul of man.

Virtue is seemingly more fair when it is found in someone who is beautiful. On the other hand, that which is beautiful may not always be good, but the good is always beautiful.

Beauty inspires, beauty sustains. Though the ultimate and the highest aim of the artist is beauty, and understanding and appreciation of beauty helps an ordinary human a lot in just commonplace living and working.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

THE QUICKER UNDERSTANDING

I think the tree that bears the storm
Knows best when days begin to warm,
Catches the promise of the spring
Sooner than any other thing.
I think the heart that knows a pain
From every hurt this much may gain—
A quicker understanding when
The world begins to bloom again.

We never know how much our bliss
Until some little joy we miss,
But after grief, and winter's snow
How much we feel, how much we know!
As seasons make more glad the year,
'Tis absence makes the absent dear
And gives returning steps a sound
The always happy have not found.

If you have suffered deeply, you
Know depths that others never knew,
And you, when comes some happier time,
Know heights the others never climb.
To him who walked among the snows
More crimson is the crimson rose,
And gain is made more good by loss,
The crown more splendid by the cross.

Who never fails may never guess
The joy triumphant of success,
Among the rich the richest he
Who knew the sting of poverty.
Whatever music makes the spring,
Whatever songs the soul may sing,
The sweetest melody is heard
By hearts whose depths have all been stirred.

AIRPLANE PROGRESS

By Dr. Frank Crane.

Mr. Ford in a recent article tells what he is doing to make airplanes as safe and cheap as motor cars.

This economic necessity is being used for the perfection of this new vehicle of travel.

This is much better than government subsidy or support.

It is better for any industry to grow naturally and to grow commercially by the law of supply and demand than to attempt to force its progress by government aid.

Ford said he is looking for two things—ability to accomplish the most ton miles per horsepower, and the ability to stay in the air the most hours per day.

If he can do these things he will make the airplane reliable and useful, and capital will be attracted to its manufacture.

First he wants a real airplane engine, air cooled and without electric ignition, if possible.

Second, he wants an absolutely dependable navigation apparatus.

He is working on these points and it is only a matter of time until he succeeds.

He commenced making airplanes in April, 1925, so he has had no more than a year of experience with all-metal planes. During this time the planes have been flying daily except Sunday two hundred and sixty miles to Chicago and return, and one hundred and twenty-seven miles to Cleveland and return.

Not a single accident has occurred since this service began and the planes ordinarily arrive on time.

This statement must be modified, however, by the fact that Ross Kirkpatrick, an aviator on one of the machines, was killed in a forced landing in the outskirts of Chicago during a storm on May 18, 1926.

Experiments have shown that thus far the cost of transportation can be brought well within commercial limits and the service can be made speedy and reliable.

When it is demonstrated that the airplane is commercially useful it will be rapidly developed and be easily converted into an instrument of defense in case it is needed.

Why Has Goodyear Only 2500 Tire Dealers in Canada?

THERE are some 10,000 tire dealers in Canada. Why, then, with Goodyears by far the largest selling tires in Canada, as they are throughout the world, do not more dealers sell Goodyear Tires?

It is because Goodyear has found that the best 2,500 tire dealers in Canada can render more service and at lower cost to motorists if the sale of Goodyear Tires is confined to them.

Hence the Goodyear Selected Dealer. These 2,500 dealers are amply enough to serve every motorist in Canada. And the advantages of this policy are very real.

For the Goodyear Company it means fewer calls for salesmen, less travelling expense, less invoicing and shipping, better credit risks. These savings help to keep Goodyear quality highest at no higher prices.

For the dealer, it means a more concentrated stock, lower investment, faster turnover, an adequate income without charging excessive prices. And he can afford to give real service to his customers.

For the motorist, it means low prices for the best tires this company has ever produced. It means dealing with a tire merchant who is intensely interested in the mileage rendered by Goodyear Tires—who has an ample stock of sizes—who has the experience to help you get the lowest-cost, most care-free tire use you ever enjoyed.

No wonder more people ride on Goodyear Tires than any other kind.

There is a Goodyear Selected Dealer near you. Look for the Goodyear Selected Dealer sign.

STAND FIRM AS REGARDS TERMS OF COAL DISPUTE

Miners Resist Eight Hour Legislation of the Coal Owners.

NO FURTHER AHEAD.

Will Reconsider Wage Question After Industry Is Re-organized.

LONDON, August 20 (Canadian Press).—When the representatives of the miners and coal owners met yesterday to continue the negotiations which it was hoped might bring a settlement to the long-standing controversy, it was found that the parties to the dispute were [illegible] from agreement as in the early days of the struggle.

The owners are standing firmly [illegible] eight-hour legislation, which the miners just as firmly are determined to resist. On their part the miners will agree only to reconsideration of the wages question after steps are taken to reorganize the industry.

What the next step will be is still unknown, but an announcement was made last night which indicates that Premier Baldwin had retired from any further personal effort to secure a settlement.

For some time the Premier's supporters have been urging upon him the need of relaxation after the severe strain of the last Parliamentary session, combined with his efforts in the coal strike, but Mr. Baldwin had postponed his holiday so that he might be on hand if wanted during recess. Now it is officially announced he has decided to start at the end of the week for Aix-Les-Baines, and according to his present plans he will be away for three weeks.

It is understood that the Prime Minister's decision is due to representations made by his Ministerial colleagues, who are anxious about his health. The Minister of Labor, Sir Arthur Steel-Maitland, has been delegated to act should the coal situation need governmental sanction, and he will remain in England throughout the Parliamentary recess.

The outcome of yesterday's conference was communicated to the Premier, but it is understood it is not the Government's intention to intervene further unless a definite request comes from the disputing parties.

A meeting of the Council of the Trade Union Congress and the Miners' Executive body adopted a resolution urging all trade union workers to redouble their efforts to assist the miners and to call for similar assistance from the International Federation of Trade Unions.

SAY MILLIONAIRE MURDERED GIRL

French Police Arrest Broker For Strangling Young Woman.

PARIS, Aug. 20 —The preliminary denouement of a millionaire stock exchange operator who murdered pretty telephone operator a week ago near Meaux came last night with his arrest on the Boulevard Montparnasse, in Paris.

The prisoner's name is Guyot. After committing the crime he tried to hoodwink the police by writing letters announcing his suicide. Then he wrote other letters purporting to be the confession of a taxi driver relating to the murder of the girl, a Mlle. Beulaguet, in a fit of madness.

The victim's body was found beside a blazing haystack outside the village of Fresne, where she had dined with Guyot an hour previously She had been strangled, and the murderer evidently set fire to the hay to cover his crime. Jewels found on her body enabled the restaurant keeper to identify her, while the murderer's name, was learned through a garage in Paris, where he had left his motor car when he returned.

On the night of the murder, Guyot brazenly took the girl's hat and mantle to her rooms, explaining to neighbours that she had been in an automobile accident.

The pair had been friends nearly a year, and the only motive the police can see is that Guyot intended to marry some one else, and feared the pretty twenty-year-old girl's opposition.

Island In Bering Sea In Volcanic Eruption

CORDOVA, Alaska, August 20 (Canadian Press).—Bogoslof Island, which on May 18, 1796, rose from Bering Sea, 1,000 miles south-west of here, and alongside which another islet appeared in an eruption September 1, 1910, has been in volcanic eruption for 24 hours.

In these islets, so small that the only indication of them on maps is their printed name, the Yokohama Maru, a Japanese steamer, Tuesday observed "a great eruption." For a year renewed volcanic activity has been observed in the Aleutian Islands, stretching from the mainland of Alaska, 1,200 miles across the north end of the Pacific Ocean almost to Asia.

WHEAT HARVEST NEAR BURNBRAE

Quality of Grain For This Year Above the Average.

IDEAL WEATHER.

BURNBRAE, Aug. 20. — Harvest is in full swing at Burnbrae now and the threshers have already been at work. Mr. Will Fry was the first out when he threshed some 370 bushels of wheat for Mr. Fred Hay on August 13. While the yield per acre is not quite up to the emark, due to spring killing, the quality of the grain has seldom been surpassed. Practically all of the fall grain and barley has been stoud in the barns and local farmers are busy with the oat crop which is one of the heaviest on record so far as straw is concerned. The grain yield is problematical as yet, as rust is quite prevalent in some areas. While rust will probably not affect the yield or quality of the early ripened grain to any great extent, farmers are not taking any chances and are trying to complete cutting as speedily as possible even cutting the late oats quite green preferring to have them harden in the stook rather than rust as they ripen in their natural state. On the whole, the grain crop here should be better than the average for the last decade.

Corn and roots have made great strides in the last three weeks and local silo-owners begin to see visions of full silos again this fall. Indeed, growth has been so rapid that many corn fields did not receive the intended cultivation with the result that the growth of weeds is keeping pace with the corn. A common complaint among Burnbrae farmers ano those of other districts as well, is the fact that weeds are one of the heaviest crops ever seen. This is due to the cold spring when crop growth was slow and weeds such as quack grass, Canada and Sow Thistle came along very fast. A good deal of after harvest cultivation and summer fallowing will be necessary to undo the harm caused by weeds this season.

Frequent rains have made good growths of pasture and after grass on the hay fields, with the result that the milk flow holds up well. Cheese prices have been down below the 17 cent mark and many farmers have decided that grain feeding would be an unprofitable venture.

Wide awake, progressive farmers will always take time to attend anything along educational lines a. l several Ayrshire enthusiasts from this district attended the annual picnic and field day of the Menie Ayrshire Breeders Club, held at Mr. Hector Wood's farm, near Ivanhoe, on Tuesday. Events of this kind are worth while as much can be learned in the judging classes and the picnic part of the day provides the necessary relaxation from duty which every farmer needs.

SOUGHT IN RIVER FOUND ON TRAIN

WAS GOING WEST.

GUELPH, Aug. 20.—Following a search that had been carried on since Tuesday night, when she suddenly disappeared, Lillian Webster, 15-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Webster, 110 Duke Street, was located on a C.N.R. excursion train on the way west yesterday morning, near Horne Payne, Algoma, and turned over to the police of that town.

The girl left home on Tuesday night, leaving behind a note to the effect that she intended to drown herself in the river. Her bicycle with a like note attached to it was found the following day on the right of way of the Toronto suburban railway a few yards from the Speed River. Police and members of the fire department were notified and the stream was dragged until dark.

Yesterday when the search party was about to resume operation, word was received to the effect that she had been located. No reason is known for the girl's strange actions.

THREE KILLED AS RESULT OF RIOTS IN MEXICO CITY

GOVERNOR WOUNDED.

Gangs Stood on Opposite Sidewalks and Shot Across Street.

MEXICO CITY, August 20. — (Canadian Press).—Three deputies were killed in the business section of Mexico City yesterday in a street battle, and several bystanders were seriously wounded.

Governor Tomas Garrido, of the State of Tabasco, was among the wounded. Two of the dead deputies were Pedro Luiz and Marcos Diaz, both from Tabasco.

The fighting was the outcome of bitter rivalry between political factions in Congress. The partisans met about 1.30 yesterday afternoon in front of the Iturbide Hotel, in Madero Avenue, and without preliminaries began shooting.

It is estimated that from seven to twenty deputies participated in the battle, the factions standing on opposite sidewalks and shooting across the street, which was crowded with automobiles and pedestrians. A woman, not identified, passing in an automobile was wounded.

The fighting took place next door to one of the fashionable American tea-rooms. There were American women in the place at the time and others were entering, and bullets whizzed round them.

The people in the streets were panic-stricken and women rushed screaming into a place of shelter. Many shots were exchanged, and the outseretched bodies of the slain deputies afforded a gruesome sight.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 20 (Canadian Press).—Pilot Officer R. M. Parr Harrin was reported killed in a crash or burned to death in the wreckage of his plane after a crash at Mile 185 on the Hudson Bay Railway yesterday. The pilot was engaged in his regular duties with the forestry patrol.

Squadron Leader Johnson, R.C.A.F., received a report of the crash at his office here, He said that there might be hope that the pilot jumped from the plane before the crash and was carried miles from the accident by his parachute. The report stated that the charred wreckage of the plane had been found, but up to an early hour last night confirmation or details were lacking.

JAPANESE USE CLOTHES FROM EAST AND WEST

Men in Kimonos With Modern Straw Hats Common Sight.

MANY COSTUMES.

Those Who Wear Strictly Western Clothing Carry Fans.

TOKIO, Aug. 20. — The foreign visitor in Tokio with a sense of the ludicrous can provide unbounded amusement for himself by merely walking the streets and studying the strange mixture of East and West which is expressed in the personal attire and customs of the mass of 2,000,000 people who reside in this largest city of the Orient.

Japanese women for the most part continue to dress very strictly in Japanese style. The high head dress with its loops upon loops of shiny black hair, the flowered sotton kimono (silk is worn almost not at all in summer and very little at any time, except by persons of the highest class) with the gay colored sash and wooden sandals are universal varying only in quality according to the affluence of the wearer. But Japanese men and children of both sexes wear a most amazing variey of apparel and very often the weirdest sort of mixture of occidental and oriental garb.

From my window at the moment for example I see a Japanese youth playing catch with an American base ball and fielder's glove. He is clad in a rather short black kimono topped by a straw hat of the most approved American style, even to a red and blue striped band. Beneath the kimono his legs are bare down to the ankle, high cotton socks and wooden sandals.

A commonly seen costume of the working class consists of a jacket, cut very much in the style of a western sack coat except that it is more skimppy, skin tight white cotton drawers ending at the knees. bare legs and wooden sandals. The first impression of the western observer is that the man has forgetten his pants.

Just Some Boys.

Near a building under construction I saw a sand pile in which a dozen small boys of perhaps eight or nine years of age were playing. Their attire originally had been of the variety indigeous to American city boys of the same age, cotton shirts and cotton knee-length trousersr. Before entering the sand however, each one removed his trousers and folded them carefully against the wall, their remaining garb consisting of shirts with tails waving in the breeze and short cotton underdrawers that were anything but all enveloping.

A man riding a bicycle in an American straw hat, kimono and wooden sandals is a frequent sight and in five minutes spent on any thoroughfare one can see almost any conceivable combination of musculine clothing.

Even in ceremonial dress, among the higher class, there seems to be no very difinite standard of attire. In a group of Japanese men and women, assembled for a banquet at the leaidng hotel is Tokio, for example, all sorts of costumes were worn by the men. One elderlry and distiniguished appearing gentleman in this group wore a long tailed black dress coat with the usual stiff shirt and white tie accompaniment, but beneath it were a pair of palm beach trousers and tan shoes. Another in the party wore a frock afternoon suit, while several wore in the conventional black kimonos.

A Japanese, however immaculate he may be in all other regards usually adds something to his equipage that gives it a touch of the incongruous. For instance, in the governmental and banking districts one sees numerous men, perfectly well dresed in American styles, bobbing along in the tiny two-wheeled riskshaws, wielding small black fans. There is something about a fan, carried by a man walking or riding in a public street that does not accord with the western style of dress, whereeas a kimonoed Japanese riding a rickshaw holding a parasol in one hand and a fan in the other, seems the entirely natural thing.

The Why Of It.

The Japanese explain that this heterogeneous mixture of attire is due primarily to the transition from eastern to western ways that is going on in the whole nation. The traditional Japanese kimono, they point out, is unfitted to most of the occupations that have been imported from the western world. A railroad engiher or trainman would be at a disadvantage garbed in skirts and the same is true of structural iron workers, ship builders, , pole-climbing telegraph and telephone linemen, chauffeurs and a multitude of like trades. As each new device of western mechanical efficiency has been imported to replace the hand work that was universal in old Japan the tendency has been to import with them the style of dress indigenous to workingmen in the nation from which the particular applance was drawn. Thus characteristics of dress, peculiar to Americans, English, French, Italians, Belgians and other nations were imported and all scrambled together with the native Japanese. From the conglomeration some day may emerge styles tempered by the western influence but which still may be recognized as distinctively Japanese, but that time is not yet.

Some of the strange mixtures of dress also have been caused by the difficulty experienced in securing western clothes. Importation of wearing apparel is severely limited by the tariff laws, drafted with the general purpose of compelling Japanese, as far as practicable, to make everything they need for themselves. At best anything in the way of clothing made abroad is to be had only at a greatly inflated price and the money that the average Japanese has to spend on his apparel is very litle. Hence the varying approximations of western apparel that are in evidence.

He Is Wonderful

A particular citizen, for example, may achieve a western coat and vest but be minus trousers and western shoes. He sees no reason in this state of affairs to refrain from wearing his western finery, so long as the omissions can be supplied with the orthodox Japanese skin-tight cotton drawers and wooden sandals. Straw hats in the western style are very much in vogue and they are worn apparently with entire disregard of the other articles of dress that may accompany them.

Woolen clothing, shoes and other western apparel now are manufactured in Japan in considerable quantity but their producers have yet to attain the efficiency of American ready-made clothing makers either in cut or workmanship. It should not be assumed that the Japanese gentleman is badly dressed because he is careless as to his appearance. On the contrary there is every evidence that he strives very hard to achieve perfection in this as in every other practice that his sartorial effort so far has been his sartorial efefrt so far has been severely handicapepd both by lack of any definite standard of dress toward which to aim and by lack of the necessary materials.

Foreigners of long residence in Japan declare that the tendency toward adopting western ways of living goes far deeper than the matter of clothing. Wheat, which is imported from Manchuria and Korea in large quantities, is rapidly coming to divide with rice the function of staple diet. Meat is being eaten in increasing quantity and other articles of western food are being used. Western furniture is slowly but surely making its way into the Japanese home.

Chairs and tables everywhere are in vogue in business offices. Typewriters and adding machines can not be operated very handily while sitting on the floor. The equipment of offices in the western style has proven as necessary an accompaniment to the installation of western industrial and commercial systems as engines and dynamos and other power equipment in the factories.

Japanese men, who sit on chairs all day long, are finding the mats on which they squat in their homes not entirely satisfactory. A Japanese business man, who has been much abroad, said that he now finds it almost as difficult as a foreigner to sit for long on a floor mat with his legs double under him, and that Japanese men who spend much of their time sitting in chairs in the daytime are rapidly losing the art of making themselves comfortable on the floor in their homes. This is becoming more so with those of the younger generation who from childhood are being employed under foreign conditions.

Mental Outlook

Even more pronounced, though vastly more difficult to discern and analyze, must be the change in mental outlook that is accompanying these alterations in physical things. That changes in thought are necessary to meet the changing econmic methods is plainly evident. The new nationalism of Japan has wiped out the family system which was the basis of the entire social order before the feudal government of the shogunate was replaced 58 years ago. The newly enacted universal manhood suffrage law, which goes even farther in the process of leveling the classes of Japanese citizens; the spread of education; the economic struggle attendant on an industrialized society which makes child marriages, arranged by the parents, no longer practicable in many cases, and which has destroyed many others of the most cherished social practices, are factors contributing to this change in method of thought.

However hard the heads of the government may struggle to maintain perfect unity of the nation, in mind as in physical things, it is apparent that the changing order is tending to accentuate individualism and the demand for freedom of thought and action that are indigenous to the Anglo-Saxon nations after which the new Japan is being modeled.

The recent proposal by Mr. Okada, the minister of education, of a law designed to control "dangerous thoughts" is evidence that the domestic authorities see cause for worry in the mental state of the nation any any doubt as to the activity of the Japanese popular mind will be dispelled by a tour of the hundreds of book stores that are scattered everywhere in the shopping districts. These stores almost invariably are crowded with both men and women busily probing among the book stacks. Newspapers with daily circulations mounting into the millions are only another evidence of a thinking public.

Do Their Own Thinking.

In the past for the most part Japanese thinking has been done inclusively for the whole nation by a little group of men at the top. There are abounding bases for the belief that in the not far distant future mass opinion as represented in the teeming millions of Japanese workers, who to-day are reading and thinking to an extent rarely if ever equalled by any people in the history of the world, will assume the reins and direct the national destiny. As the people of the new Japan work out for themselves standards of apparel and the other material elements to accord with their changed conditions, it seems inevitable that they have in the making also a new intellectual and political order that may mean much for the future of the world.

FOREST FIRES OUT.

But Rangers Are Watching Area Where Prospectors Are Working.

TORONTO, August 20 (Canadian Press).—All the forest fires which have been burning in the Pine Ridge district of Northern Ontario during the past few weeks have been extinguished but forestry officials are watching closely the narrow lake area because of the large number of prospectors in that region, according to a special despatch from Pine Ridge, Ontario.

NEW ENTENTE IN EAST EUROPE

Rumania, Jugo-Slavia and Greece Ahe United Against Bulgaria.

BULGARIA WEAKENED.

BERLIN, Germany. — Since the world war the little entente, composed of Czechoslovakia, Jugoslavia and Roumania, has dominated the Balkans and has formed a political connection between the Balkans and the west European powers. The little entente was formed because of the existence of a common enemy—Hungary.

Now another, although a weaker, little entente has arisen. This includes Roumania, Jugoslavia and Greece and is directed against Bulgaria.

The new alliance is none too strong. Probably it would not survive so real a test as war. But it is based upon the results of the war, which game Roumania rich territory, made Jugloslavia powerful and gave Greece a mighty ally in Great Britain. Bulgaria was pared down until not much of it remained. Its population is less than 5,000,000 and its army about 15,000. Roumania, Jugoslavia and Greece together could start 500,000 men marching tomorrow.

Bulgaria is obliged to pay heavy reparations. Foolishly it began to pay without obtaining a reduction. A large and expensive commission sits in Sofia to see that the army is kept down at the figures set in Paris.

Loan Proposal Causes Uproar.

In the light of these facts one wonders how the larger and more powerful neighbors of Bulgaria find so much in that country to send notes about. Just now a hullabaloo is being raised because the league of nations has recognized the fact that Bulgaria needs a loan to provide shelter and occupation for the more than 300,000 refugees expelled from the new little entente countries. The loan has been approved and British bankers are ready to advance the funds. The new little entente countries are noisily objecting.

Bulgaria has been uniustly treated. Roumania obtained the pufely Bulgar territory of the Dobrogea on the Black Sea at the mouth of the Danube. Not satisfied with obtaining the territory—and its rich crops—the Roumanians want to dispossess the Bulgars. They have declared all old land titles invalid and have announced that the Roumanian Government will issue new titles, provided the Bulgar farmers cede one-third of their land to the state. This confiscation did not appeal to the Bulgars, who feared that the seizure of one-third would be followed by the seizure of the other two-thirds. They resisted. The determined attempts of the Roumanian Government to colonize the Dobrogea with Roumanians has caused constant friction. Gendarmes and police evict the Bulgars but not without difficulty. Often there are armed clashes and blood flows.

Why Greeks and Serbs Are In.

Greece also claims good reason to join the alliance against Bulgaria. The peace treaty allowed Bulgaria an outlet to the sea. The natural outlet is at Dedeagatch, in Greece. The Greeks do not intend to carry out this clause of the treaty; hence they wish to keep the Bulgars down, and in financial and economic difficulties.

Jugoslavia has a special reason for joining in the alliance. Conscious of being the strongest country in the Balkans, it is still not strong enough to cope with Italy. Italy has pressed its way into the Balkans and is trying to construct a ring around Jugoslavia. But the Italian policy is too scattered. Italy can keep the Macedonians stirred up and make a working agreement with Roumania, but Italy has a weak hold on Greece, Bulgaria and Hungary.

Jugoslavia also is looking for an outlet to the sea—through Saloniki. The treaty provided for a Jugoslav free zone in Greek Saloniki, but thus far the Greeks have given but half of the agreed space, and that is almost cut off from communication with harbor facilities. Jugoslavia wants to control the rail line and the port and wants a small navy to protect its commerce. Further back in Jugoslavia's dreams is a union with Bulgaria. The present Bulgar Premier, Liaptchev, is not opposed to the union. But the cautious Serbs know that Italy would consider such a union a direct challenge. The time is not yet right. Jugoslavia's attitude toward the Bulgar komitadjis is largely bluff.

Further Carving Feared.

Bulgars fear that the new little entente intends to carve Bulgaria still further until nothing is left. They recall the Delcasse plan, which gave Roumania all the territory as far south as the Balkan mountain range, gave Serbia the area eastward to the plains and gave Greece more of Thrace.

It can be seen that the bonds that bind the new little entente are very weak. Until it obtains Saloniki, Jugoslavia will never be sincerely friendly to Greece. Also it is not pleased with its frontier facing Roumania. Roumania and Greece have decided differences because of the ill luck following the marriages between their ruling families.

Bulgaria becomes desperate now and then, and forms komitadji bands to resist oppression. Not strong enough to right wrongs, the komitadji take vengeance. This is why bomb-throwing is so frequent in the Balkans. Farms are raided, meeting places are wrecked, prominent men are assassinated. Communists now and then aid in the work of confusion. Parfy differences prevent a peaceful settlement or compromise. There probably will not be real peace in the Balkans until Jugoslavia and Bulgaria join in a dual monarchy, with King Boris of Bulgaria eliminated from the scene.

PRACTICAL WORK TRAINING YOUTH

Peterborough Business College Equips Its Students For a Successful Business Career.

One of Peterboro's active establishments, that is always too busy to make much noise, is the Business College. Here the student, young or old, is quietly but thoroughly prepared for his life's career. A competent staff of teachers, assisted by an equipment that ranks among the best of its kind in Canada, guide the studies of an earnest body of pupils so that no time is lost or missteps made.

That real, practical training is obtained at the Peterboro ' Business College, is evidenced by the many letters of appreciation that come from its graduates who have been placed in lucrative positions in Toronto and other Canadian points, as well as in many American centres, such as Detroit, Rochester, Toledo, Akron, etc. Its graduates are also found in practically every office in the city. One lady student, recently placed in Detroit, receives an initial salary of $1,600.00 a year, and has since been raised to the position of head stenographer.

The equipment of the school includes a Book-keeping posting machine, adding machines, mimeograph addressing machine, many typewriters, etc., all of the most modern type procurable.

There is always a demand for the trained young man or woman, and any one who is in earnest and worthy can be satisfactorily prepared for his life work at this school.

The Fall Term opens on Wednesday, September First, and it is not too soon to take up the question of what is to be done this fall and coming winter.

A call, and talk over the matter with Mr. J. A. McKone, president of the College, is the best thing to do as a preliminary to entering the business field.

SEEKS RETURN OF INSURANCE

Company Enters Suit Against Woman Whose Husband Returned.

FIGHTING CLAIM.

SARNIA, August 20—A civil suit to recover $10,000 for $8,894.11 paid on two $5,000 insurance policies to Mrs. Adelard Lebert who has since become Mrs. Victoria Manley of Port Huron, was started with filing of a bill of complaint in circuit court in that city yesterday. The bill of complaint filed by the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., New Jersey, accuses Mrs. Lebert-Manley of fraud in misrepresenting the death of her former husband.

This case is one which arose over a year ago when Mrs. Lebert ceased payment on her absent husband's insurance and filed proof and affidavits that a man who had taken his life by throwing himself in an open furnace at the Imperial Oil Refinery here was her husband the insurance firm subsequently paid the claim. In April the case was revived in a somewhat startling manner by the appearance of a man who claimed he was Adelard Lebert. She repudiated his claim and he went to Stoney Point to visit relatives. His brother there identified him. Port Huron friends also claimed he was Adelard Lebert. Mrs. Manley has announced that she will contest the claim. Whether or not the body of the suicide victim resting in the cemetery here will be exhumed and examined for further identification has not yet been determined. Lebert parted from his wife and was away for some years but she kept up his insurance during his absence.

WOMAN KILLED THREE INJURED IN AUTO WRECK

Car Leaves Road and Crashes Into Telegraph Pole.

NEAR ORILLIA.

Dead Woman New York Visitor Driving With Friends From Toronto.

ORILLIA, Aug. 20.—One young woman was instantly killed and three other occupants were injured when a large touring car carrying six passengers left the road at Lee's Schoolhouse, about seven miles from here, and crashed into a telegraph pole, snapping it off near the base, and turned upside down.

The Dead and Injured.

The dead woman is Miss Bromstein of Brooklyn, N.Y. The injured are: Miss Lillian Hook, also of Brooklyn; Nathan Muscovitch and Joseph Graner, both of Toronto. Muscovitch's son, Harry, and C. M. Herlick, also of Toronto, other passengers in the car, escaped without injury. The injured are in hospital here, where they were brought by Norman Cooke, a local motorist, who had passed the ill-fated car but a moment before.

From what the local police and Provincial Constable Kelly of Barrie, who has charge of the case, have been able to learn, the party was proceeding north to Bala, where Muscovitch has a summer cottage, and where his wife and family are staying. The car was driven by Nathan Muscovitch, who, with Graner, occupied the front seat. The other four were in the rear seat of the car. No reason for the car leaving the road could be given by the survivors to the police.

Inquest Is to Be Held.

An inquest will be held by Coroner W. E. Brown as soon as a jury can be summoned and the witnesses are sufficiently recovered to give evidence. This is the first highway fatality here this year. No arrangements have been made definitely, but it is understood that the body will be taken to Toronto at the conclusion of the inquest and finally to the dead girl's home in Brooklyn, New York.

IN POLICE COURT.

A local taxi driver paid $5 and costs for the privilege of using the Hunter Street Bridge as a speedway. The offence occurred at 3.10 a.m., and this factor, coupled with the man's previous good record, resulted in Magistrate O. A. Langley imposing a nominal fine.

A local George Street fruit merchant paid $2 and costs for a breach of a city by-law, in exposing fruit for sale on the sidewalk beyond the legal limit.

5,000 PACIFISTS CAMP AT PARIS FOR CONVENTION

Officially. Represent No Organizations, But Follow Own Conviction.

MANY NATIONS.

Men and Women From Both Parties in Great War Assemble.

PARIS, Aug. 20.—Five thousand pacifists from two dozen countries, officially representing only their own convictions, although with ardor and enthusiasm, are camped around the old Chateau Bierville, an hour's rail journey from Paris, where they are holding the most picturesque peace congress yet recorded.

After weeks of semi-vacation in the sylvan environment spent in the cultivation of friendship among themselves, open-air exercises, rowing, swimming and walking, the delegates have just begun the serious business of preparing for the general meetings.

The delegates are drawn from both sexes and all categories of citizens, from German junker to Czecho-Slovakian peasant and English clerk. They are of all ages, from rosy-cheeked youth to white-haired patriarch.

No previous peace congress has developed such a degree of intimacy between the different nationalities involved, and from this point of view even conservative organs, like Le Temps, while scoffing at the possibility of definite results, are obliged to admit the assembly may have valuable consequences.

Organization Military.

Curiously enough, the material organization of the congress is almost entirely military. The French army supplied tents, beds, kitchens and vans. Military bands play every day, and War Minister Painleve was to have presided at the inauguration of business, but sent an officer of his Cabinet instead, because he is too busy with Government problems.

Professional politicians are in the minority, although Signor Nitti, the exiled Italian statesman, is present. King Alfonso's aunt, the Spanish Enfanta Fervent, is also at Bierville, but unofficially, because of home opposition. The Germans are much in evidence. Reichstag deputies hobnobbing with French bishops and Sir William Dickinson, chief of the British Fascist Societies.

Former Premier Nitti declared yesterday:

"I do not know what influence the Congress will have on the future, but I am convinced that this congress will be tremendously useful, even if it has no immediate results. The essential is to create a movement of opinion in favor of peace."

Such a movement would appear to be inevitable, judging from the easy fraternization at Bierville, not only of people of all countries, but also of all religious sects, Catholics, Protestants, Mussulmans and Buddhists.

Ferdinand Buisson, chief of the Free Thought School, shaking hands with Mgr. Julien, for instance, seemed the most natural thing in the world. The predominant idea of the Congress is the great role the young generation will play in hastening the era of universal peace. In this connection remarkable reports have been read by representatives of France, Great Britain and Germany on the relations of intellectual classes of students in all countries working in the same cause.

Theatrical Aspect.

The theatrical aspect of the question is not forgotten. One of France's foremost actors, Gemier, director of the Odeon Theatre, is in charge of the organization of the Pageantry to symbolize the march of the idea of peace in the world. Actors and actresses are delegates to the conference, and they are assisting.

As an example of practical pacifism, Signor Nitti in his address related how, when he took power for the last time in Rome he found his predecessor had made plans to annex Georgia by war to Italy. He said his first act was to countermand all the arrangements, and events showed he was right, for Tiflis fell to the Bolsheviks three months later. He added that the first efforts of the pacifists must be directed toward breaking down the Customs barriers between countries.

HOUGTON BACK TO TALK ABOUT DEBT REDUCTION

Ambasadsor Has Been Studying Anti-American Feeling in Europe.

REVISION NECESSARY.

British Ready To Keep Agreement, But Feels Treatment Unfair.

WASHINGTON, August 20.—The chief reason for the return of Alanson B. Houghton, Ambassador to the court of St. James, is to discuss the debt situation with United States officials with a view of having the agreements modified in order to pacify the growing opposition to the agreements among the European nations, it was disclosed here yesterday in semi-official sources.

At the suggestion of the State Department, Ambassador Houghton has been giving much thought and study to the reasons back of the anti-American feeling in Europe, and he has concluded, it was reported, that the only way to mollify the Europeans is to scale down the settlements.

Mr. Houghton is convinced that the time is not far distant when the debt agreements must be revised. He feels that such a course is inevitable as far as the British settlement is concerned. He reports that while the British are ready and willing to stand by their agreement whereby the debt was funded on an 80 per cent. basis of the obligation, since more marked concessions were made to other nations, notably France, Belgium and Italy, the British feel they have been treated unfairly.

Mr. Houghton may also suggest some changes in the Fordney-McCumber Tariff Act which will relieve the debt situation without letting down the bars too far in favor of European manufacturers.

In some quarters it was reported that Mr. Houghton will urge cancellation of all the European obligations as a means to develop and foster international good-will, but that rumor was discounted in semi-official circles.

GRATIFYING VOLUME OF BUSINESS IS SHOWN IN CANADA DURING 1926

Monthly Commercial Letter of Bank of Commerce Indicates Progress.

IN ALL INDUSTRIES.

Production Has Been Good and Demand Has Held Up.

The statistics and information available at this date regarding industry and trade during the first half of the year show that the volume of business was sufficient to provide a gratifying measure of prosperity for the greater part of the country's population.

Encouraging features are seen in the four major basic industries—agriculture, mining, lumbering and fishing. The farmers have been able to dispose of large quantities of agricultural products at quite favourable prices, the production of minerals has been increased and extensive development has been carried out, the lumber mills, while operating at little, if any, profit, have had a good market for their output, while a strong demand has existed for Pacific Coast fish and the new season opened in that section under very favourable conditions.

Industrial operations were maintained at a satisfactory level, even during a period when a material slackening is ordinarily expected. Wholesale distribution and retail sales in the country as a whole were ahead of the first six months of 1925, and further indications of an enlarged buying power are shown by the greater circulation of bank and Government notes, an increase in the debits to individual bank accounts and the heavier freight traffic in merchandise. There was less unemployment than in the five previous half years and labour disputes were few and relatively unimportant, the construction programme was the largest since 1913 and commercial failures were the lowest since 1920. Our foreign trade improved, even under the handicaps resulting from unfavourable events in Great Britain and Europe, while the statements presented by the railways and some of the large institutions and manufacturing concerns showed increased revenues.

July opened with a spirit of confidence in business circles. Trade improved quickly as a result of more seasonable weather, and the same factor was responsible for more favourable crop reports, especially from the Eastern Provinces, while manufacturing was still being conducted on a scale almost as extensive as that of the previous month.

These favourable influences, for the most part, still exist, but the outlook for the balance of the year depends largely upon the forthcoming harvests and the state of the markets abroad for farm products; information as to domestic and foreign crop conditions is furnished in the next section of this letter.

Agricultural Conditions.

Foreign Crop Prospects. — The last official forecast of the United States winter and spring wheat crops indicates a total yield of about 765,000,000 bushels, which, if sustained by the actual results at the harvest period, will be 100,000,000 bushels in excess of last year's production, and notwithstanding a comparatively small carryover, will be 75,100,000,000 bushels above that country's domestic requirements. The spring wheat crop, however, in addition to being short this year is not likely to be of good quality, but the winter crop includes a large percentage of hard red wheat. The condition of the United States corn crop is estimated at 10.12 per cent. below that of last year's crop, that of oats 5 per cent. less than the 1925 yield, while the rye and barley crops are expected to be 12 per cent. less than those of a year ago.

It now seems certain that the European crops of wheat and rye will not equal those of 1925. Official and definite forecasts have not been obtained from France and Germany, but it is indicated that their production and that of Italy will be less than last year, and it is understood that Central European grain was not well rooted. A more uncertain but important factor is the situation in Russia; all that is known at present is that the acreage sown to wheat was increased slightly this year and that growing conditions have been favourable, ut not more so than in 1925. Wheat seeding in Australia proceeded under ideal conditions, and the prospects for the new crop were recently regarded as excellent. The acreage sown this year in Argentina is expected to show some reduction and the outlook for the new season's crop is not as promising as that of last year.

Domestic Crops. — The grain crops in the West have undergone a severe test from adverse climatic conditions, There have been periods of extreme heat generally, frost at a few points and hail in some sections. Naturally, damage to the crops has resulted from these unfavourable elements, the greatest loss being from heat in central-western and south-western Saskatchewan and in south-eastern Alberta. In some districts the crops are past redemption, in others, and they comprise the most extensive area, good yields will be obtained if further moisture is received shortly. One pleasing feature is the uniform freedom from the pests usually prevalent.

Field crops in the Eastern Provinces were greatly improved during July by heat and timely rains. Hay cutting commenced in Ontario early in July and harvesting of fall wheat was under way by the third week of the month.

Conditions have been favourable to the sizing and ripening of fruit, particularly in Ontario, although the yields there are not likely to be as large as those of 1925. It is thought that the crops of peaches and grapes in the Niagara district will be light, In British Columbia rains have relieved, in part, the shortage of water required for irrigation and good crops are expected in that Province's fruit districts. Not more than an average production of apples is expected in the Maritimes, but the total Canadian crop of this fruit is estimated as being equal, at least, to that of last year. The United States apple crop will probably be 10 per cent. above last year's production and a good yield is anticipated in Great Britain.

Live Stock.

A few months ago a marked improvement was noticeable in the live stock industry, which was conducted under adverse conditions for five years previous, and it was hoped that this change was of a permanent character. Fundamentally the industry is being operated on a much better basis, but recently the markets here and abroad displayed some weakness.

Cattle and Beef.—The domestic market for cattle was strong for some months, but a recession in prices, a seasonal event, occurred early in July as a result of warmer weather and the marketing of grass fed stock. The June sales at the principal stock yards were somewhat less than those for the previous month, but about 5 per cent. higher than in the same month of 1925. Cold storage holdings of beef were increased during the same period by over 1,000,000 lbs. and at 1st July were slightly in excess of the stocks held on the same date last year.

Of late the export trade in live cattle has declined owing to the unsettled conditions in Great Britain, where prices are lower than a year ago. During the first six months of the current year the exports of frozen and chilled beef from Argentina were not more than 75 per cent. of those for the corresponding period in 1925, but apparently competition between American and English concerns operating in that country has caused these shipments to be offered at lower prices. The comparative acarcity of cattle this year in Australia will probably curtail shipments of beef from that country. The receipts of cattle in June at the Chicago market were the highest in twenty years and evidently the United States producers are marketing a large number of corn fed beasts, even though their herds have been reduced considerably. The exports to the United States of Canadian cattle, excluding calves, for the past six months were more than double those of the same period last year.

Favourable range and weather conditions have continued in the West; in the East, however, cattle were not placed on the grass as early as usual and the farmers have had to contend with a lengthy indoor feeding period.

Hogs.—The market for hogs and pork products has followed the course forecasted some months ago. After prices reached the highest level in four years they were reduced somewhat as a result of heavier receipts in June and the slackening demand for meats in midsummer. Liberal supplies are not in sight and prices should be maintained for some months at, or near, those now prevailing. Storage stocks on 1st July were 5,000,000 lbs. below the holdings of 1st June and 18,000,000 lbs. less than a year previous. The exports of bacon and other pork products show a decline for the six months ending 30th June as compared with the same period last year; this falling off in shipments outside is not due to lessened demand, but because of a shortage of supplies above those required for domestic consumption.

Sheep and Lambs.—Prices in this branch of the live stock industry dropped following the customary heavier receipts in June, but higher quotations ruled about 15th July. The market is fairly strong and the present prices for good lambs are above those of last year and are remunerative to the producers. The export trade in sheep and mutton is comparatively small and has fallen off in recent months. The stocks of mutton and lamb in storage on 1st June were reduced during July by over 50 per cent.

Business and Industrial Construction:—The value of building and engineering contracted for under this heading up to 20th July was $161,800,000, an increase of 75 per cent. over the figures for the same period last year. The awards for industrial plants account for most of this increase and reflect the extensive development of the mining, power and paper industries in Ontario and Quebec, but a greater volume of work is also reported in practically all other classes, notably hotels and warehouses; on the other hand, less is being expended for public buildings, office structures, paving, sewers and watermains. It is apparent, therefore, that the larger investment in this direction is principally for productive purposes and for the expansion of trade; furthermore, construction of this character will, upon completion, provide employment for a greater number of people.

Residential.—In this division the increase over the corresponding period in 1925 in the total value of contracts let is 20 per cent., divided about equally between apartment houses and private dwellings. The housing shortage, formerly so acute, seems to have been overcome and apparently the continued growth of building in this respect is due to the development of new residential districts adjacent to the large cities, the greater amount of money available for investment and the decline in prices of building materials, mainly in cement and lumber. There is, of course, the fear that if residential building is continued at its present level an undue inflation of land values and a surplus of living accommodations will result, and overbuilding is now noticeable in some sections. So far, however, there has not been extensive speculation in real estate, and while the ease with which money can be obtained for building may have some ill effects, not much fault can be found in the increasing tendency for people to own their own homes. Some will assume obligations of this nature beyond their means, but the majority seem to be governed by factors such as the cost of fuel, the difficulty of obtaining domestic servants, and the prevailing taxes, all of which tend to curtail the erection of large dwellings.

The British Coal Strike.

Prior to the general strike in Great Britain there was in prospect an improvement in the country's trade and industry which promised to relieve it of some of its problems and considering all the difficulties encountered previously it must be regarded as unfortunate that further troubles should have upset the hopes of this interested in the nation's efforts to regain its former prosperity.

Underlying the dispute between the British coal mine operators and their employees is the necessity of reorganization of the industry, not only in Great Britain but elsewhere as well. One of the most disturbing elements in the world's economic life is that the production of this essential and valuable commodity is accompanied by frequent and prolonged labour disputes, excessive costs generally, waste and in some sections misery for many of those engaged in the industry. The chief reason for all these unpleasant facts is that the world's capacity for producing coal is higher than its consumption and the situation gets worse and more electric energy is developed and oil comes into greater use to create power and for heating purposes. Under the present conditions in Great Britain and other countries, mines that could not be operated profitably if they were on an independent basis are kept open and the more valuable and efficiently managed properties are penalized thereby. The British mine owners proposed that the workers' day be lengthened by an hour, the wages reduced by 6d. to 1s. per week, other operating costs lowered by 10 per cent., freight rates reduced by 25 per cent., and the number of miners cut by 100,000. Yet it was claimed before the Samuels Commission that even with these measures adopted a loss of 3d. per ton of coal would result

The problem that confronts Great Britain is by no means easy to solve but the task is being faced with the same resolute spirit that prevailed in troublesome times previously and the events so far prove that the government is dealing fairly with both sides. It is to be hoped that the outcome will be as beneficial to the rest of the world as was the decision that, with a strong government, it is not feasible for one body of workers to inflict its grievances—well founded or otherwise—upon the general public.

The strike has reacted disastrously upon the Old Country's general industrial operations and export trade. Coal contracts for delivery abroad, which under normal conditions provide for the disposition of nearly 70 million tons per annum, are of course, being placed elsewhere. On 1st July only 12 iron furnaces were in blast out of 147 which were in operation in April, and other branches of industry were also severely handicapped by the lack of coal. Exclusive of the idle miners the unemployed registered on 21st June numbered 1,600,000, an increase of over 600,000 since the strike commenced. Overseas trade in May was valued at £48,000,000 less than that in the same month in 1925, but some improvement was seen in June.

Despite the losses and suffering caused by this great labour dispute Great Britain has a more normal appearance than most of the old world nations and upon settlement of the strike we shall doubtless see a renewed and even more earnest effort to establish sounder conditions.

Monthly Index Number.

Higher prices are observed for wheat, oats, corn, beef, flour, hides, leather, linseed oil, cotton, binder twine, tin and srpuce lumber. Recessions occurred in the quotations for cattle, hogs, butter, potatoes, sugar, wool, rubber, white pine lumber, silver and pig iron. These changes reduced our index number for exports from 100.84 to 159.96 and raised that for imports from 153.41 to 154.89. The index number for exports and imports combined in 157.42.

INSECT WIVES DON'T CODDLE HUSBANDS

If Males Won't Work They Kill Them—World Where the Female Rules.

One of the most cold-blooded massacres imaginable occurred one day recently, not among wild savages, but in an ordinary back yard beehive.

It was summer. Throughout the long, hot days there had been endless hustle and bustle in this marvelous apartment house, designed by the master craftsmen of the insect world—rooms to clean, more rooms to build, many babies to nurse, dinners to provide and pantry shelves to be stocked. It had been an exceedingly busy summer—busy, that is, for the women of the house, who had done all the work. While they worked, the men folks had spent a lazy vacation, lolling in the sun, eating and drinking, carousing in the hallways and making a nuisance of themselves generally.

At last the womenfolk rebelled. Their patience was exhausted. They served notice that all the good-for-nothing men must go.

This was no mere rolling-pin indignation meeting. These females meant business. Suddenly, as though at a given order, they set upon the lazy gluttons and murdered them to the last man!

This is no insect fable. Rather, says Popular Science Monthly for September, it is typical of countless atrocities committed every day in the busiest and most competitive world in all creation—a world where every creature must work or die.

In the battle for their lives and for the lives of their young, insects are relentless. Even the loveliest of them are vandals. Many of them are cannibals. And yet, with all their ruthlessness, the insects are startlingly like human beings. They have feelings. They see and hear and smell. It is possible even that they talk. They woo and mate, build homes and rear families. The cleverest ones of all, the ants, cultivate gardens, keep servants, entertain guests and support standing armies.

The insect world, however, as a rule is a world where the women do the work and the men count for little. The females are not only the mothers and housekeepers; they are the masters. They are the artisans, craftsmen, laborers, warriors and captains of industry. The chief destiny of the males, it seems, is to mate and die.

To this rule there is at least one notable exception—the dumpy little scavenger beetle known as the sisyphus. In this tribe the father and mother work side by side in the task of providing for their family.

It is fascinating to watch one of these devoted couples at work preparing and transporting food. First, with cleaver-like tools on their front legs, they cut away a neat chunk of refuse on which they feed. Then they pat and knead it gently, forming it into a sphere of marvelous symmetry. This done, they roll the ball to give it a crust. On one side the mother, clutching the ball with her front legs, moves backward, hauling it toward her. On the other side, the father, upside down, pushes with his hind legs.

Then they push and tug it sometimes incredible distances to the spot where they want to deposit it in the earth.

MUSIC IN THE BLACK FOREST

Here I am again at Baden-Baden amid the shade of its woods and gardens and where at this time of the year, music is the topic of every one every day. The orchestra is on duty eleven months out of every twelve, resting only in November. Its concert hall always seems to my unforgetting mind one of the most notable. Here Paganini brought his violin, here Liszt played his own work, here Caruso sang. Here Berlioz, Thomas, Anton, Rubenstein and Brahms have wielded the baton. And who has been here to see them? Among the names of famous visitors in the past I see Bismarck, Renan, Victor Hugo, Rossinni, Clara Schumann, Offenbach and Turgeniev. There is always music in the Black Forest—dances, concerts, lectures and operas and all the mental relaxation that the beautiful surroundings encourage. In normal years as many as 80,000 visitors will flock to the place, as if it were true what Eugene Guinot wrote in 1847: "There are two capitals of Europe: Paris and Baden-Baden."

PICTURESQUE MEDIEVALISM.

I have often been the Carcassonne, since years ago I read Naubaud's famous poem, for its picturesque medievalism, is probably as much a lure as any city in Europe. But last week, I was proceeding west from Narbonne and had the unplanned good fortune to secure a seat on the left of the coach, and for at least three miles before I reached Carcassonne, I had views of its impressive citadel that I never knew could be had. The old city is one of the most curious in the old world, for it stands much as it did in the Middle Ages, its walls having been carefully restored by Viollet-le-Duc in 1855-1879. It has a double line of fortifications and about fifty round towers. The citadel dates back to the fifth century, when it was occupied by the Visigoths. The tourist often gets his first good view of the Pyrenees from the ramparts of Carcassonne and sunsets of indescribable beauty. The old eighth century cathedral of St. Nazaire will repay all the time given to it in the upper city.

Women are greatly in the majority in the province of Ulster, Belfast alone recording 23,010 'surplus' females.

OBITUARY.

ANNIE DARLING.

The many friends of Mrs. Annie Darling were shocked to hear of her sudden death which took place at the Ross Memorial Hospital, Lindsay, on Thursday, August 12. The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Currie of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church.

She leaves to mourn her loss her sorrowing husband, David Darling, Lakefield; one son, M. Johnston, and two daughters, Mrs. Fred Smith and Velma, all of Lindsay; also her father, Mr. Ben Sloan of the west, and her sisters and brothers, namely, Mrs. J. H. Dawson, Mrs. Edgar Allen, Mrs. N. Brunkhurst, Mrs. A. Gabler, Mrs. A. McLean and Messrs. Wesley, Hartly, Lesley, George and Vincent Sloan, all of the north west and Mrs. Hugh Kinkade of Kenmore, Ont. The funeral was held on Saturday, August 14.

Beautiful floral tributes were sent which showed the high esteem in which she was held by her many friends. The pall-bearers were: William Hussey, Richard Sampson, George Umphrey; David Jamieson, Robert Nickleson and William Burke.

FREDERICK LAVER.

NORHAM, Aug. 20.—The high esteem in which the late Frederick Laver, who passed away at his home on Sunday morning was held was evidenced by the large concourse of neighbors and friends who attended the funeral services held in Trinity United church, on Tuesday afternoon. The casket and floor at the foot of the casket were banked with sprays, wreaths and bouquets of flowers contributed by friends and relatives. Among these was a beautiful wreath from the Sunday school over which the deceased had been Superintendent until his forced retirement last spring. This community has lost a good man and a wise councillor. His place will be difficult to fill as all who knew him admired his straight forward manly Christian spirit.

Mr. Laver was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Adam and Elizabeth Laver and was born in West Toronto 69 years ago. He with his parents moved to Percy when he was two years of age and he has resided here ever since. Over 40 years ago at a revival service held in the Methodist church he decided for Christ and has played an active part in the church's life and work ever since. For many years he worked in the Sunday school, where he had every confidence of the scholars. He was a trustee of the Norham church and recording steward of the Norham circuit. He was much beloved as a neighbor and noted for his honesty and industry. Old chums were present from points as far distant as Napanee to join in the last sad rites.

He leaves to mourn his loss besides his wife (nee Emma Massey) one brother James, of Rochester, two sisters, Mrs. George Evans and Mrs. Alfred Cliffe, both of Norham. Two daughters, Mrs. Edward Gummer, of Northern Alberta and Miss Flora, of Toronto and one son Oscar who lives across the way from his father.

The pall-bearers were: Messrs. Lewis Denike, Robert I. Mitchell, Marshall Wilson, Phillip Brenton, Fletcher Peterson and Frank Menceilley. Interment was made in the family plot in Stong's cemetery.

MRS. MITCHELL.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Mitchell on Sunday last was attended by a large number of friends.

The cortege left the family residence at 9 Cricket Place, Peterboro, at two o'clock and proceeded by motor to Christ church, Omemee, of which the deceased was a faithful member for many years. The casket was opened for the friends of her youth who had gathered to have a last look, and the funeral proceeded to East Emily cemetery for interment.

Very impressive services were conducted by Rev. G. J. Bousfield of St. Luke's, Peterboro. The pall-bearers were: C. E. Mitchell, only son; S. Whitaker and T. J. Lang, sons-in-law; J. J. Turner, W. Bothwell and A. Carpenter.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

THE LAND YOU CANNOT SEE IN ONE SUMMER.

In a sense there is no country in Europe that you can see in one summer, but this is pre-eminently so with Switzerland, some of the grandest districts of which you would only want to see in the winter. But even if you confined yourself to the summer lands, there is many a delightful rail trip, lake trip, highway excursion or jaunt along some famous bridle path that you would not have time to "take in." Like the old fashioned au revoir formula of the New England farmers, the Swiss parting always has a "Come again" tone in it. Whether you approach Switzerland from France through Geneva, from Germany through Zurich or from the Italian Alps, it is best to have a well outlined schedule of just what you want to see and "go to it." I find it good advice to warn all travelers who have benefited by the low exchange in France, Germany and Italy, not to blame Switzerland that it did not suffer in its currency during the war. What you get for your dollar in Switzerland is worth more than a dollar, especially if you plan your own trip and avoid abject dependency on others.

OLD NOTE FOUND.

BELFAST, Me. Aug. 20.—A promissory note, 114 years old, which pledges 9 bushels of corn and 9 bushels of rye in three years was found on the old Clark estate by E. J. Hillis. The note as signed by William Swett. The date was Dec. 8, 1812.

WEDDING BELLS.

FROST—DREWRY.

WARKWORTH, Aug. 20.—A pleasing event took place in the presence of fifty guests, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. V. Drewry, at high noon on Wednesday, August 18, when their only daughter, Ruth Pearl, was united in marriage to Mr. George A. Frost.

Rev. Major Harry Frost of Cleveland, Ohio, uncle of the groom, officiated, assisted by Rev. W. W. Jones.

To the strains of the wedding march, played by Mrs. Fred P. Drewry of Cobourg, the bride, becomingly gowned in dewrose georgette with embroidery trimmings and carrying a shower bouquet of sweetheart roses, sweet peas, baby's breath and fern, entered the drawing room with her father.

The bride was attended by her cousin, Miss Lottie Losie of Toronto. The bridesmaid wore orchid georgette over rose, with picture hat and carried pink asters. The bridegroom was supported by his brother, Mr. J. B. Frost of Oshawa.

Little Anne Pollock of Toronto, looking dainty in pink silk crepe de chene, was flower girl and carried a basket of sweet peas.

Master Fred Drewry of Cobourg was ring-bearer. The drawing room was tastefully decorated with white hydrangea and pink gladiolis and after the ceremony the guests repaired to the dining room where a sumptuous dinner was partaken of.

The waiters were: Misses Helen Armstrong, Bessie Wilson, Hilda Garbutt, Verna Thompson and Miss Ruth Pollock of Toronto.

The groom's gift to the bride was an amber fox fur, to the bridesmaid a silver vanity case, to the flower girl a pearl necklace, to Miss Frances Knight of Huntsville, who attended the door a signet ring, to the ring-bearer a signet ring and to the best man military brushes.

Going away the bride wore a black satin dress with shell pink trimmings and a large black velvet hat with shoes and stockings to match.

The happy couple left amid showers of good wishes and confetti for Toronto, Niagara and Buffalo.

Previous to her marriage Mrs. J. L. Phillips gave a kitchen shower in honor of the bride, consisting of fifteen pieces of bonny blue graniteware.

SHADGETT—HUTCHINSON

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in the Park Street Baptist Parsonage, on Wednesday, August 11th, when the Rev. Norman R. McLead, united in marriage Mr. Kenneth Shadgett, of 188 Perry Street and Miss Doris Hutchinson of 556 Charlotte Street. The bride, who was given away by her father, was beautifully gowned in white crepe de chine over white satin with a large white picture hat, with shoes and stockings to match, carrying a bouquet of Orphelia roses. She was attended by her cousin, Miss Verna Saunders, who was bridesmaid, her dress was coral silk crepe, with hat to match and blonde shoes and stockings, her bouquet was of sweet peas. The groom was attended by the the bride's brother, Mr. Albert C. Hutchinson.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride. Her mother received the guests, attired in sequin crepe de chine, with hat, shoes and stockings to match. The groom's mother wore a dress of black satin with touches of mauve. The room was handsomely decorated with sweet peas and gladiolas, with white ribbon and bells. There were 48 guests seated at the tables which looked lovely with the floral decorations. The guests were waited on by four girls in white silk. Miss Netta and Tuner Heart, Miss Gwen Lucas and Violet Godrich. The grooms gift to the bride and bridesmaid was a string of pearls and to the groomsman, a gold pencil. The wedding party left on a motor trip to Toronto and points west, the bride wearing a lovely gown of rust canton crepe touched with sand, with hat, shoes and stockings to match.

The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and costly gits.

During the reception, she received congratulations from England by cablegram.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Shadgett will reside in Peterboro.

THE OTHER SIDE.

"You look tired out. Have a rest."

"I daren't. My husband is addressing a meeting on the rights of women and if his supper isn't ready when he comes home I shall have a terrible time with him."—Drokodl, Moccow.

CROWN JEWELS ARE DELIVERED IN PUBLIC TAXI

Guard Consists of Two Warders—Old Men, at That.

NO PUBLICITY.

Nobody Knows What Taxi Contains—Guard Would Attract Mob.

LONDON, Aug. .—Believe this yarn or not—it was told by a warder in the Tower of London, told soberly and to a parson, at that, while this writer listened. So far he has been unable to disprove it and even those who should know say: "Well, it may be so."

The parson and a man from Philadelphia had strolled through the White Tower, the Bloody Tower, the chapel and whatnot, and had halted at last before that blazing, barred platform where lie the crown jewels of Great Britain. Diamonds, rubies, emeralds, pearls, gold and silver and ivory, crowns and diadems, sceptres and orbs and plate and mace. Millions of dollars in a hatfull of shining stones; the greatest diamond in the world glittering on a sceptre; the green of a flat emerald that would ransom a prince; plates of gold as big as the wheel of an auto; swords with scabbards a mass of gems, coronets, rings, orders.

There they lay, gleaming, glittering, glowing, the colors of a million rainbows blazing from their cold depths, their chill fires. Two men in the costume of ancient days strolled about. Not a bun in sight —and the two men were rather old.

A Thug's Chance

"My Lord," muttered a Detroit detective, Lieut. Charles Lambert, "what a chance for a bunch of our stick-up boys."

"I say," exclaimed the little parson. "How do they move these things when they wish to crown a king?"

"Well," began the warder, and there was a twinkle in his eye or smile on his lips, "We moved 'em the last time in a taxicab."

"Yes. With the Household Guard, eh?"

"No. Just a couple of the warders."

"Goodness. Took that million dollars worth of jewels through London streets in a taxi-cab?"

"Why, yes. You see there is no provision for a special vehicle or guard. There has been no appropriation. We knew when they were to be used, of course. Not all of 'em, just the crown and sceptre and orb and some other things. I got a taxi man. One that I knew, of course, and arranged for him to have the proper order from the palace. Then he appeared and presented the order. That made it official. If a soldier with a coach and four had done the trick a couple of centuries ago, you would not think it strange. Well, what's the difference between a stage coach and a taxi?

Dumped—Like That!

We knew the exact hour and all that and we had the things properly wrapped and waiting. The cab drove into the inner court and we dumped them in just exactly as we would anything else to be transported. A couple of warders went along and the jewels were delivered without any fuss or trouble.

"Suppose now we had ordered out a troop of soldiers and all that. Everyone in London would have known about it and we would have had mobs and all sorts of things to combat. This way no one knew a thing about the transfer."

"My blessed word," said the little parson.

"We would have needed a regiment of soldiers in the United States," said the man from Philadelphia. "That is, if you are not kidding us."

"I am telling you the simple facts," said the warder gravely. "We do not tell jokes about the crown jewels of Great Britain."

SHE WAS WEAK, THIN AND NERVOUS

One of the greatest strength givers and producers of good healthy flesh in the world is Cod Liver Extract—it's full of vitamines.

Nothing like the wonderful vitalizing vitamines extracted from the livers of the common codfish to help convalescing people to quickly get strong and well—everybody knows that.

So nowadays medical men who keep up with the times are ordering a tablet containing the vitamines that give to frail folks vigor, strength and weight—a tablet that is known as McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablet—and it surely has proved a blessing to thousands of people who have been sapped off their natural strength after any severe illness.

Skinny men and women take them to speedily put on plenty of good healthy solid flesh and for this purpose they are so extremely good that thin men and women often take on 5 five pounds in 30 days. As a matter of fact your druggist is authorized to return your money if you don't take on five pounds in 30 days.

Great for weak, skinny, backward and run-down children too, and gives them a hearty appetite.

Be sure and ask for McCoy's, the original and genuine Cod Liver Extract Tablet. McDermid and Jury, James Lynch and Bond's Drug Store, and druggists everywhere have a big demand for them, and millions are sold monthly all over North and South America. They are sugar-coated and as easy to take as candy. 60 Tablets—60 cents.

BRITISH ATTACK ELLIS ISLAND

Papers Discuss Treatment Given Tourists By American Authorities.

MANY INDIGNITIES.

BY MILTON BRONNER

NEA Service Writer

LONDON, Aug. .—For the third time within the last three years, British newspapers are once again making an onslaught on the manner in which British citizens are treated when they are sent over to Ellis Island.

The comments vary from the bitterly ironical to downright heavy fighting language. And the moral being drawn is that British travelers had better stay on this side of the ocean and not risk any unpleasantness with our immigration officials and any collisions with our immigration laws.

The Morning Post, which has never been noted for any excessive love for America, under the caption "The New Purgatory," says with elaborate irony:

"The decadent peoples of the Old World have long been accustomed to learn with due humility from the Great Republic of the West that its mission to mankind is to serve as the great exemplar of manners and morals. Excluded from the contamination of Europe by the salutary gulf of waters, the United States of America from its austere beginnings, has pursued the paths of virtue unattainable elsewhere.

Sarcastic? Oh, No.

"The champion of democracy, America opened her gates to the poor, the oppressed and the lazy of all other nations and in course of time, tempering a perhaps too lavish hospitality with a wise discrimination, she established a place of intermediate reception, upon an island called Ellis.

"Here, lest the least suspicion of evil, the slightest taint of disease, should invade the holy cities and the pure solitudes of the New World, travelers are met by the keepers of virtue, who perform the necessary rites and ceremonies.

"Some years ago it was discovered by the British Ambasador that, doubtless in order to fulfil the purgatorial purpose of the antechamber to happiness, the conditions of Ellis Island were far from luxurious and were even—to the European mind—disgusting.

Such Indignities.

"As a concesion to European effeminancy, it is understood that some slight alterations were made. But there has been no decline from moral and physical standard demanded for admission to These States .....And nowsit appears that a party of Englishwomen, on the way to Canada, were compelled to submit to what the officials describe as 'the customary inspection.' Unused to the practical interpretation of American ideals, these ladies have permitted themselves some expressions of indignation. Their disgust will be shared by those of their fellow-countrymen who cannot perceive the beauty of a democracy which insists on subjecting even its women visitors from abroad to affront and indignity."

The Evening Standard recalls that the American press has generally and broad-mindedly condemned conditions at Elis Island, but adds that Ellis Island seems incapable of reforming itself and it appears to be nobody's business to enforce reform upon it.

It revives the story of the divorced English woman who was held up for moral turpitude and then takes up the latest case of the British women en route to Canada. It says they raised the matter on applying for a visa to the American consul at Liverpool.

Stripped to Waist.

"There," says the paper, "they were told that they would never see Ellis Island. Unhappily, this assurance proved quite illusory. They saw Elis Island, smelled Ellis Island, were insulted by Ellis Island in the course of examination absurdly severe for mere tourists. ....The whole conduct of Ellis Island seems to be discreditable to a great country like the United States, but the credit of the United States is its own affair.

"What other countries have a clear right to expect is that their nationals shall be fully warned of what is in store for them. Most educated Englishwomen would forego even the rapture of seeing the Woolworth building if they knew that part of the price was answering impertinent question and stripping to the waist in the presence of immigrants from every part of Europe."

The Star pointedly says:

"While the free citizens of America talk about freedom, subjects of our own effete monarchy have it. None of the backward nations of Europe possesses anEllis Island, for which the ubiquitous tourist may well be thankful."

The Daily Sketch says it is now fairly widespread knowledge that third class passengers are subjected to medical inspection, that Ellis Island is not a suburb of paradise, and that its officials are not selected for their Chesterfieldian manners.

"If," says the paper, "people decided to risk these discomforts for the felicity of gazing at the Flatiron building, or for the cultural advantages, a wider acquaintances with the Amurkan slanguage, it is unreasonable for them to display the indignation of outraged Tragedy Queens when what they have been warned will happen duly comes to pass."

KIDDING A STAR.

FIRE DESTROYS HOTEL SHEDS

Most Spectacular Blaze Seen in Cobourg for Some Time.

IN EARLY MORNING

COBOURG, Aug. 20.—Between one and two o'clock Wednesday morning the most spectacular fire that has occurred in Cobourg broke out in the sheds at the west of the Balmoral hotel and at the rear of the store and residence owned by Mrs. T. Work. It was noticed by Mr. Stringer of the Balmoral, who immediately ran over to the police office and gave the alarm.

Mr. D. Denton who resides opposite the burned buildings notice the blaze about the same time, and turned in an alarm, but the fire had made considerable headway before it was discovered. The fire brigade responded as speedily as possible, and soon had 1500 feet of hose laid and four streams of water playing on the fire. Even then it was a stubborn fight to save adjoining buildings. A dozen or so citizens gave valued assistance and fought heroically along with the firemen. The Balmoral barns were burned, and a shed west of them and also the shed at the rear of Mrs. Work's property. The outside of the Balmoral kitchen was scorched and Miss Eagleson's garden was damaged by the heat. The Balmoral property is owned by the Lightbourne estate.

MISSION BAND PICNIC

Ideal Weather for Outing of Millbrook United Church Girls.

MILLBROOK, Aug. 20.—The Sunshine Mission Band held its annual picnic on Tuesday afternoon at the home of the superintendent, Mrs. Offa Williamson, Seventh Line, Cavan, who had generously extended the hospitality of her house and grounds for the gathering.

The weather was ideal for the occasion, and about sixty of the boys and girls with a number of their parents and friends motored to the gathering place where a most enjoyable time was spent.

Mr. and Mrs. Williamson was indefatigable in their efforts to see that both the tiny tots, and the older folk, had all the pleasure the outing could possibly afford Games suited to the varying ages and races for children and grown-ups occupied the time agreeably throughout the afternoon. The big field adjoining the lawn was in use for games of soft ball before and after supper, the players not tiring until the fading light made it difficult to see the ball.

All the children in the race for those four and under were given a reward of candy, Beatrice McDowell and Wilma Armstrong coming in ahead. Mary Burnham and Bonna Clarke were the winners in the race for girls 7 to 9, and Marian Earle and Janet Dawson in the race for those 10 to 12; Jean Burnham and Hope Thompson came first and second when the older girls competed, and in the married women's race Mrs. J. L. Byam and Mrs. J. McKnight outdistanced the others.

The shady side lawn made an ideal spot for seating the guests during the supper hour, among those assisting Mrs. Wiliamson in serving her guests being: Mrs. Harry Dawson, Mrs. H. A. Earle, Mrs. J. L. Byam, Mrs. Wilfrid Euson, Mrs. J. McKnight, and Miss Florence Larmer. The big freezer of ice-cream which the hostess had thoughtfully made for the occasion gave the picnickers particular satisfaction.

Tired, but decidedly happy, it was about dark when the young folk and the older guests filled the waiting cars and left on their homeward way.

The mission band will re-open in September for its regular meetings, and outside the instruction in missionary topics, the "giving Christmas Tree", with the accompanying concert, held early in December, is the main objective in view as the big box must be packed and on its way to the Ruthenian school at Washtao in good time so it may arrive for use in helping to provide a well-laden tree on Christmas Eve, Miss E. C. Hawken looking after the disposal of its contents.

FASHIONS

By HEDDA HOYT

(Written for the United Press)

NEW YORK, August 20 (United Press). — Costume designers are covetously keeping their Fall styles under cover, guarding their silhouettes as a mother hen guards her chicks. It is as difficult to see an original Fall model these days as it is to get into a Broadway theatre without a ticket. However, certain fashion ideas which are being hatched by several Parisian gown houses are already bursting from the shell.

Bloused bodices combined with slender-fitting skirts, for instance, will be among the new silhouettes. There is a tendency towards more fullness above the hip-line and slender hem-lines.

Skirts will be about four inches below the knee which means that they will be slightly longer than they have been.

Waist lines of many evening frocks of bloused variety dip at the rear and mount higher in front. Young misses' frocks show a raised waist line as where a narrow belt is placed almost at the normal waist line. The average waist line for Fall will be placed at the hip tops.

Sleeves remain long. Collars are small or entirely absent. Arm holes in some instances are cut very deep with the sleeve narrowing toward the wrist.

Tiered effects are prominent on skirts of dressy or semi-dressy type. Fringe often forms the tier effect for Fall. Another skirt idea is the slender foundation with over panels. Velvet and chiffon will predominate for evening while crepe-backed satins will be popular for afternoon wear. The leading Fall colors are Chanel red, greens ranging from emerald to bottle and silver tones, fushia, violet and wine shades, wood tones and black. Chanel red and wine shades will be extremely important during the early Fall.

As to hats, Beret tams continue as youthful types. Draped crowns rule almost invariably on mature models. High peaked effects will be worn by matrons. Brims are not extremely wide and crowns are higher.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

The amethyst, today's talismanic and natal gem, was declared by Leonardo to make its wearer astute, shrewd in business and logical. The traveler and the soldier should adopt the amethyst as a charm, since it is sure to bring them good luck. It is an especially lucky stone for those who are given to impulse.

Dark blue is today's color. It is said to bring gayety and good cheer to those who wear it.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorncliff

SHE DESCRIBES A SPORT DRESS OF BEIGE GEORGETTE

One of the girls who was formerly a manikin in Madame's shop and, incidentally, one of my very good friends, called me on the telephone the other morning and invited me to her home for the week-end.

Needless to say, I accepted the invitation, for it is a pleasure to visit her charming home. She lives in one of the fashionable suburban towns not far from the city, and she and her husband, who is an ardent golfer, belong to the country club. Madame let me leave the shop early, that I could catch a train which would get me to my destination in time for luncheon.

When I alighted from the train, my friend was waiting for me and as she led me to the car, she explained that we were going directly to the Club for luncheon, as her husband was there waiting for us.

I love to go to such places, for I always see such stunning girls and invariably some lovely costumes.

The porch dining-room was well-filled when we reached the club, but we found a table and were soon being served with a delicious luncheon.

A young girl, whom my friend explained is a neighbor of hers, stopped at the table to chat, and she had on the spiffiest sport dress I've seen in a long time.

It was of beige georgette, made with the fashionable long waist, slightly bloused. The skirt was box pleated and the vestee and sleeves were of finely pleated georgette. The neck trim and double belt were of tan grosgrain ribbon, and to complete the costume, the young thing wore a beige felt hat with tan band.

"She looks so delightfully cool," I remarked, "and her costume is simply stunning."

"Yes," my friend replied, "she is counted as one of the best-dressed girls in town. She dotes on sports things, and I understand she designs all of her costumes."

"Goodness," I answered, "if she should have to earn her living, she'd never have a hard time finding a position as designer."

"There's not much fear of that," my friend assured me, "for her father is extremely wealthy. But he has insisted that his daughters learn something useful in case anything should happen that they would be thrown on their own."

I kept a sketch of the dress to show Madame, for she is always keenly interseted in designs and clothes which we manikins see.

JUDY GETS A THRILL

"I am very glad your brother is coming," I said. "I think he should be here for the settlement."

"I am sure he thinks so, too, Judy," said Joan, "for I have never known him to come to town before. Of course, he must go to Mr. Elkins with us. I am now going to the train to meet him and take him directly to the house. Will you meet us there, dear?"

"But, Joan," I remonstrated, "if your brother is coming no one will want me, a comparative stranger, to butt in."

"I want you, dear Judy, and must have you. You are not a comparative stranger. You are my business manager and companion. By the way, will five thousand a year, with board and all traveling expenses, except your clothes, be all right?"

"I am afraid it will be too much, Joan. You know I haven't had any experience in business managering."

"My dear Judy, do you not know that already your services have been worth more than five thousand to me? What would I have done without you in the case of Barry and Lela," said Joan earnestly. "I must run now, dear. Be at Elkins' house at half past ten."

Before I could say any more, Joan rung off, and I knew I was in for it. I knew my presence at that private business conference, which concerned the settling up of the Meredith estate, would act upon Mr. Robinson as a red rag would upon a bull. He probably would metaphorically try to gore me to death.

I expected he would think I was a modern kind of Nemesis which followed him around to mentally torture him. And that is just what he did think, he told me later. But I was so concerned in another matter at that time that I had no thought for anything or anyone but myself.

I had to hurry with my dressing, and so went off without my breakfast. And taking a taxi I got to the gates of the wonderful suburban home of Josiah Elkins at the very moment that Joan drove up with her brother. I had just reached the pavement in front of the gates when I heard her call. Turning, I looked into the saddest, yet most fascinating eyes I have ever seen in a man's face.

Joan got out quickly and rushed over and pulled me towards the car.

"Judy, this is my brother," she exclaimed. "John, you will love Miss Dean as I do," she said.

The man sitting there in the car looked me straight in the eye and did not move. The sneering expression on his face I will never forget. It was though he was hating himself for taking an interest in me, and his mouth became a narrow, bitter line as he murmured my name.

There is a sign today read as presaging a better public feeling in regard to business and a widespread revival of trade.

Pacific ports are to show increase of commerce and there will be much travel to the Oreint, the seers foretell.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

(By Mildred Marshall.)

Facts about your name, its history; its meaning; whence it was derived; its significance; your lucky day, and lucky jewel.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

ROSALIE

Rosalie and Rose appear to be of the same general root, the more euphonious name of Rosalie being a French extraction. A curious point is that the color rose is irrevocably associated with the name Rosalie, as well as Rose.

The history of the name Rosalie is most interesting. It first was given to fair women of France and it was there that St. Dominic arranged a series of devotions by means of telling beads upon a string. These formed the rosarium, or rose garden, or freely translated, delights of devotion. The Rosarium has a day to itself in the Roman calendar and may possibly have named the transatlantic saint Rosaa di Luina, which gave rise to Rosita. Switzerland calls her Rosel, and France Rosine or Rosette. In England she is Rosanne, sometimes Rosabella, meaning "beautiful rose." From Italy comes Rosina and Rosetta. A more rare, but not less charming interpretation is Rosealba, signifying "white rose."

There are red roses and white roses and yellow roses in Nature, yet the real rose is the deep pink, and the bearer of the name or any of its derivatives should surround herself with these flowers if she would wish the psychic atmosphere which their quality insures. Her jewel is that rare beautiful gem, the flame-hearted ruby. It denotes pride and haughtiness and appoints Tuesday as the fortunate day for its wearer and 3 the lucky number.

18,000 SQUARE MILES OF MEADOWS.

The densely populated countries of Europe may vie with each other in telling of how many persons live to the square miles, but Sweden, if it could do so, might tell of how many grassy glades and how many million wild flowers it supported to the square miles, for as much as 12 per cent. of that country is occupied by its beautiful dales and meadows, while over half the country is given up to woodlands. There are countries in Europe with over 600 persons to the square mile, in Sweden there are only a sparse thirty-two. What this means to the tourist who wants to get away from the crowds can be easily imagined. I have travelled for hours on the plains of Skane, and through the well-wooded province of Smaland, by lonely lakes and meandering streams, and in the immense expanses north of Svealand, so majestically criss-crossed by mountains, and enjoyed the silences of nature through hundreds of square miles that could not boast even thirty-two fellow human beings.

PAPERS SIGNED BY THEATRICAL MAGNATE FOUND

Box Containing Documents With Small's Signature Is Discovered.

IN OLD HOUSE.

Caretaker Unable To Find Claimant and Wife Opens Box.

TORONTO, Aug. 20.—Mystery surrounds the finding on Thursday afternoon of a strongbox containing sealed documents bearing signatures of Ambrose J. Small, missing millionaire theatrical man, and of his former secretary, John Doughty. The box had been pried open, and whether or not any more valuable papers concerning the missing magnate's business affairs in the Grand Opera House have been stolen may never be solved.

The box was found in a dilapidated roughcast house which stands in the rear of the Locksley Apartments, 1268 King Street West. The building has been used of late years by tenants of the apartments to store things they did not have space for in their rooms.

Building to Be Wrecked

A wrecking firm is about to tear down the old building, which has stood on the site for half a century. George Russell Higgins, caretaker of the apartments, was cleaning out the place yesterday when he came across the box. Thinking it belonged to a tenant who had been out of the city holidaying, he placed it to one side.

Yesterday morning Mrs. Higgins, his wife, inquired of this tenant on her return home if the box belonged to her. When told it did not, and knowing all the remaining stuff in the building had been claimed, Mrs. Higgins decided to see what the box contained.

Documents and Cheques Found

The box is of black steel, about 12 inches in diameter. The lock had been broken. Lifting the lid, Mrs. Higgins first came across the two documents bearing the signatures of Mr. Small and his former secretary, and cheques and other papers concerning a man named William Caiger, who at one time evidently held the contract for the printing of programmes for Mr. Small's theatres. She at once communicated with her husband.

The first legal document was drawn up July 1, 1903. It was signed by Small, Doughty and Caiger, and was an agreement concerning the privilege of handling the programme rights for the Grand Theatre. The second paper was dated Feb. 1, 1908, and was merely a five-year renewal of the first agreement.

How Did It Get There?

When seen yesterday by a reporter, Mr. Higgins said he had been employed as caretaker of the apartments for the past two years. In the course of his work, he said, he had been in and out of the old house many times during the day. He could not explain how the box got into the building, unless Mr. Caiger had at one time lived there and, being through with the box and contents when he moved, left them there. He had made inquiries, but could not ascertain as to whether any one by that name had lived at the place.

On the other hand, investigation might bring forth a clue to show that the box and contents may have disappeared from the office of Mr. Small in the Adelaide Street theatre building, where Small was reported to have been last seen alive.

An old Midsummer Eve custom in England was for a girl to walk backward into a garden and gather a rose. This had to be kept in clean sheet of paper and never looked at until Christmas Day. Tradition had it that the rose would then be as fresh as it had been in June.

In spite of the fact that the value of the gold taken out of the earth has for many years averaged more than $240,000,000 there is hardly enough of the metal to meet requirements.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

DAVID LIVINGSTONE AND MARY MOFFAT

A beautiful example of pure love was given to the world by the great explorer and missionary David Livingstone. He married the daughter of another missionary, Mary Moffat, and the happiness of these two was ideal. In one of his letters to Mary, before their marriage Livingstone wrote:

". . . And now, my dearest, farewell. May God bless you. Let your affection be toward Him much more than towards me; and kept by His power and grace I hope I shall never give you cause to regret that you gave me a part. Whatever friendship we feel towards each other let us always look to Jesus as our common friend and guide, and may He shield you with his everlasting arms from every evil."

After eight years of married life, Livingstone could still feel inspired to send his wife this letter.

"Cape Town, May 5th, 1892.

"My dearest Mary: How I miss you and the dear children! My heart yearns incessantly for you. How many thoughts of the past crowd in my mind! I feel as if I would treat you much more tenderly and lovingly than ever. You have been a great blessing to me. You attended to my comforts in many ways. May God bless you for all your kindness. I see no face now to be compared with that sunburnt one which has so often greeted me with its kind looks. . . You may read the letters over again which I wrote you at Mabosta—the sweet time, you know. As I told you before, I tell you again, they are true, true: there is not a bit of hypocrisy in them. I never show all my feelings; but I can say truly, my dearest, that I loved you when I married you and the longer I lived with you I loved you the better."

UNCLE WIGGILY

Today's Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY AND BUDDY'S BIKE

Copyright, 1926, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Once upon a time Buddy, the guinea pig boy, who was brother to Brighteyes, the guinea pig girl, had a bicycle with two wheels. Of course I know that all bicycles have two wheels, else they wouldn't be named that way. But few bicycles have fine wheels as had Buddy's, and none, so the little fellow thought, were so shiny or could go so fast.

"Mine is the best bicycle in all the world!" boasted Buddy as he jumped on and went riding around Woodland near the Orange Ice Mountains.

"That is all very well for you to think, Buddy," said Uncle Wiggily, who hopped along just then with his pink, twinkling nose. "But don't be too proud about your bicycle or anything else."

"I know my bicycle is the best!" insisted the guinea pig chap. "If you don't believe it, Uncle Wiggily, I'll give you a ride on it."

"Well, maybe I'll hop on and take a spin some day," said the bunny gentleman, laughing. And it was not long after this before he had a very strange ride indeed, and so did Buddy.

It happened this way. Mrs. Longears, who was Uncle Wiggily's wife, sent him to the five and nine cent store to get some bologna sausage in long, round links like a police dog's club.

"Who is going to eat the bologna?" asked Uncle Wiggily as he hopped on his way. "You know I don't care for meat."

"Mr. and Mrs. Bow Wow, the lady and gentleman dogs, are coming to supper," answered the rabbit lady. "I want the bologna for them."

"That is quite all right then," said Mr. Longears and soon he was on his way to the store where he bought two long, limber sausages, one for Mr. Bow Wow and one for Mrs. Bow Wow.

It was on his way back through the woods that Uncle Wiggily saw Buddy riding his "bike," as the little guinea pig boy called his wheel for short. And, no sooner had Uncle Wiggily seen Buddy, than the rabbit gentleman also saw somethieg else.

This was the unpleasant old Bob Cat, with his silly little tail, slinking along beneath the trees and bushes.

"That Bob Cat is going to chase me!" thought Uncle Wiggily to himself. "But I will fool him and make him run fast. I will get on Buddy's bike and have a ride as he invited me to, and the Bob Cat can never catch me!"

Uncle Wiggily was about to hop ahead and ask Buddy for the bicycle, when the rabbit gentleman happened to think:

"That will never do! If I ask Buddy to get off his bike so I can ride, the Bob Cat will catch him. What can I do? The bad chap is coming along after me. Ah, I know! I'll get on Buddy's bike myself and let him ride on the handle bars in front of me. In this way we shall both escape the Bob Cat!"

No sooner said than done! Hopping through the woods, Uncle Wiggily popped out near Buddy, who was peddling slowly along.

"Quick! Let me have your bike and I'll ride you ahead of me on the handle bars!" cried the rabbit gentleman. "The Bob Cat is coming!"

"Here you are!" shouted Buddy, leaping off the saddle. Up jumped Uncle Wiggily, the two long bologna sausages flipping and flopping in his side pockets. Up jumped Buddy to the handle bars. Up and down Uncle Wiggily pumped his feet, and the bike began to roll, carrying the two along the path in the woods.

"Wait! Stop! I want you!" howled the Bob Cat, running very fast. But he could not go as fast as Buddy's bike. All of a sudden, though, Uncle Wiggily ran over a sharp thorn.

"Pop!" sounded through the woods.

"What's that?" cried the bunny.

"Puncture!" yelled Buddy. "We can't go any more and the Bob Cat will get us! We have a flat tire! The Bob Cat will bite us!"

"No he won't!" shouted the rabbit. "I'll fix that puncture!" They were ahead of the Bob Cat by this time. Uncle Wiggily jumped off the bike and, taking one of the bologna sausages he quickly tied it, with long strings of grass, around the wheel that had a flat tire. The bologna made as fine a round tire as a heart could wish.

"Here we go again!" cried the rabbit, and before the Bob Cat could catch up to them Uncle Wiggily and Buddy rode on and got safely home. And the bologna sausage that was used as a tire was just as good for Mr. Bow Wow to eat as if it had not helped save the rabbit and guinea pig. So all was well, and if the egg beater doesn't drop the rice pudding down the back of the rocking chair, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the hungry hawk.

HOW TO SWIM

by Lillian Cannon

POSITION TO ASSUME BEFORE YOU START TO FLOAT

It is while learning to be expert in the back stroke that one also can learn to float.

Floating, I have always maintained, is a gift and cannot be learned except by experience.

Some excellent swimmer in Chesapeake Bay that I know of, never have learned to float.

Instructions are simple. Lie on the back in the water with arms extended and lungs filled with air, until the body comes to rest. Then exhale slowly and inhale quickly.

The feet will drop at first until the body is perpendicular but, if one persists, the body will float with the face clear of the water.

After getting the hang of floating in this manner it is simple to raise the feet to the surface—but it requires long practice to keep them there.

MEN? OH, WELL.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—Men are of some use after all! So the National Federation of Women's Institutions has decided. At a recent meeting a resolution was adopted urging more "co-operation with the men, especially with regard to choral and dramatic societies." The mere male receives few bouquets at meetings of the Federation, and even this one had a string on it. It was the only fear of Mrs. Amy Adams, who moved the resolution, that the men would say that "at last the women have admitted they need men's help."

The Princess Maria d'Bourbon of Spain, is a first cousin of King Alphonso, and she has come to America to spend a month with Mrs. Dahlberg, Chicago social leader. When she last visited America it was to see Americans work. This time the princess wishes to see Americans play, and she expects to live as American girls do. She intends to visit several of the larger cities.

Daily Short Story

THE TIGHTWAD

Our friends and acquaintances form a jury before which we are perpetually on trial: and their verdict is generally a just one, however much we may protest against. The verdict in the case of John M. Codington was: "Jack would be a first-rate fellow—if he wasn't such a tightwad." Jack had not made his money himself—his forebears had done that. But it was working for Jack; and he saw to it that it worked. There were no vacations, or eight-hour days for Jack's dollars.

So when it got about that Jack Codington was engaged to Elsie Capron, people laughed, and wondered, and even sneered. "Well, that would be a match!" said one. "Elsie Capron! she'll make his money fly for him." And another said: "What can Elsie be thinking of? He'll half starve her and never let her have a decent dress to her back." While still a third opinion—and this was the one generally held by the men—was that Elsie's father, Cyrus, was at the bottom of it all, using his daughter as a bait to try and get some of Jack's hoarded wealth coming his way to help him out of the financial difficulties in which, rumor said, he was involved.

This added greatly to the suspicions of Mr. Capron's solvency. None but a desperate man would ever undertake such a desperate enterprise. Elsie knew what was being said; Jack knew, and Cyrus knew.

Elsie was greatly annoyed; Cyrus chuckled over it and didn't mind a bit; Jack brooded over it. For the first time in his life he had a real case of introspection. Between him and Elsie there had been no financial thought Eros had knocked Mammon for the count. With her, Jack's penuriousness was merely prudence. Still she did wish that he would commit some act of covert generosity, "just to show people." First she thought she would hint at something of the kind to Jack. Then she thought she wouldn't—he might think she believed the things people said about him. Once she thought of asking Cyrus if he really was in financial difficulties—but she knew too well what he would say. He would tell her to "mind her own business." Altogether Elsie was about as unhappy as a girl can be who is still on good terms with the man she loves and to whom she is engaged.

As for Jack the sufferings he endured from his attack of introspection were something awful. No one who has not had an acute attack of the same kind can realize what he went through. He had known, of course, before this, that he was generally regarded as a "tightwad;" but it had not bothered him at all. Now it did; for a great fear was on him that Elsie had come to look upon him as others did.

One of Jack's first moves after his transformation was to visit Mr. Capron in his office. "I have heard—that is, there is a rumor," he began in an embarrassed manner, "that you are in financial difficulties, Mr. Capron. I have come to say that if I can be of any assistance my fortune is at your service."

"Ha! ha!" laughed the old man, "that's a good one! So I am in financial difficulties and Tightwad Codington is ready to loosen up! Who'd 'a thought it! My dear young man, I am no more in financial difficulties than you are. There's a gang been after my scalp and thought they had it. But I've been playing possum on them. I helped spread those rumors of financial decrepitude myself—it worked in with my plans. I caught 'em napping and have just given orders to my brokers which will make that gang of highbinders come across with several hundred thousand dollars before the Exchange closes. Thank you just the same. I'll tell Elsie about your offer; it will tickle her."

Reaching the office building, which he owned and where he had his headquarters, Jack gave Tony, the bootblack in the lower hallway, fifty cents for shining his shoes and told him to keep the change. Under pretence of a delayed Christmas present he bestowed five dollars on the elevator man who took him up. He sent for the janitor to come to his office and told him to announce a ten per cent raise in the pay of all the employees of the building. An impromptu meeting of the employes was held and grave doubts were expressed as to Mr. Codrington's sanity

"Aw, 'tain't nothin'," said Tony, the bootblack; "the guys goin' to git married—that's all"

That night Jack appeared at Elsie's with a bouquet of orchids and a five pound box of candy.

"Oh you dear, old Jack," cried Elsie "father has told me all about your offer. I always knew those horrid people lied when they called you a tightwad."

The section gang was on the siding waiting for the freight to pass, and jumped the fence in the nick of time. Their hand car was smashed to pieces. A dropped break beam is supposed to have been the cause of the trouble.

Trains were not held up at all, being able to pass the wreck on the siding.

The auxiliary arrived at noon and repaired the damage.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

DORIS HAS A CHAT WITH A LITTLE SOUTHERNER

Doris stepped very softly for fear her feet would touch a twig and make a noise.

"I'd hate to frighten him away now that I'm this close," she mused, slipping along carefully to a bush. Here she intended to hide, but Mr. Red Squirrel spied her, flipped his great big bushy red and gray tail and laughed.

"No fair, getting behind that bush," he chattered, cracking open the nut he held in his paw and nibbling on the kernel, "Come on out! I see you!"

"If I do, you won't run away?" Doris asked in a whisper. "Really and truly, Mr. Red Squirrel?"

"Mr. Fox Squirrel, if you please," chuckled the pretty red fellow.

"Well, I thought you didn't look like the Red Squirrels we have back North," laughed Doris. "You have lovely white ears and a white nose too, haven't you?"

"Of course, I have," replied Mr. Fox Squirrel. "But having a white nose and white ears wouldn't make me a Fox Squirrel. They call me that because I look like the old Sly Fox in color. You'll find all the Fox Squirrels who live down South here have white noses and white ears. But up North they don't care for the white ones."

"Well, you're certainly a dear," laughed Doris softly, "and I'm mighty glad to know you. Have you a wife in the trees here?"

"I sure have," chuckled Mr. Fox Squirrel. "Come along and meet her. She'll be glad to know you I'm sure," and he skipped over the ground to a Live Oak tree. Here up among the branches in a rude little nest made of sticks and grasses he looked for his mate.

"Guess she has gone away," laughed Doris looking up from the ground at the empty nest. "Where do you suppose she is?"

"I guess she's gone into the other house," replied Mr. Fox Squirrel and he ran to a hollow in the tree and poked his head inside and gave a merry chirp. "Come on up Doris. She's here."

Like a whiff of magic, Doris bounced up into the tree and there in the hollow, she met the lovely Mrs. Fox Squirrel. Nestled snug as a bug in a rug were two little baby fox squirrels.

Doris squealed with delight, much to Mama Fox Squirrel's pleasure.

"But tell me, Mr. Fox Squirrel," she laughed, petting one of the babies. "How does it come you have two nests? Or is that nest out on the limbs your nest?"

"Of course it's ours," chatted Mrs. Fox Squirrel. "That's one thing you will find about the Daddies among the Fox Squirrels. They always build two nests. One we use in sunny weather and the other in stormy weather. It's going to storm in a very few minutes so I brought the youngsters in here where I know they will be safe."

As Mrs. Fox Squirrel spoke, the rain began to patter down and Doris, bidding her new friends good-bye, hurried home as fast as she could run.

CALLES REFUSES BISHOPS' REQUEST

Cannot Amend Constitution Himself and Won't Introduce Measure.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 20. —President Calles last night, in a reply to the request of the Catholic Episcopate that he suspend the recently enforced religious regulations, say he is unable to amend the constitution, and because of his political convictions he cannot submit to congress a bill calling for modification of the religious laws.

The police, though admitting that the alleged conspiracy led by a few Catholic women in Mexico City and suburbs for armed risings was less serious than they first believed, continue their investigations into the affair. The economic boycott is having an increasingly depressing effect on business, and the capital is anxiously awaiting some definite action by the Government in response to the church authorities and the proposals of the business men.

Church Issues Orders.

The Episcopate has sent instructions to all the bishops to instruct Catholics not to worship in the churches where the municipally appointed committee in charge are anti-catholic, or whpere such committees have arrogated to themselves the functions and authorities belonging only to priests.

Manuel de La Peza, secretary of the Knights of Columbus in Mexico, has issued an open letter replying to the reports that the Government considers the Mexicon Knights disloyal to their native country in seeking foreign intervention or assistance. He declares that the Mexican delegates to the Philadelphia convention of that organization made no such action, nor asked aid of the American Knights in the religious situation in Mexica, and much less did they ask for action by the United States Government.

The Department of Commerce, Industry and Labor has receieved a message from the Mexican Commercial Attache at Buenos Aires asserting that numerous labor organizations in Argentina have manifested in support of the religious policy of President Calles.

WHERE THE MOSQUITO FORGETS TO STING.

About six hours by steamer from Venice, I came to the beautiful Brioni Islands, a small group off Pola in the Adriatic Sea. Of all the pleasant places on the Istrian coast, I think this spot must be claimed as the finest for a holiday and rest. It is different from most resorts. On the largest island which is the real resort, there is no village, simply round the lovely harbor stand the hotels and the Casino; yet the island is complete with every comfort as much as if it were next door to Naples. The irregular coastline is wooded down to the water's edge and the avenues away from the shore are flanked with palms and semi-tropical plants. The ruins of a Roman villa testify to the fact that it has been loved for a holiday for two thousand years. There are also the remains of a basilica arena and arches. Its beaches are a delight to children and to bathers and if there are mosquitos here, they forget to sting, for there has never been anyone stung on the Brioni Islands yet.

"Here you are!" shouted Buddy, leaping off the saddle. Up jumped Uncle Wiggily, the two long bologna sausages flipping and flopping in his side pockets. Up jumped Buddy to the handle bars. Up and down Uncle Wiggily pumped his feet, and the bike began to roll, carrying the two along the path in the woods.

"Wait! Stop! I want you!" howled the Bob Cat, running very fast. But he could not go as fast as Buddy's bike. All of a sudden, though, Uncle Wiggily ran over a sharp thorn.

"Pop!" sounded through the woods.

"What's that?" cried the bunny.

"Puncture!" yelled Buddy. "We can't go any more and the Bob Cat will get us! We have a flat tire! The Bob Cat will bite us!"

"No he won't!" shouted the rabbit. "I'll fix that puncture!" They were ahead of the Bob Cat by this time. Uncle Wiggily jumped off the bike and, taking one of the bologna sausages he quickly tied it, with long strings of grass, around the wheel that had a flat tire. The bologna made as fine a round tire as a heart could wish.

"Here we go again!" cried the rabbit, and before the Bob Cat could catch up to them Uncle Wiggily and Buddy rode on and got safely home. And the bologna sausage that was used as a tire was just as good for Mr. Bow Wow to eat as if it had not helped save the rabbit and guinea pig. So all was well, and if the egg beater doesn't drop the rice pudding down the back of the rocking chair, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the hungry hawk.

WHERE THE MOSQUITO FORGETS TO STING.

About six hours by steamer from Venice, I came to the beautiful Brioni Islands, a small group off Pola in the Adriatic Sea. Of all the pleasant places on the Istrian coast, I think this spot must be claimed as the finest for a holiday and rest. It is different from most resorts. On the largest island which is the real resort, there is no village, simply round the lovely harbor stand the hotels and the Casino; yet the island is complete with every comfort as much as if it were next door to Naples. The irregular coastline is wooded down to the water's edge and the avenues away from the shore are flanked with palms and semi-tropical plants. The ruins of a Roman villa testify to the fact that it has been loved for a holiday for two thousand years. There are also the remains of a basilica arena and arches. Its beaches are a delight to children and to bathers and if there are mosquitos here, they forget to sting, for there has never been anyone stung on the Brioni Islands yet.

Batteries

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

THE most impressionable years in life are in early childhood Then the strongest habits are formed, right habits or wrong habits, according to the training A bishop once said, "Give me a child till he is seven and you may have him the rest of his life" Because a child is little is no excuse for disorderliness and destructiveness Give a child toys, good toys, constructive toys, and teach him to respect them

MY flashlight has a button
To press to make it light.
That's how I save the flashes
To use when it gets night.
No matter what I want to find,
Or what I have to look behind,
I use it just to take a peek
Or else my battery gets weak!

Last night my father said: "Here, Tom,
I'll show you something new,
The Old Moon in the New Moon's arms
A-sailing through the blue."
Up high they sailed o'er house and tree
And as I looked it seemed to me
The Old Moon was so pale and cold
I'm sure his batteries were old!

HOW TO SWIM

by Lillian Cannon

POSITION TO ASSUME BEFORE YOU START TO FLOAT

It is while learning to be expert in the back stroke that one also can learn to float.

Floating, I have always maintained, is a gift and cannot be learned except by experience.

Some excellent swimmer in Chesapeake Bay that I know of, never have learned to float.

Instructions are simple. Lie on the back in the water with arms extended and lungs filled with air, until the body comes to rest. Then exhale slowly and inhale quickly.

The feet will drop at first until the body is perpendicular but, if one persists, the body will float with the face clear of the water.

After getting the hang of floating in this manner it is simple to raise the feet to the surface—but it requires long practice to keep them there.

THAT no kind of advertising will bring effective results unless the advertiser keeps his stock up to the standard of his claims to the public.

MEN? OH, WELL.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—Men are of some use after all! So the National Federation of Women's Institutions has decided. At a recent meeting a resolution was adopted urging more "co-operation with the men, especially with regard to choral and dramatic societies." The mere male receives few bouquets at meetings of the Federation, and even this one had a string on it. It was the only fear of Mrs. Amy Adams, who moved the resolution, that the men would say that "at last the women have admitted they need men's help."

The Princess Maria d'Bourbon of Spain, is a first cousin of King Alphonso, and she has come to America to spend a month with Mrs. Dahlberg, Chicago social leader. When she last visited America it was to see Americans work. This time the princess wishes to see Americans play, and she expects to live as American girls do. She intends to visit several of the larger cities.

Daily Short Story

THE TIGHTWAD

Our friends and acquaintances form a jury before which we are perpetually on trial: and their verdict is generally a just one, however much we may protest against. The verdict in the case of John M. Codington was: "Jack would be a first-rate fellow—if he wasn't such a tightwad." Jack had not made his money himself—his forebears had done that. But it was working for Jack; and he saw to it that it worked. There were no vacations, or eight-hour days for Jack's dollars.

So when it got about that Jack Codington was engaged to Elsie Capron, people laughed, and wondered, and even sneered. "Well, that would be a match!" said one. "Elsie Capron! she'll make his money fly for him." And another said: "What can Elsie be thinking of? He'll half starve her and never let her have a decent dress to her back." While still a third opinion—and this was the one generally held by the men—was that Elsie's father, Cyrus, was at the bottom of it all, using his daughter as a bait to try and get some of Jack's hoarded wealth coming his way to help him out of the financial difficulties in which, rumor said, he was involved.

This added greatly to the suspicions of Mr. Capron's solvency. None but a desperate man would ever undertake such a desperate enterprise. Elsie knew what was being said; Jack knew, and Cyrus knew.

Elsie was greatly annoyed; Cyrus chuckled over it and didn't mind a bit; Jack brooded over it. For the first time in his life he had a real case of introspection. Between him and Elsie there had been no financial thought Eros had knocked Mammon for the count. With her, Jack's penuriousness was merely prudence. Still she did wish that he would commit some act of covert generosity, "just to show people." First she thought she would hint at something of the kind to Jack. Then she thought she wouldn't—he might think she believed the things people said about him. Once she thought of asking Cyrus if he really was in financial difficulties—but she knew too well what he would say. He would tell her to "mind her own business." Altogether Elsie was about as unhappy as a girl can be who is still on good terms with the man she loves and to whom she is engaged.

As for Jack the sufferings he endured from his attack of introspection were something awful. No one who has not had an acute attack of the same kind can realize what he went through. He had known, of course, before this, that he was generally regarded as a "tightwad;" but it had not bothered him at all. Now it did; for a great fear was on him that Elsie had come to look upon him as others did.

One of Jack's first moves after his transformation was to visit Mr. Capron in his office. "I have heard—that is, there is a rumor," he began in an embarrassed manner, "that you are in financial difficulties, Mr. Capron. I have come to say that if I can be of any assistance my fortune is at your service."

"Ha! ha!" laughed the old man, "that's a good one! So I am in financial difficulties and Tightwad Codington is ready to loosen up! Who'd 'a thought it! My dear young man, I am no more in financial difficulties than you are. There's a gang been after my scalp and thought they had it. But I've been playing possum on them. I helped spread those rumors of financial decrepitude myself—it worked in with my plans. I caught 'em napping and have just given orders to my brokers which will make that gang of highbinders come across with several hundred thousand dollars before the Exchange closes. Thank you just the same. I'll tell Elsie about your offer; it will tickle her."

Reaching the office building, which he owned and where he had his headquarters, Jack gave Tony, the bootblack in the lower hallway, fifty cents for shining his shoes and told him to keep the change. Under pretence of a delayed Christmas present he bestowed five dollars on the elevator man who took him up. He sent for the janitor to come to his office and told him to announce a ten per cent raise in the pay of all the employees of the building. An impromptu meeting of the employes was held and grave doubts were expressed as to Mr. Codrington's sanity

"Aw, 'tain't nothin'," said Tony, the bootblack; "the guys goin' to git married—that's all"

That night Jack appeared at Elsie's with a bouquet of orchids and a five pound box of candy.

"Oh you dear, old Jack," cried Elsie "father has told me all about your offer. I always knew those horrid people lied when they called you a tightwad."

CARS JUMP TRACK.

Section Men on Siding Have To Run For Safety.

KEENE, August 20. — Several people, including the section gang, narrowly escaped death when a car on a through freight jumped the tracks at Keene Station on Thursday morning. The section gang was on the siding waiting for the freight to pass, and jumped the fence in the nick of time. Their hand car was smashed to pieces. A dropped break beam is supposed to have been the cause of the trouble.

Trains were not held up at all, being able to pass the wreck on the siding.

The auxiliary arrived at noon and repaired the damage.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

DORIS HAS A CHAT WITH A LITTLE SOUTHERNER

Doris stepped very softly for fear her feet would touch a twig and make a noise.

"I'd hate to frighten him away now that I'm this close," she mused, slipping along carefully to a bush. Here she intended to hide, but Mr. Red Squirrel spied her, flipped his great big bushy red and gray tail and laughed.

"No fair, getting behind that bush," he chattered, cracking open the nut he held in his paw and nibbling on the kernel, "Come on out! I see you!"

"If I do, you won't run away?" Doris asked in a whisper. "Really and truly, Mr. Red Squirrel?"

"Mr. Fox Squirrel, if you please," chuckled the pretty red fellow.

"Well, I thought you didn't look like the Red Squirrels we have back North," laughed Doris. "You have lovely white ears and a white nose too, haven't you?"

"Of course, I have," replied Mr. Fox Squirrel. "But having a white nose and white ears wouldn't make me a Fox Squirrel. They call me that because I look like the old Sly Fox in color. You'll find all the Fox Squirrels who live down South here have white noses and white ears. But up North they don't care for the white ones."

"Well, you're certainly a dear," laughed Doris softly, "and I'm mighty glad to know you. Have you a wife in the trees here?"

"I sure have," chuckled Mr. Fox Squirrel. "Come along and meet her. She'll be glad to know you I'm sure," and he skipped over the ground to a Live Oak tree. Here up among the branches in a rude little nest made of sticks and grasses he looked for his mate.

"Guess she has gone away," laughed Doris looking up from the ground at the empty nest. "Where do you suppose she is?"

"I guess she's gone into the other house," replied Mr. Fox Squirrel and he ran to a hollow in the tree and poked his head inside and gave a merry chirp. "Come on up Doris. She's here."

Like a whiff of magic, Doris bounced up into the tree and there in the hollow, she met the lovely Mrs. Fox Squirrel. Nestled snug as a bug in a rug were two little baby fox squirrels.

Doris squealed with delight, much to Mama Fox Squirrel's pleasure.

"But tell me, Mr. Fox Squirrel," she laughed, petting one of the babies. "How does it come you have two nests? Or is that nest out on the limbs your nest?"

"Of course it's ours," chatted Mrs. Fox Squirrel. "That's one thing you will find about the Daddies among the Fox Squirrels. They always build two nests. One we use in sunny weather and the other in stormy weather. It's going to storm in a very few minutes so I brought the youngsters in here where I know they will be safe."

As Mrs. Fox Squirrel spoke, the rain began to patter down and Doris, bidding her new friends good-bye, hurried home as fast as she could run.

CALLES REFUSES BISHOPS' REQUEST

Cannot Amend Constitution Himself and Won't Introduce Measure.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 20. —President Calles last night, in a reply to the request of the Catholic Episcopate that he suspend the recently enforced religious regulations, say he is unable to amend the constitution, and because of his political convictions he cannot submit to congress a bill calling for modification of the religious laws.

The police, though admitting that the alleged conspiracy led by a few Catholic women in Mexico City and suburbs for armed risings was less serious than they first believed, continue their investigations into the affair. The economic boycott is having an increasingly depressing effect on business, and the capital is anxiously awaiting some definite action by the Government in response to the church authorities and the proposals of the business men.

Church Issues Orders.

The Episcopate has sent instructions to all the bishops to instruct Catholics not to worship in the churches where the municipally appointed committee in charge are anti-catholic, or where such committees have arrogated to themselves the functions and authorities belonging only to priests.

Manuel de La Peza, secretary of the Knights of Columbus in Mexico, has issued an open letter replying to the reports that the Government considers the Mexicon Knights disloyal to their native country in seeking foreign intervention or assistance. He declares that the Mexican delegates to the Philadelphia convention of that organization made no such action, nor asked aid of the American Knights in the religious situation in Mexica, and much less did they ask for action by the United States Government.

The Department of Commerce, Industry and Labor has received a message from the Mexican Commercial Attache at Buenos Aires asserting that numerous labor organizations in Argentina have manifested in support of the religious policy of President Calles.

JAPAN IN LEAD FOR AMERICAN TENNIS FINALS

Wins Opening Singles in Sets With the Cubans.

TWO VICTORIES

Smashing Match Between Banet of Paris and Sekiwo Tawara.

MONTREAL, Aug. 20.—(Canadian Press).—Japan went into a comfortable lead in the American Zone Davis Cup doubles when they won both opening singles matches against the Cuban team yesterday. Takeicho Harada defeated Rogelio Paris, Cuban captain, in the first match 7-5, 6-0, 6-3 after a thrilling match in which Harada's placements proved a deciding factor once Paris started to tire in the second set. The Cuban captain was greatly handicapped by slipping on the grass courts to which he was unaccustomed.

Sekiwo Tawara made it two consecutive victories for Japan when he beat Dr. Vincente Banet, of Cuba in three gruelling sets, 9-7, 6-1, 6-2 in which the score did not do justice to Dr. Banet, who made a courageous fight. It was a smashing match between the two but Banet, like his captain, Paris, tired after his first gruelling set and lacked a keen edge in the latter two sets though he continually pressed Tawara. The latter found Banet most disconcerting at the net, and had great difficulty in confining him to a baseline game.

Tomorrow Harada and Tawara will meet Paris and Raoul Chacon, of Cuba, in the doubles.

DERBY ENTRY IS FAVORITE

Cormach Expected to Win St. Leger Next Month.

FINAL CLASSIC

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 20.—(By Canadian Press).—On the historic Town Moor course on Wednesday, Sept. 8, the cream of the three-year-olds of the English Turf will race in St. Leger, fifth and last of the season's great classics. Leading contenders, Coronach, Swift and Sure, Comedy King and Lance Gaye, have been intensively preparing for several weeks past, and will be trained to the minute when they face the starter in the old but ever-thrilling struggle for thoroughbred supremacy.

The distance, making the senior classic the hardest race of the five, is a mile, six furlongs and 132 yards. The monetary value of the great race approximates $13,000. The St. Leger was established in 1776—four years before the Derby. Two hundred and ninety-nine were nominated, but conspicuously absent from the entry is the beautifully built Colorado, Lord Derby's Phalaris colt who won the first classic, the Two Thousand Guineas, and finished third in the Epsom Derby.

In the opinion of the average turfite, there can be no doubt concerning the winner of the Doncaster classic. Coronach, Lord Woolavington's giant chestnut, son of Hurry On out of Wet Kiss, is the dominant three-year-old of the season.

Coronach's wonderful performances in after mid-season races gave sporting writers cause to speculate on how he ever lost the Two Thousan Guineas. In the Newmarket classic he was defeated by Colorado, who won with a great burst of speed. In the Derby Coronach came into his own and from the start left no doubt of his supremacy. He won in a canter. Colorado was third, and Lace Gayes second. Coronach later "ran away" with the St. James Palace Stakes at Ascot. from a good field, finishing 20 lengths in front of Sir Abe Bailey's Lex, a colt of no mean ability. To top these, in the rich Sandown Eclipse Stakes a few weeks ago, Coronach won at his leisure and in most impressive fashion.

If Coronach goes to the post for the St. Leger in good condition, it will take a wonder horse to defeat him—and such a horse does not appear to be forthcoming. The other first-class three-year-olds have practically all bowed down before Lord Woolavington's great colt at one time or another. They are Sir Abs Bailey's Lex, Lord Astor's Swift and Sure, who was running well in the Derby until put out of his stride by a dog, W. M. G. Singer's Lance Gaye, second in the Derby, and Fred Curzon's Comedy King, who is slated to have developed well during the summer.

The leading fillies—and September is noted as "mare's month" — are Lord Astor's fine bay by Buchan—Long Suit, winner of the Oaks, and her stable companion Gay Bird, third in the Epsom classic; Anthony de Rothschild's Pillion, winner of the One Thousand Guineas, and Lord Durham's Trilogy, second in that race. None of these four leaders are entered in the St. Leger. Sir Abe Bailey's brown filly Sonatina, who had a notable two-year-old record, is nominated, however, and another good filly in the race is Capt. R. Brassey's Part Worn.

The St. Leger winner invariably turns out to be a dominant factor on the turf the following season—witness the success of Sir John Rutherford's great colt Solario, winner last year for whom his owner has refused an offer of half a million dollars. One of the "promising" three-year-olds of May and June may have developed so well as to threaten Coronach. But it is hardly likely.

OSHAWA, Aug. 20.—Peterborough Rotary Juveniles and Royal Midgets played their return games with Oshawa St. Andrew's and St. George's here yesterday evening and broke even, the Juveniles losing to Oshawa by 11 to 7, while the Midgets defeated Oshawa 18 to 6. NEW YORK LOSES THE FINAL GAME Doubles by Grimm and Freigau Brings in Two Runs.

ALLOWS FOUR HITS

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—(Canadian Press).—Chicago made it two out of three from New York today by taking the final game of the series 2 to 1. Although held to four hits, two of the blows were doubles by Grimm and Freigau, following a walk to Wilson, which netted two runs.

Bill Sherdel, who was batted out of the box by Brooklyn on Tuesday, came back yesterday and lead his team mates, the St. Louis Cardinals, to a 6 to 2 victory. It was his sixth victory over Brooklyn out of seven starts.

The Cardinals are now within four percentage point of the League-leading Pittsburgh Pirates.

Pittsburgh and Philadelphia split a double header, the Phillies winning the first, 3 to 1, and losing the night-cap 4 to 0. Al Nixon broke up a pitchers' battle in the first game with a home run in the tenth, scoring Carlson ahead of him. The Pirates had runners on second and third in their half, but Carlson fanned Cronin and Cuyler to retire the side.

Emil Yde held the Phillies to 4 hits in the second contest, the Pirates bunching three hits with a walk in the second inning for enough runs to win the game. Another tally came in the seventh.

Cincinnati and Boston were not scheduled.

GORDON SOCCER FINAL SATURDAY AFTERNOON

Thistle and Quakers Kick-Off at Three O'clock Prompt.

The Gordon Soccer Final is scheduled for Saturday afternoon at Nicholls Oval when the present cup holders, the Thistle, will meet the Quakers, who held the cup a few years ago. Kick off is scheduled for 3 o'clock prompt when Alex McKinley will officiate as referee and will be aided as neutral linesmen by J. C. Russell and William Rickard.

According to rumour the Quakers have signed on some brilliant stars so as to assist them to win the cup while the Thistle are in a peculiar predicament through the lack of qualified players but they intend giving the Quakers a good game, if they are able to place a full eleven on the field of play.

The Quakers have signed Roy Black, of Omemee, and include him in their team against the Thistle tomorrow. He will act as pivot, in place of Alex. Mitchell who was injured in the five-aside competition.

Quakers team is: —W. Curtis goal, Jack Cridland and H. Curtis backs; W. Logan, Carmichael and A. Maker half backs; Burgess, Geo. Logan, R. Black, Alf. Wilson and T. Williams forwards.

No definite selection of the Thistle eleven has been made but all players to be at the Oval no later than 2.45 p.m., so as to get the game started at three o'clock.

BOSTON WINS FIFTH GAME

Game Lost in Seventh When Hunnefield Makes Error.

TIE FOR SECOND

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—(Canadian Press).—By shutting out Chicago 1 to 0 here yesterday, Boston hung up its fifth straight victory. The lone run of the game, came in the seventh when after Jacobson's double and Rosenthal's single, Hunnefield erred in handling Regan's grounder.

The Athletics hopped into a tie with Cleveland for second place by trimming Detroit 9 to 1 in the first game of the series. Sam Gray and Lefty Willis held the Tigers to four hits, the latter relieving Gray after he had walked three to load the bases with only one out in the fifth. Mezler, rookie outfielder from Wichita, Kansas, knocked in three of the Athletics' runs.

There were no other games scheduled.

LEAFS INCREASE LEAGUE LEAD BY BEATING BEARS

Error in Seventh With Bases Full Breaks Game.

FOURTH SHUT-OUT

Skeeters Beat Bisons in the First Game of Series.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—(Canadian Press).—The Toronto Leafs pushed themselves further out in front in the International League standing by defeating the Newark Bears, 5 to 1, in a hurling duel between Stewart and Chesterfield, which was broken up in the seventh inning through an error by Shortstop Kingdon, with the bases filled.

Jersey City trimmed the Buffalo Bisons in the first game of their series, shutting them out, 2 to 0. It was Parks' 18th win of the season, and his fourth shut out. Of the five hits he allowed three were scratches.

Rochester defeated the Reading Keys by a score of 5 to 1, through the effective pitching of Karpp, who kept the hits well scattered, striking out six and leaving ten stranded on bases.

Baltimore and Syracuse did not play on account of rain.

NEW BIG LEAGUE BEING LAUNCHED

Five Strong Cities Now Lined Up, Says Pittsburgh Paper.

ALL AMERICAN.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Aug 20.—The Pittsburgh Press printed the following yesterday:

Another attempt to launch a third major baseball league is in the offing. This statement may be greeted with a loud ha-ha by staid old attaches of organized baseball, but it is true, nevertheless. The new loop has five strong cities lined up at the present time, and has turned down the proffer of a syndicate in a Canadian city to put $2,000,000 behind a franchise because it is desired to have the league a purely United States loop.

Eight-Club Circuit

There will be eight clubs in the circuit, and it will make its start in 1927. In fact, the five clubs which have taken franchises are ready to go at any time, but there has been some difference of opinion as to the three other cities to be admitted, although they are knocking for admission.

The above was learned yesterday from a man who is to be conducted with the movement, a man with practical baseball experience, who said that Pittsburg would have a place in the league, and that already grounds for a park had been obtained.

Strong Financially

When asked what backing the local club would have, he replied that its financial status would be much more stable than that behind the local club in the old Federal League, which interested for a time several men of millions.

The Federal League might have succeeded had its affairs been conducted along lines more safe and sane than those which prevailed. It lacked sufficient men versed in baseball affairs to make the movement a success, but if all reports are true, the coming venture will not be so handicapped.

Dissatisfied Players

Whether a third major league can succeed is another question. It depends upon a number of things. There is no doubt that there are a large number of dissatisfied ball players in the major leagues today who could easily be induced to make the leap if they were assured their salaries for a reasonable period.

Any baseball venture has to be conducted by men with baseball brains as well as business sense to be successful, and the fate of a third league will hinge largely upon the character of the men who put their money into it.

SUDDEN DEATH GAME TO-NIGHT?

Cogs or Crescents Will Meet Lindsay in First O.B.A.A. Round.

DEPENDS ON ORDER.

The second game between Cogs and Crescents at Exhibition Park this evening may be a sudden-death affair to determine a winner to meet the champions of the Lindsay Town League in the first round of the O.B.A.A. semi-finals. The whole thing hinges on the order issued to-day by Ford Moynes of Lindsay and Art. Kimmel of Peterborough, the O.B.A.A. representatives, who will make arrangements for the first round play-off.

The first and second round games in the Intermediate series are sudden-death contests.

The game this evening will start at 5.30 o'clock, with Ed. LeBarr and Alex. Kay in charge.

TENNIS FINAL HERE SATURDAY

Peterborough Club Has Two Game Lead Over Oshawa.

MEET TO-MORROW.

The final games in the C. O. L. T. A. will be played on Saturday Aug. 21st. Peterborough Tennis Club leads by two points over Oshawa and Oshawa plays in Peterboro on Saturday.

The Peterboro club is confident and expects to keep the H. A. Morrow trophy but Oshawa club has strength ened up considerably in the last two matches and expects to have no difficulty in taking enough events to capture the cup.

Oshawa defeated Port Hope 6-1, in Port Hope and 6-1 in Oshawa while the best Peterborough could do in Port Hope in the last match was 4-3.

Members of the Peterboro Club and their friends are reminded that after the match the Oshawa team will be taken to Chemong for the dance and the management of the Chemong Pavilion have kindly arranged to start the dancing at about 7.45 p.m.

Pitcher in act of delivering ball to batsman accidentally drops it to the ground. What is the ruling?

If there are runners on the bases at the time, the dropping of the ball by the pitcher is construed as a balk.

In such a situation the ball becomes dead and all base-runners are entitled to advance one base.

If there are no runners on at the time, no penalty is imposed if the pitcher drops the ball to the ground while in the act of delivering it to the batsman. It is merely treated as an accident.

Both major leagues are now a unit in this interpretation.

FOREMAN WINS SHOOTING TROPHY

Hamilton Officer is Winner of Governor-General's Match.

OTTAWA, August 20 (Canadian Press).—Lieut. J. Foreman of Hamilton to-day won the Governor-General's trophy, after one of the most dramatic finishes ever seen on the local ranges. At the end of the 15 shots at 900 yards, Foreman and Alex. Parnell of Montreal were tied for first place with 246 points. The tie was shot off immediately and Parnell was finished first with a score of 23.

Amidst intense silence on the part of the large crowd which had gathered to witness the match, Foreman slowly sighted and fired the shot which won the match, a perfect bull's eye. The crowd broke into cheers and rushed Foreman, who had a difficult minute breaking free. At was at once chaired and carried on the traditional march to headquarters on the shoulders of the marksmen.

ENNISMORE PICNIC A HAPPY EVENT

Hundreds from City and Country Mingle and Have A Good Time

The annual fowl dinner and lawn social given by the parishioners of St. Martin's Church, Ennismore, was held yesterday on the church grounds, and was most successful in every way. The hospitality of the ladies of Ennismore was once more shown in the excellent dinner well served, and participated in by many citizens of Peterborough and practically the whole countryside. Many of the clergy of other parishes were also present.

Sports, games and amusements of various kinds were run off for the entertainment of the large crowd present. Father McCauley made every one feel at home, and night brought to a conclusion one of the happiest of many annual gatherings that are held in the city and district throughout the season.

MANY INDICTMENTS IN FLORIDA FRAUDS

Charges of Using Mail to Defraud for Land Schemes

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Aug. 20 (United News).—An extensive investigation into Florida land frauds which has been under way quietly for several months resulted late today in more than forty Federal grand juries indictments against corporations and individuals on charges of using the mails to defraud, and conspiracy to defraud.

Two companies are involved, the developers of Fulford-by-the-Sea, located north of Miami and Arcadia Gardens, near Arcadia.

Warrants for the arrest of the realty promoters named in the indictments were to be sent to the various cities where the men are reported to be, according to William M. Goberor, Tampa, United States District Attorney, under whose direction the investigation was carried on.

MEIGHEN FACES MANY HECKLERS

Tells Edmonton Audience That Most Liberals Are Protectionists.

QUOTES KING.

EDMONTON, Alta., Aug. 20 (Canadian Press). — In his address here last night, Premier Arthur Meighen charged that two thirds of the Liberal party were as "protectionist" as I am. In the last election Mackenzie King himself had asserted that his policy and that of the Progressives were the same. Yet Mr. King, so Mr. Meighen continued, had scarcely left Manitoba when in the City of Kingston he declared, "We know that our industries need safeguarding against competition from countries of depreciated currency, against competition from the United States.'

"Did you," Mr. Meighen queried, "ever know of a more definite declaration of protection than that?"

There was some heckling as Mr. Meighen dealt with the Robb budget and asserted that the Canadian manufacturers of motor cars had been left as high protection as before.

"Under the good old Liberal government," said a voice.

There was more comment as the Premier continued. He at last remarked, "Sometimes people who are badly disappointed lose their tempers.'

Referring to prorogation and his appointment of acting ministers, Mr. Meighen asked: "Have you ever known Mr. King out of office when he was not shivering with fear for responsible government?"

Interruptions continued from the side gallery and the Premier responded to them with, "Wonderful, the constitutional lawyers in that gallery."

LAWN BOWLING

A mixed bowling tournament was staged by the members of the Peterborough club, last night. Two ladies and two men composed each of the rinks. Ten rinks were entered, the competition proving one of the most successful the club has staged. W. J. Oke's rink came out winners by a score of 14 points. The following were the skips for the different rinks: —Seymour, Freeman, Bacon, Martin, Curvin, Gimblett, Elliot, Fox, Bredin and Oke.

INJUNCTION ISSUED

PORT HURON, Aug. 20 (Canadian Press).—Judge Harvey Tappan issued an injunction today restraining Mrs. Victori a C. The case comes to trial here in October.

INVISIBLE BUT UNBREAKABLE FIVE LINKS CONNECT EMPIRE

Bishop of London, in Toronto Speech, Defines Ties To Britain.

CITES WAR SACRIFICE.

Common Blood, Flag, Religion, and Interest and Other Bonds.

TORONTO, Aug. 20.—Five invisible bonds, which no one can break, form a chain of Empire which is the most extraordinary thing in the world, Right Hon. and Right Rev. Arthur Foley Winnington-Ingram, Bishop of London, told an immense joint luncheon meeting of the Canadian and Empire Clubs of Toronto at the King Edward Hotel yesterday.

These intangible ties which bind the Dominions so closely to the Mother Country are: The common blood; the common flag; the common religions; the common interest, and the common sacrifice.

"The British Empire is one of the most extraordinary things in this world, held together by invisible bonds which no one can see, but wich no one can break," his Lordship declared amid cheers, after announcing as his subject "The Bonds of the British Empire."

Tribute To Canon Cody.

"What are these wonderful bonds?" the speaker asked. "We are apt almost to take them for granted. The first one is the common blood. I went around Canon Cody's wonderful church of St. Paul's of which all Toronto is proud, no matter of what denomination, and they should also be proud of Canon Cody. The old verger said that when, at the opening of the war, the first service was held, he never saw such a sight, as every one stood up while 'Rule, Britannia,' was played. The call of the common blood answered from end to end of Canada when the Old Country called for help.

Call of the Blood.

"The wonderful thing that binds us together is the common blood which flows in our veins. They gave up their farms, their businesses, and answered the call of the blood when the war came.

"I am very anxious to keep Canada of British stock," Dr. Winnington-Ingram emphasized, amid a tumult of applause. "We came over in a ship with hundreds of people who were going to settle in Canada, but who did not understand a word I said." The speaker explained that he had baptized a baby on board the liner, and the people did not understand what was happening until he took the infant into his arms.

The Common Flag.

The second bond of Empire was "that strange and magical thing we call the common flag," the Bishop said. "If there is one loyal country in the world it is the Dominion of Canada so I am not here to plead for loyalty in Canada because I feel there is no more loyal Dominion than Canada'" he continued. "But do we realize what the flag stands for, Red white and blue wonderful things stand for liberty, justice and the white purity of home life. These are the things which have made the Old Country great, and these are the things which are going to make the new countries great.

"We want to keep the purity of home life," he went on, after voicing his stand against the increase of divorce. "What I am standing for is for those principles of justice, mercy and purity which, I believe, are the foundation and strength of every nation."

The Common Religion.

"Then we also have, and we must make the most of it, in spite of our differences, the common religion," Dr. Winnington-Ingram said, explaining his third bond, and he went on to deplore the waste of energy in sects. "I believe we should foster the spirit of brotherly love as one of the great invisible bonds which bind this Empire together," he added.

The Common Interest.

"Then we come to the other bonds which, when you look at them, are more or less invisible, and yet extremely strong," the Bishop remarked. "For instance, you see the family life which we all fostered, and which we have been brought up upon. We find that very strong in a new country, and I believe that when you put this with the common religion and the common call of the blood you get what still will bind us together— the common interest.

"I am one of those who feel we ought to trade more in the Empire than we do. If the Old Country and its great sister nation are really to progress, it is by the common interest which binds us together in these tremendous bonds.

The Common Sacrifice

"I come lastly to the common sacrifice," Dr. Winnington-Ingram declared. "I am not, for a moment, going to speak as if the war was the greatest sacrifice we have had. What about those Imperial loyalists who came up and who fought and really established Canada? I think this Empire has really been founded upon sacrifice. My heart goes out to those in the West who are really developing the land. There was sacrifice there in the old days, and there was a great and tremendous common sacrifice in the war.

"We are bound together more closely now than ever before," the speaker declared. "Our boys are lying in the same graves; dead for the same cause. Here is the red cord of sacrifice which nothing can break.

Appeal for British Solidarity

"Let us keep these cords so strong that nothing can weaken them for a moment; and if we do, and carry on our Empire in that spirit of self-sacrifice and service, the British Empire shall be in future an even greater boon to mankind than it has been in the past," his Lordship concluded.

Colonel A. E. Kirkpatrick, President of the Canadian Club, presided, and introduced the speaker. G. H. Sedgewick, President of the Empire Club, proposed a vote of thanks to the Bishop of London. Others at the head table were: G. B. Woods, H. H. Williams, Rev. Canon W. L. Baynes-Reed, George Wilson, W. H. Cawthra, Ormand Blyth, Col. W. W. Denison, W. K. Pearce, Professor P. Balbaud, Right Rev. J. F. Sweeney(Bishop of Toronto); C. L. Foster, Mark Bredin, Rev. H. C. Thomas, W. C. Kettlewell, E. P. Brown, K.C.; Rev. R. R. Armstrong and Dr. R. A. Pyne.

TREE BRANCHES BREAK SERVICE

Have Caused Several Shutdowns By Short Circuits on Wires.

BEING TRIMMED.

The very high winds of the last few days have caused several shutdowns in the electric service by blowing tree branches into the lines. This has occurred only in sections where the lines are old and have not been re-built, and where extensive tree trimming has not been done.

The very luxuriant tree growth of this summer has no doubt aggravated the trouble. When a short circuit occurs the current cannot be turned on until the trees are trimmed and cleared away from the lines.

A shut down which happened this morning in part of a circuit serving the south end of the city was caused by trees on Stewart Street south of Sherbrooke. The Utilities Commission's men were trimming trees in the same block, when a tree branch blew across the high tension lines making a tremendous flash, only about a hundred feet from where the men were working. Luckily none were hurt.

The Commissioners have inaugurated an extensive rebuilding program this year, which will clear up most of the trouble. They regret the inconvenience to the housewives, and will do the best they can to prevent further shut downs from this cause.

EPIDEMIC OF SORE THROATS IS CHECKED

GUILFORD, Conn., Aug. 20. — A sore throat ailment which has spoiled vacations of scores of visitors and which has been held responsible for five death, was on the wane t-day. State health authorities were sanquine that the epidemic had not secured a foothold elsewhere through distribution of milk from a dairy which now is closed and in which the source of infection was localized in a man who had milked cows while suffering unknowingly, from spetic sore throat. State inspectors and veterinarians to-day visited dairies and farms in this and and adjoining towns to make sure that there had been no spread of infection of any sort among milch cows.

THEATRE

AT THE CAPITOL.

REX BEACH'S "PADLOCKED"

One of the interesting Allan Dwan productions is the feature, in "Padlocked," at the Capitol Theatre for the last half of this week. It is one of those stories with a distinctly modern setting and has an interesting theme in its delineation of the conflict between the ideas of the old and the new generation. There is a very fine cast, with Noah Beery as the hypocrite who doesn't realize his hyprocrisy; Henry Gilbert, a wealthy man obsessed by ideas for reforming the world. He carries his opinions to extremes in the management of his household, forbidding even harmless amusements to his wife and daughter, both of whom long for diversion. The wife dies suddenly and the daughter rebels against the father's harshness and goes to earn her own living by dancing in a Broadway cabaret. One of the miracles of the screen is enacted in this picture in the picturing of the young girl as being innocent in the extreme, even when she is doing spectacular dances. But nothing disturbs her pheomenal goodness, not even the attentions of a man about town, Monte Herman, whose companion is enacted in her usual splendid fashion by Louise Dresser, as Lois Alcott. Through the machinations of her stepmother, a wily lady, Edith, the daughter, spends some time in a reformatory, and then is paroled to Herman. Her love affair with a young visitor to the house sets her free finally from the complications of home life and the attentions of Herman. The role of the wide-eyed Edith is taken splendidly by Lois Moran.

"The Adventures of Mazie" number on the programme provides an excellent portion of the entertainment, also an "Our Gang" comedy.

Argue On Edge Of Wharf Over Ederle's Stroke Two Men Fall In—One Drowns With Spectator

NEW YORK, Aug. 20 (United News).—Two men died here because they picked the edge of a wharf to debate Gertrude Ederle's swimming methods.

"She throws her arms up over her head like this, and brings them down like this," explained one of the men, whose name was Foley. And as he showed how it was done, his waving arms struck Thomas O'Keefe, knocking him into the water.

Foley jumped in after O'Keefe, and a spectator jumped after the two.

Policeman Corcoran went in next and saved O'Keefe, but Foley, whose first name was not known and the other man, who is still unidentified were drowned.

Dragons Like That Slain In Legend Of St. George Sought On Australian Island By American Hunters

NEW YORK, Aug. 20 (United Press).—Dragons that blow smoke from their nose and eat a small pony for Sunday dinner, reported to exist on the Island of Komod, off the coast of Australia, will be sought by a party of unnamed Americans, according to word received here from London.

The dragons were reported by Alan Cobham, the British aviator, on his airplane flight from London to Australia.

They were described as terrible creatures like giant lizards, some twelve feet long with long claws and long red tongues which they darted just like the ones that St. George killed. They emitted a vapor, according to description, as the legendary dragons were said to do.

On report of the discovery, scientists became interested, believing that the reptiles might be a line remaining from some prehistoric age.

SEEKING PARTY ON TRENT CANAL

W. A. Peace and Three Others Are Missing in Motor Boat

DUE AT ROSEDALE

TORONTO, Aug. 20. —(Canadian Press). — Friends of W. A. Peace, manager of the Toront Branch of the Imperial Life Assurance Company, are anxious concerning his whereabouts. Accompanied by his two sons, aged 17 and 15 years, and a mechanic, he set out last Saturday from Perth, Ont., in a 35 foot speed boat, intending to proceed by waterway to Rosedale, Balsam Lake, where party should have arrived on Monday or Tuesday. No news of their whereabouts have yet been received.

His wife made enquiries by long distance telephone at Rosedale today and found that there was no news of party ther

Mrs. Peace stated that she was not worrying, but thought that he was stopping somewhere between Trenton and Rosedale because of stormy weather.

Mrs. E. W. A. Peace of Toronto, called the Trent Valley Canal office here regarding her husband.

The only reports they have up to the present is from two other boats who say they passed a smaller boat between locks 9 and 10 near Campbellford. This boat they say contained a man about 55 years of age and a boy of about 15. The Canal man understood Mrs. Peace to say that the other boy was travelling by car.

Statistics compiled by expert psychologists reveal that the average age at which twenty of the greatest inventions were produced is thirty-two.

THE STOCK MARKET

Selling Pressure Forces Industrial Shares Down

NEW YORK, August 20 (Canadian Press). — Selling pressure against standard industrials was renewed in to-day's stock market, which showed alternate periods of weakness and strength. United States Steel Common broke to 149 3-4, or about 10 points below the high established earlier in the week, on an announcement that the steel industry was operating below eighty per cent. of capacity this week for the first time in several months.

A break in steel, which took place around the noon hour, followed an early period of strength during which pools were again active in a number of specialties in which favorable merger or dividend developments are believed to be pending. Supporting orders quickly made their appearance and the market was again headed upward in the early afternoon.

Good buying was noted in railroad equipment shares, several new orders for signal and train control devices being announced during the day. Rails lost ground with industrials.

Smelters Features Trade With Six Point Gain

TORONTO, August 20 (Canadian Press).—After touching a high of 238, Consolidated Smelters closed at 237 for a net gain of 6 points in the trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. Brazilian Traction, which was again the active leader, firmed ½.

Prices were also inclined to strengthen the remainder of a moderately wide list.

The paper stocks continued active, Abitibi strengthening one-quarter to 87½, and Brompton easing one-half to 34. Canners Preferred was up one-quarter to 68 3-4, while Nickel was off the same amount to 37. Page Hersey Preferred firmed one-half to 102. The oils were firm, British American and International Petroleum being up one-quarter to 55¼ and 34¼ respectively. In the mining list Noranda weakened 20 cents to 18.80 and Dome 30 cents to 11.20, while McIntyre gained ten to 26.20, and Nipissing five to 5.55. Bank of Commerce was off 1¼ to 221 3-4.

Wheat Price Goes Up On Rush Of Buying Orders

CHICAGO, August 20 (Canadian Press).—Rushes to buy brought about a rapid early advance to-day in wheat values here. The unexpected strength of Liverpool quotations gave emphasis to reports that European crops have turned out much below what was looked for. Starting 7-8 to 2 1-8 higher, the Chicago wheat market quickly scored slight additional gains. Corn and oats were firmer, corn opening unchanged to 3-8c up, and subsequently showing a little advance all around. Provisions tended downward. Unfavorable weather in the North-West, interfering with the harvest of spring wheat, both north and south of the Canadian boundary, acted as a further stimulus to the buying side of the market here. A less liberal movement of domestic winter wheat to primary terminals was also a general subject of comment. Meanwhile heavy profit-taking sales counted somewhat as a check on upward swings in the market, and led at times to setbacks.

Mine Trade Is Active With Prices Irregular

TORONTO, Aug. 20. —(Canadian Press). — Barry Holly, Teck Hughes, and West Dome were most active stocks in an active session of the Standard Mining Exchange to-day. prices were irregular. Barry Holly gained 3 1-2 cents to 62 1-2. Teck Hughes lost two cents to 4.43 and West Dome firmed one half to 20 1-2.

Trading in Dome was light but the stock closed at noon 23 cents higher at 11.30, while Norando lost 20 cents to 18.80. Kirkland Lake was off four cents to 1. and Hollinger five cents to 19.45 while McIntyre and Wright Hargreaves were unchanged at 26.15 and 8.65 respectively. Tough Oakes gained 3 1-2 to 48 and Vipond four to 1.84. In the Silver List Contagas and Nipissing each jumped ten cents to 4.50 and 5.65 respectively and Mining Corporation six to 3.97. Peterson Lake Cobalt, a new issue, firmed one eighth to 17 1-8.

Carradus, in the Church of the Redeemer here to-morrow afternoon. His Lordship will conduct the entire service from the opening and the hearing of the responses to the final "I now pronounce thee man and wife." After this Rev. R. A. Earth Will Be Warmer and Give Larger Crops Is Indication Of Swedish Scientists' Investigations

BERLIN, Aug. 20 (United News).—A noticeable warming up of the earth, although not due until the far distant years, will come in time to permit increased crops and thus prevent starvation by over-population, Svante Arrhenius, famous Swedish scientist, concludes

In his book, "Earth and the Universe," Arrhenius predicts climatic changes thousands of years hence. He asserts that even in countries where the soil now seeds practically nothing, men of the future will be able to reap rich crops. The gradual warming of the earth's temperature will be brought about by increase of carbonic acid in the atmosphere, the scientist believes.

His findings are based in part on those of earlier scientists, who revealed that carbonic acid and hydrogen are the heat retaining agencies in the air.

TORONTO ROTARIAN REPORTED MISSING, SIMPLY HOLIDAYING

W. A. Peace, Insurance Executive, Tarried at Trenton With Sons.

TO BALSAM LAKE.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 21.—It was an extremely indignant W. A. Peace, manager of the Toronto branch of the Imperial Life Assurance Company, who landed here late yesterday afternoon several hours after rumors, or at least apprehensions, from Toronto that he and his two sons, John and James, were missing on a boat trip somewhere between Trenton and Balsam Lake.

Balsam Lake, with its ghostly, gallant and sinister reflections, and a Rotarian unheard from for a week, although expected at yesterday's luncheon in Toronto, provided the pegs upon which the Toronto Star hung an "eight column streamer" in box-car type and a noon edition story that emphasized the absence of Mr. Peace and his two sons.

Follow-up enquiries for later editions located Mr. Peace at Lock No. 8, Bradley's Bay, about 2.30 p.m. He immediately telephoned his wife and office to overtake the solicitous and alarmist rumors and to allay probable worry of his wife and friends.

"My wife wasn't anxious about us," Mr. Peace told The Examiner last night. "She knew I had started out on a holiday with our boys to get the benefit of a few weeks in the open. I was simply getting away from things for a short time. We visited in Perth last Saturday, sailed down the Rideau to Kingston, again visited friends in Trenton, tuned up the boat and started on our way up the Trent yesterday. Common sense would tell any one we couldnt possibly reach Balsam Lake in a couple of days, especially the why my wife was not alarmed, even when reporters came around yesterday for a picture of me. I realize that anything mentioning Balsam Lake these days is news, but in spite of that it seems to me The Star might have waited a few hours and saved us the annoyance and our friends the anxiety such a story is bound to cause.

Even the canal department was called upon for trace of the supposedly missing boat. The first news here indicated that it had left Trenton on the 14th, but Joe Poulton at the town bridge and Pat Morgan at the lock above Campbellford couldn't offer one clue. Two boats had gone down stream this week, but none up. It was believed then that the Peace craft must be still around Trenton. Part of a day should bring it to Campbellford, and it co ldn't sail the Trent without registering at the specified locks.

"We are going through with our holiday," said Mr. Peace, who is charmed with the scenic beauties of the Trent.

OTONABEE FIRE DESTROYS SHED

Tools and Car Also Burned at W. Leahy's Farm.

NEIGHBORS HELP.

Fire breaking out yesterday on the farm of William Leahy, near the Shearer cheese factory in Otonabee, destroyed an implement shed, a number of tools and a motor car. The shed was situated between the house and the barn, but the fact that the wind was blowing in an easterly direction away from both, averted an extension of the fire.

Hurried calls were sent out to the neighbors, who turned out in full force and helped to extinguish the flames.

THAT TIRED FEELING? DON'T USE GASOLINE!

WATERTOWN, Mass., Aug. 20.—A friend told Messak Parisikan that a toot-bath in gasoline would cure rheumatism. So Pariskian tried it. It did feel nice, and Parsikian sat back and lighted a cigaret. Somehow the two got mixed. This cured completely, the tired feeling Parsikian's feet had suffered. His burns were dressed at hospital.

Children In Orphanage Unearth Ruins of Temple

VOULIAGENE, Greece, Aug. 21 (Associated Press)—Children in the orphanage of Vouliagene have discovered the ruins of a Roman building which doubtless stood on the site of the Greek Temple of Apollo, on Cape Zoster.

Walls three feet thick have been brought to light by the industrious orphans who are much elated over the discovery of marble tablets dated four centuries before Christ, and indicating that the people of Halai, a parish in this section of Attica, bestowed special honors upon Polystratos, priest of the Temple of Apollo, and upon others elected to look after the temple and perform sacrifices there.

A marble throne and a fluted column dedicated to the "golden haired Apollo," have also ben discovered, as well as the fine marble head of a young man, which M. Kourouniotes, the archaeologist, ascribes to the fourth century before the Christian era.

GLADIOLUS SHOW OPENS TUESDAY

Will Be Held in Armories—Visitors From All Canada.

ALL PREPARED.

The final preparations for the big Gladiolus show, to be held in Peterboro Armouries next Tuesday and Wednesday by the Canadian Gladiolus Society are being made, and the Secretary, Mrs. E. Schumaker, of Hamilton, will arrive on Monday to take charge of the entries and work in connection with the show. As will be seen by the following quotation from her letter to The Examiner some very prominent Gladiolus experts are to act as judges for the event.

"Madison Cooper, editor of the Flower Grower and well known authority on gladiolus and R. Hemstock of Whitby will judge the open class at the show. Mr. Hemstock was recently awarded the Florists and Gardener medal for his new gladiolus, Freda, and has many others which he has originated. Prof. J. W. Crow of Simcoe and R. Patterson of Guelph will be the judges in the Amateur class and Mrs. G. Bonisteel and William Deacon of Belleville, and R. L. James of the Rosedale Nurseries of Mount Pleasant will act in the same capacity in the Local and Novice sections."

It is hoped that the people of Peterboro will wake up to the fact that this show is of Dominion-wide importance and the one event that is looked forward to by the members of the Canadian Gladiolus Society as the most outstanding period of the year, and take advantage of the opportunity it presents of seeing this wonderful display of the world's most popular flower. Those who have seen the previous shows held at Guelph, St. Thomas and Hamilton are enthusiastic over its marvels, and magnitude and are eagerly awaiting the opening hour, on Tuesday evening, August 24.

TWO RICH HARVEST IN HAWAII.

HONOLULU, Aug. 21.—Hawaii's sugar plantations will produce approximately 739,000 tons of raw sugar during the 1926 season, according to recent predictions of nine sugar agencies. All of the predictions are classed as "conservative."

The figures closely follow the estimate made by the pineapple canners a few weeks ago in which it was announced tha the territory's "second industry" would equal the 1925 crop.

The pineapple interests announced that the pack would have an estimated valuation of between $34,000,000 and packing of nearly 9,000,000 cases.

Thus, sugar and pineapples in Hawaii produce an annual crop valued at more than $100,000,000.

Fighting the Election With Ice Cream Cones

WOODSTOCK, Aug. 21—The election fight in both North and South Oxford is developing into a garden-party campaign, particularly in the north riding. Instead of the usual meetings, held in stuffy and ill-lighted halls, the crowds of electors are meeting out in the open, with jazz orchestras and other entertainers in attendance, and with an ample supply of refreshments to hand.

This plan was inaugurated in the county by Dr. D. M. Sutherland, the Conservative candidate, in the north riding, and it has caught on with the Liberal candidates as well. Large crowds are attending.

ACTIVITIES OF LAWYERS TO BE UNDER CONTROL

Decision of Fascist National Party at Conference Held Yesterday.

INTERNAL CONDITION.

Will Be Prohibited From Accepting Cases Involving Party Conflict.

ROME, Aug. 21 Canadian Press)—Professional activities of lawyers belonging to the Fascist party henceforth are to be under the control of the secretary of the party, in consequence of a decision last night of the party's national directorate, presided over by Premier Mussolini. Fascist lawyers will be prohibited from representing anti-Fascist clients or accepting cases involving conflict with the party tendencies, when the matter in question has relation to politics. The secreary of the party is empowered to use his discretion as to the activities of the lawyers in cases involving anti-social or gravely immoral crimes.

Most of last night's session was devoted to a comprehensive survey of the internal condition of the party. A report was made by Augusto Turati, secretary general of the Fascist party, and his assistants, who in the last few months have been carrying on a campaign with a view to clearing the organization of turbulent elements.

Describing trips to Apulia, Calabbia and Sicily, the secretary asserted that the great mass of the Black Shirts "felt profoundly their responsibility to the party in this moment of the national life when the regime has undertaken a grave, decisive economic battle."

At the same time, he declared, abnormal conditions necessitating disciplinary action still exist in Triese, Udine, Rovigo, Ancona and a few other provinces.

"In certain provinces," Secretary Turati declared, "various leaders appear unfitted to handle the task allotted to them."

After listening to the speeches, Premier Mussolini said they made him feel that Fascism had arrived at its maturity. He then outlined steps it was intended to take to defend a rise in the value of the lira and to defend the unit. This part of the Premier's remark's was not made public.

SHOWERS IN WEST WORK BOTH WAYS

Delay Work With Early Wheat, But Benefits Later Crops.

EDMONTON, Aug. 21 (Canadian Press)—Showers during this week have delayed harvesting operations all the way from Edmonton to McLeod. The result will be that south of Calgary, where the crops are more advanced, work which otherwise would have been spread over two weeks will have to be crowded into one. Any inconveniences or loss due to this cause however, will be much more than offset by the beneficial effect of the moisture on later crops.

The official estimate here for the province is now 18 bushels of wheat to the acre, the same as last year. If late sown wheat matures, the average for the province is expected to reach 20, and on a larger acreage than in 1925.

In the wide strip extending from McLeod to Edmonton, where the bulk of the wheat is grown, the expectation is for 20 to 25 bushels.

Barley and oats are below last year. New seeding of fall wheat in southern Alberta is off to a fine start.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR EXHIBITION CHECKED OVER

Fair Board Takes Up Many Matters at Meeting Last Night.

SOME REPAIRS.

Fence Along Race Track—More Room For Poultry.

Final checking over of arrangements for the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition occupied the attention of the board at a meeting last night, at which a number of items of routine business were transacted. It was decided to put a floor in the aisles of the Manufacturers' Building and to put a board fence along the outside of the race track east of the grand stand ticket office.

The various committees have arranged for judges for their departments. An extra tent will be provided for the overflow from the poultry show and some new cups will be purchased. A pump will be put in the cow-barn.

The directors will act this year as last as ticket takers at the gates, each man acting for one afternoon or evening. A motion to increase the fee of admission to the grand stand was defeated by a large majority, as was an amendment to reserve a section at a higher price.

An explanation of the lighting situation due to the change in management outside the city limits was given by E. F. Mason, with the information that the cost to the board would probably be higher.

President Roland Denne occupied the chair and Fred Holmes acted as secretary. There was a large attendance of directors from city and country.

HEADLIGHTS AND BRAKES TO GET ADEQUATE TESTS

Kiwanis Club Arranges For Service As Part of Safety Drive.

AT MARKET SQUARE.

Mechanic Will Adjust Brakes —Every Evening Next Week.

Arising from the increasing number of automobile accidents, the logical outcome of glaring headlights and faulty brakes, the local Kiwanis Club, as part of a safety drive initiated some time ago, will put into operation a scheme, beginning on Monday evening, which has as its object the placing of facilities for adequate tests within easy reach of every driver in the district.

The plan, which was outlined this morning to The Examiner by I. P. McNabb, vice-president of the Kiwanis Club, has received the approval and has been promised the co-operation of the police. Between the hours of 7 and 10 on Monday evening and continuing at the same hours every evening of the week, a mechanic will be available at the Market Square, in front of the Clerks office, for the purpose of testing and making any necessary adjustments on the brakes of the car of any motorist who brings his vehicle for inspection.

Headlight Tests

The tests of the headlight will be based on Section 10, sub-section 10 of the Highway Traffic Act, which reads: "It shall be unlawful to carry on a motor vehicle any lighting device of over four candle power, equipped with a reflector, unless the same shall be so designed, deflected, or arranged that no portion of the parallel beam of reflected light when measured 75 feet or more ahead of the lamp shall rise above 42 inches from the level surface on which the vehicle stands."

The method to be adopted to discover whether headlights conform to the regulations is very simple. A screen will be erected on the Square in the rear of the Royal Theatre; cars will be stationed 75 yards away and the height of beams from the headlights will be measured on the screen. Headlights which are found to throw a beam above the minimum height at the stipulated distance will be deflected sufficiently to keep within the law.

FILMING TRENT SYSTEM DURING COMING WEEK

Vessel Will Make Trip Through Canal With Camera Party

TAKING 3000 FEET

Trent Waterway Association Is Responsible For the Trip

Early on Sunday, August 22, 1926, a small party will leave Midland, Ontario, on the trim cabin cruiser, "Oriental," the property of the Engineer's Office, Department of Railways and Canals, Peterborough, Ontario.

Those on board will include the Secretary of the Trent Waterway Development Association, Automobile Association and Chamber of Commerce, Frank G. Stinson of Peterborough, and the Superintendent of the Ontario Government Motion Picture Studio, Trenton, Ontario, V. J. Bach. Mr. Bach has been described as "the best camera man in Canada," and the Trent Waterway Development Association is indeed fortunate in having such a capable man in charge of the filming of the entire Trent system, which has been an objective of the Association.

According to G. E. Patton, Director of the Motion Picture Bureau, about 3,000 feet of film will be taken during the trip enabling the camera to take in practically all of the beauty spots en route, places, and engineering structures of interest, in and out of the regular channel.

It is expected that Mr. Patton will join the party somewhere along the route. Preparations for the Canadian National Exhibition at which his department contributes largely in agricultural and education films of other kinds, prevent his attendance at Midland.

Weather permitting, the "Oriental" will "do" Georgian Bay to Port Severn on the 22nd, films to be taken of such ports as Penetang Harbor, Midland, Waubaushene, Port McNichol, together with some water and island vistas, boating and bathing activities, etc.

Due to the uncertainty of the weather, it would be impossible to draw up an itinerary and adhere strictly to it. The following schedule will be adhered to in the main, however:

Severn Harbor to Orillia, Monday, Aug. 23.

Orillia to Kirkfield, Tuesday, Aug. 24.

Kirkfield to Bobcaygeon, Wednesday, Aug. 25.

Bobcaygeon to Young's Point, Thursday, Aug. 26.

Young's Point to Peterborough, Friday, Aug. 27.

Peterborough to Hastings, Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 28 and 29.

Hastings to Frankford, Monday, Aug. 30.

Frankford to Trenton, Tuesday, Aug. 31.

The "Oriental" has been ordered to proceed from Midland to Young's Point only, as she belongs in the Severn Division, and has so much work to do that she can only be

Must Shave Themselves Barber Shop Plundered

RENFREW, August 21. — (Special). — Male citizens of Calabogie, a town near Renfrew, were forced to shave themselves yesterday morning, and both the male and female populations whose hair required cutting necessarily postponed that operation, for the town barber shop conducted by Frederick Hayward was entered during the night and burglarized of every last piece of equipment with the exception of the chair and mirror. The theory was advanced that the small window by which the thieves escaped prevented the appropriation of these larger articles.

STEAMER SINKS THREE OF CREW NOT YET FOUND

Twelve Men Picked Up By Ferry Boat Early To-day.

FEAR FOR LIVES.

Coast Guards and Harbor Tugs Searching For Other Boat.

CLEVELAND, August 21 (Canadian Press).—The steamer Harold S. Gerken, battered by gigantic waves which were whipped into fury by a fifty-mile an hour gale, sank in Lake Erie eight miles out of Erie to-day. Two lifeboats containing sixteen members of the crew of the steamer were picked up by the car ferry, Maitland, of Ashtabula. Another boat, in which four men put off from the sinking steamer, has not been found.

The men aboard the missing lifeboat are: George McMinn, mate; Richard Freeman, watchman; H. Wagman, fireman; and William Logan, derrick engineer.

It is feared these four men may have been washed out of the little craft.

The report of the sinking of the Gerken, a freighter listed out of Buffalo, N.Y., and the rescue of sixteen men was received here by the Inter-city Radio Telegraph Company, in a radio despatch from the Maitland.

The sinking of the steamer was described by J. B. Gamble, captain of the boat. His steamer, he said, was loaded at Erie Peninsula, and was bound for Buffalo. While it was being pounded by a heavy sea, it sprang a leak, and sank shortly afterwards.

The missing lifeboat could not be found when a search was conducted for it by the Maitland after daybreak, according to a late radio message received here. It is feared the small boat was swamped in heavy seas and the men were drowned.

Seeking Lifeboat.

ERIE, Pa., August 21 (Canadian Press).—The Erie coastguard crew and the harbor tug Buffalo have joined in the search for four missing members of the crew of the steamer Howard S. Gerken, which went down in Lake Erie, eight miles off this port, during the night. All lines of communication between Erie and the coastguard station are down, due to the fierce storm which swept this region all night.

Converted Freighter.

BUFFALO, August 21 (Canadian Press). — The Howard S. Gerken, which sank in Lake Erie to-day, was a converted freighter owned by Howard S. Gerken of Buffalo, who was among the survivors. The vessel was formerly the Canadian steel steamer Phelan. She was about 200 feet long and was engaged in the sand and gravel trade.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 21 (Canadian Press).—The lifeboat in which four members of the crew of the steamer Howard S. Gerken, which sank off Erie, Pa., early today, were cast adrift in Lake Erie when their craft was swept from the side of the rescuing vessel, the car ferry Maitland, was found floating upside down in midlake this afternoon by the steamer Cranus.

One of the four missing men, Howard Wageman, fireman of the Gerken was found floating unconscious in midlake by Captain Nelson Seymour and the crew of the United States coastguard station at Eric, Pa. It had been erroneously reported that he had been washed ashore at Ashtabula.

The men who have not been accounted for are George McMinn, mate; Richard Freeman, watchman, and William Logan, engineer.

STORMY EAST WIND SWEEPS OVER EASTERN GREAT LAKES

Says Jewish Bedouin Tribe Of 30,000 Lives In Arabia

JERUSALEM, Aug. 21 (AP) The existence in Arabia of a Jewish tribe of Bedouins, closely allied with Ibn Saud, leader of the Wahabis, was reported here by Nissim Tager in a lecture he delivered yesterday. Tager, the son of the Damascus Chief Rabbi, is Secretary to the Wahabi Enyoy to Syria.

The Jewish tribe, he said, is named Haibar, lives in Central Arabia, and musters 30,000 armed men, who live by cattle raising and raiding. The tribesmen observe Saturday and the annual fast of the Day of Atonement. The tribe possesses an ancient scroll of the law in Hebrew.

Several lieutenants of Ibn Saud are of the Haibar tribe. The Treasurer of his kingdom is a Haibar Jew named Mordecai.

RANGER'S BODY FOUND IN LAKE

Was Killed in Airplane on Hudson Bay Railroad.

TANK EXPLOSION.

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 21 (Canadian Press)—Missing since his plane crashed into a smal lake in Northern Manitoba, near Mile 185 on the Hudson Bay Railway, the body of Pilot Officer Redford Carr-Harris, 22, Kingston, Ont., was recovered from the water yesterday, and now is being brought to Winnipeg, according to a radio report received at Fort Osborne Barracks, yesterday afternon by officers of the Royal Canadian Flying Corps.

The crash occurred Thursday morning. Pilot Carr-Harris, who was in command of the Royal Canadian Air Force Station at Norway House, 300 miles north of Winnipeg, was engaged in Forestry patrol work in the north country and was alone in a seaplane at the time of the accident. In attempting to rise from the lake, the "plane struck a tree, crashed into the lake, and an explosion of the gasoline tank set the machine on fire. The pilot was badly burned.

Pilot Carr-Harris had been attached to the Manitoba Division of the Air Force since early spring, and was very popular in the service, having an excellent record in the handling of his station, and for his work in patrolling the forests of Northern Manitoba guarding against the fire menace.

When news of the tragedy was received at the Air Force headquarters here Thursday night, Pilot Officer Weaver was ordered from Cormorant Lake Station, in the north country, to investigate. He brought back his report to a Hudson Bay Railway construction camp, from where it was telephoned to Cormorant Lake, and from there radioed to Fort Osborn Barracks.

Wind and Rain Doing Much Damage To Standing Crops.

VESSELS IN PORT.

Only One Ship Is Keeping Up Its Scheduled Trips.

TORONTO, August 21 (Canadian Press).—Since last Monday night an east wind has prevailed over the whole of the eastern great lakes district, bearing sometimes to the north or south and rising at times to the tempo of a gale. Such a continuous east wind is without precedent in the memory of man in this district. Bringing with it cold, wintry weather, it has done much damage to market gardeners' produce and to small fruit growers, putting an already late season back another week.

Navigation on Lake Ontario has been difficult, and a few people crossing over to Niagara have experienced seasickness.

The culmination of the storm came last night with a furious windstorm, accompanied by very heavy gusts of rain, injuring fruit through out the night and this morning.

The general rains throughout Ontario, especially in the north-western and central portions of the Province to-day are playing havoc with the grain crop. Rain fell heavily during the night and to-day, with prospects that the downpour will continue over the week-end. Crops standing in the fields are suffering tremendously, although there is a ray of hope in the fact that root crops, corn and late pastures will undoubtedly benefit by the moisture. Grain sprouting in shocks is the chief worry of the farmer.

Shipping Tied Up.

Lake Ontario shipping out of Toronto was tied up this morning on account of the wind and rainstorm which prevailed during the night and to-day. The two morning trips of the Canada Steamship Line's steamers to Niagara-on-the-Lake were cancelled on account of the rough weather and also because few passengers relished the thought of taking a trip on the lake. All C. S. L. boats arrived here on schedule last night. The wind, which was blowing from the east at the rate of 30 miles per hour, swept Lake Ontario and produced huge rollers on its surface.

Bad on Lake Erie.

BUFFALO, N. Y., August 21. — (Canadian Press).—The most general heavy rain and wind storm of the season lashed the great lake region all last night. Over Lake Erie the wind reached gale proportions, blowing from the south-east

FALLING LIMBS CUT OFF POWER

Big Branch Falls Across the Wires at Simcoe and Water Streets.

WIND IS CAUSE.

A monster limb which broke with the high wind and fell across the pole line of the Peterborough Utilities at the corner of Water and Simcoe Streets this morning at 7.51 was the cause of the lights and power being off in the centre of the city for about an hour.

The policy of the Commission in trimming the trees and placing pole lines where they are free from obstruction seems to be a very necessary part of the local programme and one which will have far-reaching results in the steady supply of power and light.

Although eight wires were broken on two circuits, the connection was speedily made.

"BOOTS AND HER BUDDIES"

THREE LIBERAL SPEAKERS TALK POLITICS TO BUCKHORN ELECTORS

J. J. Duffus Defines Stand on Main Issues Before Voters.

AT TRUE BLUE HALL

G. N. Gordon and J. A. Dewart Uphold King's Policies.

Supported by Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C. and Captain J. A. Dewart, M.C., Joseph J. Duffus wooed the franchise of the electors in the Buckhorn district, at a meeting in the True Blue Hall last night.

Sam Wood, elected by the audience, occupied the chair during the evening.

Mr. Duffus who was the last of the speakers, reiterated his determination to wage a clean fight. He thought it was not impossible to wage an election battle without indulging in mudslinging. He believed one could be very critical of an opponent and still retain the friendship and respect of that opponent. He respected every person's opinion.

He believed the Liberal party and especially the Liberal Leader had the clearer conception of the necessities of the Dominion from the Garden of the Gulf in the East to the shores of the Pacific in the West.

False Charges.

Mr. Duffus referred to the charges laid against Liberal Ministers by Mr. Doucet. Mr. Doucet had spoken of a joy trip with a cargo of booze and had spread abroad insinuation and innuendo against two Liberal Cabinet Ministers. An investigation had been made and the whole thing proved to be a lie. Yet Mr. Meighen had sat on the platform and listened to these untruths, and had said nothing. Mr. Meighen had to bear some of the responsibility.

At a platform in North Bay, another Conservative declared that certain apartments of the public service buildings were being used for unseemly conduct such as took place in public houses. This was a serious matter. Another investigation was held, and the charge proved to be unfounded. Then the man who made the statement tried to get out of it by blaming the reporter for having misquoted him. But the reporter had sent his copy to the speaker, with the question: "Have I got it correct?" and he received it back marked "Correct." In spite of this on the next day, the speaker tried to deny having made his statement. On this occasion the Prime Minister sat on the platform and permitted his supporter to perpetrate this libel. He was just as much to blame as the speaker who uttered the falsehood, as he did not instantly repudiate it.

Mr. Duffus did not think this was fair to the country. He did not think it was fair to the great Conservative party, when men were permitted to get away with such statements.

Dismal Prophecies.

At the campaign of last year, Mr. Meighen conducted a series of prophecies of blue ruin. Mr. Meighen, more than any other man had done injury to the Dominion of Canada. Was Mr. Meighen right when he prophesied that all the factories would be closed, that the farmers would go bankrupt, and a tornado of economic disaster would set in, and the population would decrease by great numbers of the people getting out?

It was a great pity, commented Mr. Duffus, that Mr. Meighen himself had not gone out. It would have been a godsend if he had got out years ago.

Mr. Duffus declared that Mr. Meighen could not possibly secure a majority that would enable the Conservatives to take over the reins of Government.

He predicted that the Liberals would come back with a majority over all parties which would result in the country receiving the stable government it wanted.

Mr. Duffus asked his hearers to remember that prior to the election of last year MacKenzie King had a real majority of only one. He asked for a dissolution in order to get a sufficient majority. He did not get it. When Parliament met, the Tories wanted power. The Liberals left it to the representatives of the people to decide who should form a Government. Parliament then decided that the Liberal Goverment should carry on. MacKenzie King was without a seat. After it was decided that the Liberals should form a Government he sought a seat. On a previous occasion when Mr. Meighen was similarly out of a seat the Liberals allowed him to get in by acclamation. But this time, the Conservatives opposed MacKenzie King and put the country to a great expense by forcing Parliament to carry on without a Prime Minister. Mr. Duffus asked his hearers to contrast the respective attitudes of the two parties from a business standpoint.

Robb Budget.

In spite of the difficulties that confronted the Liberals, the Robb Budget was the best in Canada since Confederation. Reductions has been made in the price of farm implements, the tools of production in the greatest basic industry. Sweeping reductions estimated at nearly $26,000,000 had been made in general taxation.

The attitude of Mr. Meighen and his supporters was that of obstruction. Mr. Meighen announced that he would oppose every measure of the Liberals until he got them out and got into power himself, no matter how beneficial were those measures.

He asked the electors if they desired to give their votes to a party whose prophecies had proved false, and who had declared they would raise the price of farm implements, instead of the party which had initiated such splendid legislation. He promised that if elected he would spare no effort in the interests of the city and county of Peterboro.

Hon. G. N. Gordon.

Mr. Gordon urged all present to support Mr. Duffus on account of the success that had always attended Mr. Duffus' efforts in the past.

Mr. Duffus had been a successful Mayor of the City of Peterboro. In each of two years of office he returned a larger surplus than any other Mayor. The Buckhorn Road was secured through the efforts of Joseph Duffus. On this road, six or seven thousand dollars were expended by the Government. The Conservative members of the riding had never done anything to secure it but Mr. Duffus came down to Ottawa during the Liberal term of office and producing a number of photos illustrating the need of the road, was instrumental in gaining his point.

Mr. Duffus was vice-president of the Ontario Tourist Association which brought hundreds of thousands of American visitors here. Buckhorn stood to benefit by Mr. Duffus' energy and activity.

Mr. Gordon attacked the Conservative majority in the Senate, which, he said, killed the Old Age Pensions Bill. Mr. Peck, he said, had never repudiated this action of the Senate.

The inclusion of Mr. Patenaude in the Meighen Cabinet also came in for severe criticism from the ex-M.P. for West Peterboro. Patenaude was one of those who believed Canada should be separated from Great Britain. All the benefits and liberties enjoyed in Canada today, said Mr. Gordon, were copied from Great Britain. Canada was a free country. The only ties binding the two countries were ties of affection and blood—ties that were stronger than any other. But Mr. Meighen took into his Cabinet a man who wished to snap all the bonds between Canada and the Motherland.

He did not wish to say anything unkind of Mr. Peck for Mr. Peck was a man who never spoke unkindly of anyone but he challenged anyone to point to a single thing that had been done for the riding by Mr. Peck.

Mr. Duffus according to Mr. Gordon, has been a successful business man and every time he has had any business dealings, he has made a friend, because his methods were honest and he was always ready to give service and give value at all times.

The former Minister of Immigration asked every man, woman and child who had ever supported him on personal grounds to give that same support to Mr. Duffus who would make an energetic, faithful and respected representative in Parliament for West Peterboro.

The Liberal candidate's energy and ability were outstanding and a man of his type was needed at the present time to represent an important Riding like West Peterboro.

Raids On the Treasury.

According to the speaker Mr. Meighen had dissolved Parliament without making provision to pay the salaries, wages or running expenses of administering the country. Mr. Gordon said that Meighen's group were every week illegally spending millions of dollars by Governor-General's warrant. The law provides that the payment of the countrys' services should be made after every item has been voted, and only unforseen expenses such as might be incurred when a storm destroyed wharves and docks or broke down public works, could be met by Governor-General's warrant.

Mr. Meighen, on the other hand, was providing for expenses that were in no sense unforseen, and was doing this in contravention of the law. This, according to Mr. Gordon, was a very small matter for a man of the type of Mr. Meighen, who misled and deceived the Governor-General by representing to him that he was able to establish an administration and carry on the Government of the country without a general election. Mr. Meighen's representations were untrue as was proven by the fact that his Government lasted sixty-five hours, or in other words, it was "still born."

However, Mr. Meighen was quite consistent in this course of conduct, for in 1920 he obtained control of the Government, after the Union Government had ceased to exist, and instead of calling a general election for the people to decide, he took control of the administration and made it a Conservative Government.

Mr. Meighen was never Prime Minister as a choice of the people, although he has been Prime Minister for a few months on two occasions, but September 14th should see the finish of Mr. Meighen.

Reduction In Taxation.

Mr. Gordon went on to say that the Robb budget had given to Canada a reduction of $3.50 for every man, woman and child. It had reduced postage from 3c to 2c had wiped out the tax on receipts entirely, had cut down one-half of all income tax payers from the list and had reduced the price of automobiles from $40.00 on the cheapest Ford up to hundreds of dollars on other cars, and yet the automobile industry was selling more cars than it ever did before.

Under the Mackenzie King administration the automobile industry had improved as is shown by the following figures indicating the number of automobiles produced in Canada:

1921	66,246
1922	101,007
1923	147,202
1924	132,530
1925	161,970

Mr. Peck voted against these reductions in taxation when he voted against the Budget, and if Mr. Peck's vote had been successful, Canadian people today would have been paying $25,000,000 more per year to the Treasury than they are now called upon to pay.

"Mr. Peck speaks of his vote as a 'sly' vote. It may have been a 'sly' vote but it was a vote against the intersts of the City and County of Peterboro and proves that Mr. Peck is too expensive a representative for this Riding to have."

The Budget gave to Peterboro Ctiy alone a reduction of taxation of over $100,000. per year, and yet Mr. Peck tried to prevent that being done.

Mr. Gordon then mentioned that he had the letter of Arthur Beauchesne Esq. K.C., Clerk of the House of Commons, in which he said that Mr. Peck had voted against the Budget, as was proven by the records of the House of Commons.

Mr. Gordon closed his address by saying that it was the interests of every man, woman and child to support J. J. Duffus and his platform for reduction of taxation, because if the Liberal Government was returned, they had the definite promise and assurance that further reductions in taxation will take place and this means better times, better business conditions and greater prosperity for the country at large.

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS

"Thou shalt have no other gods before me."—Exod. 20:3.

And God spake all these words, saying, I am the Lord thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage.

Thou shalt have no other gods before me.

Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of any thing that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth:

Thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them: for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me;

And showing mercy unto thousands of them that love me, and keep my commandments.

Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain: for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain.

Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy.

Six days shalt thou labour, and do all thy work:

But the seventh day is the sabbath of the Lord thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor they daughter, thy man-servant, nor thy maid-servant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within they gates:

For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the Lord blessed the sabbath day, and hallowed it.

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for August 22. The Ten Commandments: Duties to God. Exod. 20:1-11.

BY WM. E. GILROY, D.D.
Editor of The Congregationalist.

This lesson and the lesson following deal with the ten commandments. The first four in this lesson are grouped under the heading, "Duties to God," and the last six in the next lesson under the heading, "Duties to Man." This is an arbitrary and not very wise division and distinction. The more one inquires into the matter the more one will realize that there are no duties to God that do not involve duties to man, nor are there duties to man that do not involve duties to God.

The ten commandments constitute the greatest social and legal code in the history of mankind. Probably no words in the same space have been more influential in determining laws and social standards.

How are we to think of these commandments? Are they binding in every sense upon the Christian conscience and upon the modern world? How literally are they to be interpreted? Mohammedanism, for instance, has interpreted one commandment so literally as to prevent the rise among Mohammedans of any art of sculpture. Certain sects of Protestants reacted so strongly against forms of worship in which images and pictures had any place that they turend from these and insisted upon the greatest plainness and simplicity of their places of worship. Was their action necessarily in accordance with the commandment? Or is that spirit of worship sound which lays much stress upon forms and symbols?

How About Sunday?

Perhaps one might raise a question regarding the fourth commandment, especially here in America, where Sunday has become almost like any other day. Where it is not pre-eminently a day of labor it is in many communities and for many people pre-eminently a day of pleasure. In this last matter we have reacted very strongly from the strict practice of an earlier day—a practice that was very much related to the formalism of Sabbath observance in the time of Jesus himself, and which he seemed to rebuke in reminding his disciples that "the Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath."

We raise these questions not in any spirit of negation or mere speculation. They must, in fact, be faced by one who would understand the relationship of the Commandments to the New Testament and to Christian liberty. It must be remembered that the Commandments stand as a part of the general Mosaic Law. They are not set apart in such a way as to say, "These things must be obeyed, but other things are not so important."

The Christian does not feel called upon to fulfill all the requirements of the Jewish law. Is he then directly under obligation to fulfil these Commandments?

To this last question we give an unqualified "Yes," though it is to be added that the Christian's duty is to obey these Commandments in the light of Christian knowledge and Christian liberty. They are not formal principles to be observed merely according to the letter. But they are, as Paul suggested, living principles to be written upon the tablets of the heart.

Inherently Sound

Two things may be said. First, that these ten commandments stand out particularly from the general Mosaic Law inasmuch as they are represented as being written upon tablets by the finger of God. They had a special place in the religion of Israel as they have had a special place in the life of the world.

In the second place they depend for their validity not upon some external authority; they are vindicated in the school of life itself as principles inherently sound and sacred. It is this that makes them God-given and godly. They are a part of the world of human blessings that God has made. They indicate the relationships that must exist between man and man and between man and God if man would attain to true and wholesome living.

Can anyone fail to recognize that much of the curse upon our modern life arises directly from the failure of men to perceive the truth of these Commandments and to apply that truth in their lives? The trouble with modern life is not only that there is no Sabbath, no sacred day, but for too many people there is no sacredness in life itself; nothing is holy and yet all of great living is established on the sense of holiness, the worth of the soul, the worth of man himself as a spiritual being made in the image and likeness of his Creator, reaching out to that Creator in aspiration and faith.

That is religion in its deepest essence, and where religion springing from this essential attitude of holiness is lacking man is at a low ebb and society is in a precarious state.

When we speak of Christian liberty we must remember the words of Jesus that he came "not to destroy but to fulfil." The only modification of these Commandments that Christianity approves is that which gives them larger, freer and truer expression in the lives and relationships of men.

. . . VOICE OF THE LOWLY AND OPPRESSED . . . ADVOCATE OF THE FRIENDLESS . . . RIGHTER OF PUBLIC AND PRIVATE WRONGS.

NOT MUCH EXCUSE HERE.

The people who say they are not interested in the election and who do not know whether they will vote or not are all too plentiful.

There is not much excuse for urban dwellers who take such an attitude.

In rural parts of some of the constituencies, even in our own county, there are electors who might be pardoned if they seem indifferent towards the duty of voting.

The Examiner ran across one of these not long ago living on the shore of Stoney Lake.

If he is to register his vote next month he'll have to walk between four or five miles over a rough trail through the bush to the nearest polling station, and then trudge back again.

City electors find no such trouble over voting.

The polling booth is almost at their door, and the whole process of going to the polls and voting can be carried out in a few minutes, which leaves the city voter without much reason on this score at least for not exercising his franchise.

YOU CAN'T AFFORD TO TAKE A CHANCE.

It seems impossible to give too many warnings to the electors in regard to the importance of ascertaining whether or not their names are on the voters' lists.

At the last election, in spite of frequent reminders from The Examiner of the necessity of making sure on this point, a number of citizens found themselves on election day unable to vote because in some way or other their names had been dropped from the lists.

The political organizations are offering their services.

They will be glad to tell you whether or not you are on the list, and to help you have your name added if it should happen that it has been omitted.

The fact that you voted at the last election does not guarantee that your name is still on.

Several electors who have taken the precaution to examine the rolls have found that their names have been dropped.

They will appear before Judge Huycke, who will next week act as revising officer, and have the omission rectified.

You may be in the same position; isn't it worth while to make sure now when an opportunity to remedy the matter is still available?

A "SPEED COP" HERO.

The Provincial traffic officer on duty in the Kingston district saved the lives of a party of four tourists the other night near Kingston when he jumped on the running-board of their car and succeeded in persuading the driver to stop a few feet from a level crossing just a second before an express train thundered past.

The occupants of the car had not noticed the approaching train, and only the prompt action of the traffic officer averted a sickening tragedy.

Ontario needs men like that to patrol her highways, and probably most of the motorcycle brigade are of similar calibre.

The trouble is that to the average citizen these men are nothing but "speed cops"—and most motorists seem to regard them as spies and worse.

Theirs is not the most pleasant of occupations—yet their services are necessary, if unpopular, and our highways would soon become nothing but speedways were it not for the curb that the presence of one of these flying motorcyclists provide.

Next time, Mr. Motorist, you are inclined to grow resentful when you see a "speed cop" scrutinizing you closely on the highway, remember the Kingston traffic officer who saved four lives.

KNOWING HOW TO DO IT.

A significant feature of the double drowning near London the other day was the fact that of the party of seven friends of the victims who saw the tragedy from the bank of the river only one could swim and he but a few strokes.

There was nothing that could be done to assist the men in the water.

The incident shows why a campaign such as the Rotary Club is inaugurating here is necessary.

The more swimmers that are developed the less the chance of drowning accidents—and an even greater assurance of safety along this line would be an opportunity for those who already can swim to learn something about the science of life saving.

There is a number of simple methods of release that can be effectively used in shaking off the grip of a drowning person; yet probably not one in one hundred knows the technique of these methods, and many a swimmer going gallantly to the rescue of some one in difficulties in the water has been drowned because he didn't know how to release himself.

Along with instructions for non-swimmers might come a course in life saving for those who know how to swim.

The Y.W.C.A. has made considerable progress along this line, but its opportunities are not unlimited.

SOME CONTRASTS.

An article in The Atlantic Monthly, written by an American who returned to his own home after a winter spent in England, draws some contrasts. The contrast, it seems, that most forcibly impressed the writer was the respect for law and order in England as opposed to the utter breakdown of law and of protection afforded the American citizen by his Government. He gives an illustration. On his return to New York he saw in one block on Wall street three armored cars, with machine guns and armed guards, engaged in transporting valuables. While he was in London a steamer arrived from South Africa with five millions of gold consigned to the Bank of England. At the dock the gold was transferred to an open truck, a tarpaulin was thrown over it, and it was driven to the bank with no guards of any sort. In New York it is no longer safe to trust to the authorities for protection. Private corporations have been driven to employ armored cars and armed guards. In England one feels that the authorities can be trusted. The law not only is enforced, but it is observed. Possibly it is observed because it is enforced; at any rate, the testimony of the American visitor to London is that respect for law and order, as shown in the general strike of five million men, pervades all classes in England.

Another contrast that impressed the American visitor to London was that while the law is rigidly enforced one's private life is remarkably free from interference in England. "One can dress as one pleases, marry whom one pleases, pursue such hobbies as one pleases, say what one pleases, and in a general way express one's personality in one's own way of living. In America I am more and more impressed with the growing restraint placed on individualism in private life. Restriction is becoming evident in every direction." Illustrations are given, as for instance the laws that have been passed in the United States against the teaching of evolution, of what an agressive and organized minority, backed by ample money and using terrorizing methods on candidates, can accomplish.

On the whole it would seem that there are some lessons which even the United States might learn from England, lessons at least in respect for law and order, and for personal freedom. The English people are said to be conservative; but that in itself may be a good thing if it means no more than the maintenance of the respect for methods and ideas that have stood the test of time and experience.—Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

FRANCE AND THE U. S.

A good deal is being said in the press about hostile demonstrations against Americans in France. It is encouraging to observe that some American journals are urging tourists to be tactful and considerate in their attitude toward French people. France is in financial straits, which the French people are apt to contrast with the abounding prosperity of the United States. This feeling may take unreasonable forms. The unfortunate position of a large part of Europe is not due to the United States but to a war for which the American Republic was in no way to blame. The prosperity of the United States is due, not to the troubles of Europe, but mainly to the fact that on this continent the jealousies and hatreds which keep Europe in the condition of an armed camp do not prevail. Europe is not altogether to blame either; at least the present generation cannot be held responsible for evils which have their roots in conditions centuries old.

But the citizens of a prosperous country traveling in a country suffering the deepest financial distress ought to be particularly careful not to emphasize the contrast. The Washington Post recalls incidents where American travelers to show their contempt for the French currency plastered the side of their compartment on the train with twenty, fifty and hundred franc notes. It is not fair to blame the whole American nation for a bumptious act which can only be described as cruel. But certainly there seems to be need for the advice given by The New York World. It tells tourists not to boast in cafes that American currency is the only real money in the world; not to fret too much in public if a dinner which costs seventy francs on Monday costs one hundred and twenty-five francs on Monday next; not to grumble if a customs official on the Swiss-Italian frontier inquires how many cigars a traveler is bringing with him; not to boast that America is the most generous of creditors. "Talk instead of our prowess in tennis, golf, or prohibition; it comes with better grace."

On the French side Le Temps reminds its readers of the reputation of Paris for "smiling hospitality" and recommends a return to "the traditional tact and courtesy toward foreigners." The prefect of police of Paris asks all correspondents to make known to their readers that foreigners can come to Paris in perfect safety. "They will be welcomed with a hearty and cordial hospitality which the capital of France has always extended to visitors."

The moral of all this is that people of all nations require training in diplomacy. In earlier days diplomacy was regarded as the business of a small circle of officials. An ambassador in a foreign country and his staff were instructed to behave with the most scrupulous courtesy, to avoid offending the susceptibilities and even the prejudices of the people to whom they were accredited. Diplomatic etiquette was surrounded by so much form and ceremony as to seem almost ridiculous; but there was a reason for it. It was of the highest importance that good relations should not be disturbed even by breaches of etiquette which might seem trifling. Sometimes the etiquette was insincere, throwing a veil over hostility. But in these more democratic days we may take a lesson from what was good in the old aristocratic diplomacy without imitating what was bad. Every traveler in a foreign country ought to regard himself as a member of a volunteer diplomatic staff, a representative of his own country, in duty bound to maintain its reputation for dignity and courtesy. A corresponding obligation rests upon the inhabitants of the country visited to treat travelers with courtesy and consideration.—London Advertiser.

TORONTO, Aug. 21.—Receipts at the Union Stock Yards for the past week have been slightly in excess of those for the previous week, being 5,715 cattle, 1,358 calves, 3,800 hogs and 3,835 sheep and lambs received. On Monday morning at the opening of the current week's market there were about 600 more cattle offered than on the preceding Monday. In addition to the offerings at the yards, there were also about 1,100 billed through Ontario points.

Although prices were steady for the better grades of cattle, values were inclined to be considerably easier on the common grades. Exporters paid as high as $8.15 for heavy steers.

During the week the prices have declined about 25c a cwt. on heavy and medium cattle. For anything choice in the butcher classes prices have remained steady.

For the coming week exporters report orders for 800 finished steers, heifers and bulls, along with an order for 400 choice stocker steers weighing from 950 to 1,000 lbs. Shipment is for Dundee, Scotland.

During the past week 600 finished steers and bulls have been taken at prices ranging from $7|50 to $8, with one fancy load at $8.15. Bulls sold at $4.50 to $5, with prime animals at $5.25. Heifers and choice butcher steers sold at from $7 to $7.50 with a few fancy steers bringing $7.75.

Medium cattle were from 25c to 50c lower than last week, many of them were quite plain and the packers complained of dressing percentage. Baby beef sold at steady prices, the top grades bringing 12c with most of choice at 11c. Good quality brought from 9c to 10c.

Cows sold at steady prices. Springers and milkers—Choice springers were in good demand at from $85 to $100; good, $70 to $80; choice milkers, $75 to $90; good, $50 to $70; common springers and milkers were slow, some slow, some selling at around $40 to $50. The balance was sold over the scales. Stockers and Feeders—The demand was good for choice feeding steers weighing about 900 lbs., but they were rather scarce. Several loads of yearling heifers sold from $4.75 to $5, with a through billing. Yearling steers brought from $5 to $5.25. Steers weighing from 900 to 1,000 lbs. sold at from $6 to $6.25, a few fancy bringing up to $6.50.

Sheep and Lambs—On Monday choice lambs sold for $14.25, on Tuesday $14.50, Wednesday top lambs sold at $14; good at $13 to $13.50, culls at $10. On Thursday best lambs sold for $13.50, due to heavy receipts. Buck lambs sold at $12, yearling sheep $10 to $11. Choice butcher sheep, $7 to $8; good, $5 to $6. Heavy sheep and bucks, $4 to $5; cull sheep, $2.50 to $3.

Calves—Choice veal calves sold on Monday, $12 to $12.50. Tuesday and Wednesday, $12.50 to $13. Thursday, $12.50 to $13; good, $11 to $12; heavy, $5 to $8; light $6 to $9; grass calves, $4 to $5.

Hogs—Remained steady throughout the week at $12 f.o.b., $12.60 fed, $13 off cars. Premium on selects, $2.46 per head.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, August 21 (Canadian Press).—Exporters and millers competing gave the wheat market a lively hoist yesterday. Fully 1,000,000 bushels of North American wheat was bought for shipment to Europe in addition to as much more the day previous. Closing prices here for wheat were unsettled, 1 5-8 to 2 3-4 net higher, with corn 1-8 to 3-4 up, oats at 1-8 to ¼ to 3-8 advance and provisions unchanged to 17 down.

A still greater volume of export business appeared feasible yesterday if exporters could get wheat. Mills, however, were sharply after good grades and exporters had a difficult time in consequence. Meanwhile, it was announced that exports of wheat and flour this week from the United States and Canada totalling 9,419,000 bushels, against 5,325,000 bushels a year ago, comprised by far the biggest part of the world's shipments. Even aside from the large export business in evidence, the market for wheat available to be used at once was distinctly tight, with word at hand that weather north-west is further delaying the spring wheat harvest while domestic winter crop arrivals are rapidly being reduced.

Unexpected strength of the wheat market in Liverpool did much to accelerate the upward trend of values here, especially as advices current said European crops have turned out much below what was looked for, that estimates of yield were being slashed and that shipments from Argentina and Australia are small. Indications of a big shrinking in wheat values in France were given particular notice; heavy profit taking sales had only a moderate effect, and most of the day's advance was held at the last.

Corn and oats owed their firmness chiefly to wheat.

Provisions reflected the course of the hog market.

CHICAGO CATTLE.

CHICAGO, August 21 (Canadian Press).—Cattle 2,000; trade closed steady; few fed steers 8.25 to 9.25; grassers 7.25 downward to 6.50; supply both fat and feeder cattle cleaned up, low cutters 3.75 to 4.15; medium bulls, 6.25, steady; vealers mostly 14.00 to 14.50, few 15.00.

Hog receipts 16,000; very uneven; late market especially on heavies, both sows and butchers, 25 to 50; lower than Thursday's best prices; spots more medium weight choice, 140 to 200 pounds, up to 14.00; bulk 210 pound downward 13.50 to 13.95; bulk 240 to 280 pound butchers 12.35 to 13.10; late, 290 to 350 pound butchers 11.50 to 12.00; most sows 10.35 to 10.75; shippers took 4,500; estimated holdover 4,000.

Sheep receipts 8,000; fat lambs mostly 25 cents higher; natives bulk 14.25 to 14.50; culls 9.50; some sales up to 10.00; sheep steady; bulk fat ewes 6.00 to 6.50; feeder lambs strong to 25 higher; top 14.50 for 59 pound, heavier kind salable around 13.50.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 21 (Canadian Press,) — Montreal export houses reported an increased demand from the United Kingdom yesterday far Canadian spring wheat and as the prices bid were in line with their views a fair trade was accomplished for prompt and nearby shipment. The demand for oats and barley continued quiet.

The feature of the local trade was the improved demand for exporters for wheat and sales of quite a few loads of No. 2 Northern were made at twenty cents per bushel over the Winnipeg October option, and No. 3, Northern at 9 3-4c to 10c per bushel over, and 24 1-2c per bushel over was asked for No. 1 Northern, C.I.F., Montreal. There was also some demand for small lots of oats and on the whole a more active trade was done. Spot prices for car lots of oats were unchanged.

A firmer feeling prevailed in the spring wheat flour market but prices were unchanged. A fair trade was transacted with English importers but there was no improvement in the local trade.

The feature of the winter wheat situation was the fact that Ontario millers were offering new crop wheat flour and sales of odd cars of choice grades were made at $6.30 to $6.40 per barrel. Car lots of old crop wheat grades were steady at $6.60 to $6.70 per barrel.

Owing to the continued good demand for all lines of millfeed and the somewhat limited supplies available, the undertone to the market was firm. The market for standard grades of rolled oats was quiet and prices ruled steady.

Prices for all grades of eggs were firmly maintained under a good enquiry. The receipts were 790 cases

The butter market continued quiet but prices were steady. The receipts were 6,239 packages.

The cheese trade continued dull, but the feeling was steady. The receipts were 10,268 boxes.

The demand for beans was moderate and sales of odd cars of choice white hand-picked were made at $2.25 per bushel, and smaller quantities at $2.35 to $2.45 per bushel.

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

"HE DOES NOT HAD"

One of the most common errors of speech is the omission of part of a verb. One such error that was noted lately appeared in a letter to a newspaper. The letter said, in part:

"I do not know the man and have never before heard of him; he does not now, nor has he ever had any connection with this establishment, in any capacity whatever."

The second part of this statement is incorrect, from the viewpoint of the grammarian. It should read: "He does not now have nor has he ever had any connection with this establishment." Inserting the word "have" changes the incorrect sentence into one that is correct.

"Language is no better and no worse than the men who speak it," says Lounsbury's "History of the English Language." "It is never language in itself that becomes weak or corrupt; it is only when those who use it become weak or corrupt that it shares in their degradation.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

All letters must be signed by the writer, and must bear his address. A pen-name may be used for publication except in letters on political subjects, which must bear the writer's name for publication.

This space occupied by Mr. Burnham's letters is paid for by him.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—If Mr. Duffus and Mr. King hope to impress the people of Peterborough with the enormity of the Governor-General's action in granting Mr. Meighen a dissolution they will fail. It is true that Mr. King promptly stated that he did not blame the Governor, but Mr. Meighen. Now the needle of logic and common-sense punctures many a bubble, and let us see if we are skilful enough to puncture this one. When Mr. King says that he does not blame the Governor he does say that he blames Mr. Meighen for giving him bad advice. So far that is not unconstitutional. It would have been unconstitutional for His Excellency to have ignored Mr. Meighen and his advice, but there is nothing in the constitution about the quality of the advice. His Excellency took the advice of his Minister and granted the request. But Mr. King says he did not take his (Mr. King's) advice and that it was unconstitutional for His Excellency to refuse Mr. King, being Prime Minister at that moment. Was the Governor bound to do so? Has he no choice in the matter? He certainly has, and this is where the "constitutional problem" falls down notwithstanding the copious letters of J. S. Ewart K.C., and the six-column opinion given, and I hope therefore the merits or demerits of the action and the wisdom of His Excellency that are in question. The actual power of dissolution is in the Governor's hands, and he may exercise, as the people's constitutional representative, a large power subject to an immediate justification which would in this case be: 1. That another than Mr. King should be able to carry on (which turned out not to be the case). 2. An immediate appeal to the people to see what they wish to be done. Since the Governor has left the matter to the people on the failure of Mr. Meighen to carry on, he has promptly done what he is constitutionally called upon to do, and anyhow if it is in the people's hands, what is there to grumble about? Mr. King forgets that when he applied for a dissolution there was a possibility that another leader had the confidence of the House, as has often happened in the past, and that Mr. King was not called back to receive the dissolution is simply because His Excellency had to take the advice of the man who at the moment was Prime Minister (Mr. Meighen) and could not disregard it. Had he done so he would have exercised a discretion which he does not possess.

DR. FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL

DELICATESSEN WIVES

By Dr. Frank Crane.

"If your wife can't cook," says a restaurant sign, "don't divorce her. Eat here and keep her for a pet."

Wives who can't cook have been the object of a fusillade of criticism of late.

Both the evils of drunkenness and divorce are said to have been tracked back to inefficient kitchens.

A learned English medical man declares, "If all young women were taught to cook properly there would be much less drunkenness in the world."

On divorce, a woman's club speaker says, "Delicatessen wives, who buy meals out instead of cooking them themselves, are the cause of the increase in divorces."

One of the most rapid changes taking place today is in the way we eat.

In the past ten years the restaurants have more than doubled in the city of New York. They serve six million meals every day.

Royal S. Copeland, former Health Commissioner of New York, predicts that in a very few decades no one will be eating home-cooked food.

At any rate the trend is definitely away from the old-fashioned home-prepared meals, and eating food cooked outside will more and more become the custom.

Before holding up hands in horror let us consider the possibilities. In itself there is little to bewail.

If the food is well cooked, scientifically prepared, carefully inspected, and fresh, as far as the stomach fares the change will not be for the worse, and in some cases decidedly for the better.

There is no valid reason why women have to cook the food which the family eat any more than make the clothes they wear.

If the food is wholesome and nourishing it is not highly important whether it comes from a small kitchen or a large one, or who does the manual labor connected with its preparation.

The really important consideration concerns itself, not with eating at all, but with the new leisure.

Women who are freed from the stove will find several hours of extra leisure on their hands.

Whether they use this for self-improvement or waste it is the most important consideration in the change in our method of eating.

SUGGESTS PLACING EPISCOPATE LETTER BEFORE CONGRESS FOR CONSIDERATION OF AMENDMENTS

In Reply of Mexican President to Missive of Bishop Moroy del Rio.

HOPE RAISED.

Says Church is Justified in Asking Amelioration of Regulations.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 21.—(Canadian Press.) — Considerable hope has been aroused, with what justification remains to be seen, that the religious question may be solved, as President Calles has suggested in a communication to the Catholic Episcopate by bringing the matter before congress with a view to securing a Constitutional amendment, or before the supreme court for a decision amending or modifying the religious clauses of the constitution.

President Calles' letter to Archbishop Moray del Rio, of Mexico, is in reply to the recent request of the Episcopate that the chief executive bring about a suspension of the religious regulations. In it the president reiterates his intention to stand by the constitution, but he says that the Catholic Episcopate is left free to make an attempt to have the fundamental law pertaining to religion changed.

He points out that while the Episcopate was within its rights in asking him for amelioration of the regulations, relief should be sought by means of either congress or the supreme court, or both. If the Episcopate offered amendments to the constitution, the president declares he would not use his power to have them withdrawn, from Congress.

In a statement replying to the letter of President Calles to-night the Episcopate neither accepts nor rejects the president's proposal that it seek congressional or supreme court relief. Arguing the Episcopate's position, the statement says, that it has not asked abrogation of the regulations, but merely wants their suspension pending congressional action or some other solution. The statement expresses appreciation of the conciliatory spirit of President Calles' letter, but does not indicate the Episcopate's future. So far as popular opinions in Mexico City can be noted, it seems favorable to the idea as the only suggestion thus far offered promising the possibility of a solution. In the first editorial discussing the religious situation in Mexico since the religious regulations became effective on July 31, El Universal favors the proposal. It argues the determination by constitutional means of whether the religious laws are approved by popular opinion. If so, the paper says, they should be obeyed; if not, they should be amended.

Amendment of the constitution can be brought about by approval by a two-thirds vote of the Federal congress, after which there must be approval by a majority of the state legislatures popular opinion as referred to by El Universal, probably is intended to mean the votes of the representation in the legislatures.

FILMING TRENT

spared for one week. The Trent Waterway Development Association is negotiating for a craft to make the rest of the trip.

The boat was secured through the co-operation of E. A. Peck, ex-M.P., Peterborough, whose interest in the Trent dates back to the time, many years ago, when as Secretary of the then Trent Valley Canal Development Association, he was successful in taking a large deputation to Ottawa, in the interests of the fine waterway which we have today.

Mayor W. A. Fraser and W. H. Ireland, M.P., Trenton, were instrumental in interesting the Hon. W. H. Price, Provincial Treasurer, in the filming of the Trent. The Motion Picture Bureau is part of the Treasury Department, and is doing invaluable work under the direction of G. E. Patton.

Having secured the co-operation of the Federal and Provincial Governments in the project, the Trent Waterway Development Association has synchronized their movements and prepared an effective plan of operation.

Each director of the Association, residing in the principal municipalities along the route of the Trent Waterway has been invited to board the craft and point out the places of interest and beauty spots in his particular locality. Activities along the route, such as bathing, sailing, canoeing, motor boating, and fishing will be filmed, so that it behoves each municipality to consult the sailing schedule and arrange an activity best suited to the locality.

That the Trent Waterway Development Asociation has played a big part in the development of tourist traffic to Central Ontario as the premier organization of its kind in the province is demonstrated by their successful launching of this present activity. The films depicting Ontario's premier summer resort district, the Trent Waterway, when shown by the Association in many important cities in the United States and Canada should be instrumental in bringing about a decided increase to the already gratifying volume of tourist traffic which is netting the province millions of dollars annually and growing each year.

The following are the officers and directors of the Association:

Officers.—Honorary President, G. K. Fraser, Burleigh Falls; hon. vice president, F. D. Kerr, K.C., Peterborough; president, W. M. Foulds, Hastings; first vice president, Geo. J. Overend, Orillia; second vice-president, J. B. Hanly, Midland; secretary-treasurer, Frank G. Stinson, Peterborough.

Board of Directors.—Mayor W. A. Fraser, Trenton; Reeve H. Miller, Frankford; Mayor G. A. Kingston, Campbellford; A. Coughlin, Hastings; Ald. C. H. Ackerman, Peterborough; J. W. Fraser, Peterborough; J. F. Lillicrap, Lakefield; Reeve W. C. Moore, Bobcaygeon; T. H. Stinson, M.P., Lindsay; Reeve E. Tiers, Fenelon Falls; Reeve J. Birchard, Beaverton; Mayor J. F. Craig, Barrie; F. Stanton, Port Stanton; C. P. Stocking, Waubaushene; E. B. Brown, Victoria Harbor, Midland; H. M. Warnock.

FARM HAND TELLS OF PLANE CRASH

Inquest Held on Bodies of Cross Channel Airmen.

FOLKESTONE, Eng., August 21 (Canadian Press).—Graphic descriptions of the plunge of the cross Channel plane which was wrecked near here Wednesday, were given at the inquest yesterday over the bodies of Robert Blaney, of Boston, Mass., and Vigo Rizzi, of London, who were killed instantly, and of Pilot De Lisle, who died in a hospital from his injuries on Thursday afternoon.

A farm hand, William Perry, and others who saw the plane drop, told how it hit a barn, then a haystack and then twisted to earth in a great crash. Perry said he rushed to the scene to find thirteen passengers jammed in a screaming mass in front of the cabin.

"Blaney was dead," he added. "His head was jammed under the seat, and we removed his body in order to extricate those who were injured and screaming."

Dr. Arthur McVittie testified that none of Balney's bones was broken, and he believed death was due to the bursting of the right lung.

Giving the verdict of accidental death, the coroner said it appeared that the pilot did not like the fog which had developed, and decided to land. So far as the plane was concerned, there seemed to be no cause for trouble. Presumably the pilot misjudged the distance and hit the barn, and so crashed. The coroner emphasized that the Government proposed to carry out an extensive inquiry into the disaster.

VISITS WINNIPEG.

Was Guest of City While Enroute to the Antipodes.

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 21 (Canadian Press).—Sir James Allan, for six years High Commission in London for New Zealand, stopped off in Winnipeg yesterday en route to the Antipodes.

He urged closer trade relations between Canada and New Zealand, declaring that products from his country were being shipped to New York and then sent to the Dominion instead of direct. Ships which conveyed Canadian products to New Zealand were forced to return with empty keels, while United States vessels carried to New York the very goods which Canada later purchased at United States prices, he said.

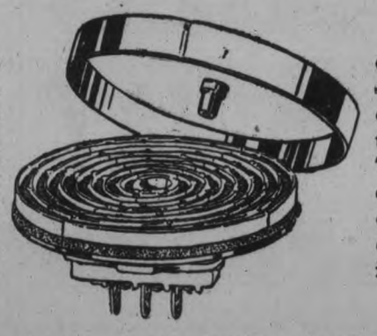
This wonderful, rapid element is as far ahead of all others as electric light is ahead of candle light.

McClary's Speediron is the only protected, removable, repairable element made. It operates on contact heat. This gives it marvellous speed and eliminates waste by radiation which is one of the greatest defects of open elements. And the Speediron is durable. It cannot be injured by liquids boiling over, spilling—or contact with pots and pans. The cast iron surface protects the coils year in and year out—and if the coils by any chance burn out you can have them replaced easily, inexpensively and quickly—while you wait. The element proper lasts as long as the range itself.

Speediron Elements Now on all McClary's Electric Ranges

This great, new electric cooking feature is now on all McClary's Electric Ranges—making it the most efficient, satisfactory range on the market. And you also get the exclusive advantages of McClary's famous porcelain enamelled "fireless cooker" oven—the oven which keeps on cooking even after the current is turned off. The heavily-insulated oven walls retain heat indefinitely—giving splendid baking results and insuring great economy.



Ask your dealer about a McClary's Electric Range. After you've seen him demonstrate the Speediron you'll agree that McClary's is far ahead of any other for economy, speed, strength and general satisfaction.

CONSERVATIVE CANDIDATE SAYS FORKE VIOLATED AGREEMENT

Mr. Peck Alleges Meighen Had Promise of Progressive Support.

BUDGET VOTE.

Old Age Pensions Declared Matter For Provincial Governments.

The policies of the Conservative party were expounded by E. A. Peck at Nogies' Creek last night. Other speakers at the meeting were W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., and R. J. Soden.

P. Graham was unanimously selected as chairman for the occasion.

E. A. Peck.

"The last time I addressed you I submitted myself to you for election," declared Mr. Peck. He thanked them for the support they had given him and hoped that they would see fit to elect him again. He had no quarrel with J. J. Duffus, the Liberal candidate, he said, but he disagreed with him when he got that extraordinary notion in his head that Mackenzie King would make a good premier for the country. The last session in Ottawa, said Mr. Peck, was unusual and the like of it had never been seen before. When King got back to Ottawa after the last election he did not haev a sufficient majority to govern the country. There was a vote taken to decide who should govern, and, due to the progressives supporting him, Mr. King had a majority of two. Mr. King was thus enabled to carry on until the customs report was brought before the house. We adjourned the House for the week-end, said Mr. Peck, and when we came back we expected that Mr. King would be defeated. However, he resigned. With Mr. Forke promising to support him, Mr. Meighen took over the reins of government and carried on for two days. Due to Mr. Forke not abiding by an agreement (a copy of which Mr. Peck read out to the audience) and the Progressives breaking away it was impossible for Mr. Meighen to continue and this election is the result.

"They say the Governor-General gave the Constitution a wrench when he granted dissolution to Mr. Meighen," said Mr. Peck. It could not have been twisted when the question is going to the people to decide, was his opinion. Referring to the budget, Mr. Peck stated that it had included a certain amount of reduction in taxation. It was a gratifying thing, he said, to find that the country had a little surplus. "We have a large debt: we are anxious to have it reduced, but the Robb budget was not a reduction to the mass of the people. Some people claim it as a wonderful budget, he declared, but he took exception to that statement. Penny postage, he said, was a great advantage to the business people, but was it a substantial reduction to the masses he queried. The receipt tax, while it was an abominable nuisance could not be said to affect the masses either. Income tax, he declared, was not an imposition to the married man or the farmer. Only 225,000 people in the Dominion paid it, he said, so that it could not rightly be claimed a tax affecting the mass of the people. The reduction in the tax benefited the people with substantial salaries, he claimed. The man who buys a new automobile gets it a little cheaper—about 50, he thought, but would not assert this figure as positive.

The Vote of Budget.

"I have been charged with voting against the budget," said Mr. Peck. "I didn't vote against the budget—what I did do was to support the amendment offered by the Hon. Dr. Manion," he declared. This resolution was to the effect that we regretted that the government should see fit to change the customs duties without due investigation, he said.

Mr. Robb could have made a reduction in the sales tax, which affects every person, although they do not pay the tax directly, said Mr. Peck. The merchant pays it to the wholesaler and consequently the people paid it. It would have been a real budget, he said if the sales tax had been dropped. The customs inquiry the speakerdesignated as a most important matter. About one month after the session opened the Hon. H. H. Stevens charged that smuggling was going on to aconsiderable extent. A committee was appointed and consisted of four Conservatives, four Liberals and one Progressive. At this juncture Mr. Peck read extracts from Hansard to show that the report of this committee had condemned the customs staff. In 1923, he said, the Canadian Manufacturers Association adopted a report which said smuggling organizations were in existence and were crippling Canadian industries. These reports were published in the press and were forwarded to cabinet ministers. Similar reports were prepared during 1924 and 1925. The King Government knew long before the Stevens motion of the degeneracy existing in this department which was costing this country millions of dollars annually, he declared.

Mr. Peck quoted extracts from Hansard to prove that the Progressives who formerly were sympathetic toward the King Government were condemning the policy for which his government had stood. "There has been utter carelessness in the manner in which the affairs of this country have been handled," he declared.

Protection For Industry.

He declared that his policy was protection for the working man and industry and this, in his opinion, was still the important question before the electorate. "We need it," he said. "We are shipping our raw material out of the country, have it manufactured elsewhere and then bring back the finished article. This state of affairs could not be wholly prevented but it could be remedied to a great extent," he declared. The exodus of the country's best men, he said, was another reason he was on the platform. He stated that his reasons in this connection were the same as during the last election. "This is a great country and it will prosper when we learn to handle our raw materials," he declared. Referring to Old Age Pensions, Mr. Peck stated that the legislation in respect to Old Age Pensions was a matter for the provincial and not for the Dominion governments, but there was nothing to hinder the government giving money toward old age pensions. He was of the opinion that they were a good thing and would come in time. The provinces will have to take the initiative in the matter, he said. In conclusion, he said the act had not been defeated but would come up again.

W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P.

Mr. Bradburn stated that he was glad to be in that part of the country again and to be speaking in support of Mr. Peck. He received the endorsement of the riding at the last election by a large majority. He served the people as warden of the county of Peterborough, as a member of the Provincial house and he assured them that on September 14 next he would represent them again. The speaker said that he had no fight with J. J. Duffus, their opponent. He had sat with him on the city council and on the Chamber of Commerce, but he said, "we disagree with his policy and the government he is backing up—we feel that his government did not fulfill the promise they said they would." They reduced the income tax but this represented comparatively few; they made reductions in the postage but that would not affect the people of this community; it did benefit the banks and larger institutions. When King tells you Meighen is endangering the British Empire in regard to the constitutional issue, he said, you know that he did not worry about the future of the Empire during the great crisis it passed through.

R. J. Soden.

"I will attempt to lay before you the shortcomings of the Liberal government since they have been in power," said Mr. Soden. "He had nothing against J. J. Duffus but he believes in one policy and we believe in the other," he said. The people are the jury and if they think the Conservative policy is right they will support it. The King government had not a leg to stand on, he declared. He asked the audience to consider the business aspect five years ago and compare it with to-day. Five years ago, declared Mr. Soden, nearly all the industries were running full and the retail merchants were in good shape with bread and work for all. What is their condition to-day? he asked. "Since King began tinkering with the tariff and lowering it, business has been declining," he declared. Each time the parliament met Mr. King lowered the tariff, he said, notwithstanding the fact that every other country has raised it. Mr. Baldwin, he said, staked his political reputation on the tariff; he was beaten but look at the unemployment in England to-day as a result of free trade, he said. France, with her tariff and despite her numerous governments, had not an idle man in the country. This country, he said, had the greatest wheat in the world and it was preferred by the people to the south. In consequence, he said, the American millers began to buy the Canadian wheat in preference to their own. The farmers went to the government seeking protection, and as a result an embargo was placed on the Canadian wheat. The millers continued to use up the stocks they had on hand and mixed it with the American wheat. It finally reached the vanishing point and the customers commenced to complain, then the millers went to the government. The government decided to let them have Canadian wheat but charged them a duty of 42 cents a bushel. On obtaining a sworn statement that the wheat is for export they obtain a rebate of 99 per cent of the 42 cents. Up to that time the Canadian mills had been running to full capacity but directly the Americans got these concessions a number of them had to close down. "Seeing that we produce the finest wheat in the world, why should our neighbors have the privilege of milling it?" he asked. "Mr. King is a dreamer," he said. "He sits back and thinks of Mackenzie King."

Mr. Soden described at some length the coal situation, stating that we paid thirty-seven million dollars a year to the Americans for coal when we had plenty in Alberta. "We buy the coal and what have we next spring? They have the money and we have the ashes," he declared. If the coal mines in Alberta were kept busy it would mean more miners and consequently more money for the farmers and merchants. He advised his listeners to think for themselves, select what they thought was the best policy to govern the country. "If you do this you will vote for a good, honest, stable government," he said in conclusion.

FOUR CANDIDATES ASKED TO ATTEND

U. F. O. Asks Them To Speak at Garden Party.

HASTINGS, Aug. 21.—Four of the political candidates in the district have been invited to attend the eighth annual garden party of the Peterborough county organization of the U. F. O., to be held on Thursday, August 26 at the home of R. J. Girven on the boundary line at South Dummer. The parliamentary aspirants are Messrs. Duffus, Peck, Embury and Gilroy of Peterborough and Peterborough-Hastings constituencies, in the order their names appear on the posters. J. J. Morrison is indicated as the headliner for the afternoon's oratory.

Miss Mary Barry, who resides on the Gravel Road, was honored by her friends from the town and country at a prenuptial social in Lynch's hall, Wednesday night. She was presented with an address expressing the regrets of her friends at her departure in the near future to live in Buffalo. She also received a purse of gold as a tangible testimony of the esteem in which she is held in this community. The money was decided upon instead of other presents because of the fact that her journey will take her across the border.

VERY GOOD, PUPILS.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Aug. 20.—New answers were given to old questions in a test given recently to high school sophomores. "Alcohol is made from gasoline," "air brakes are used on balloons," "organdie is a kind of marmalade," and "bacon comes from a cow" were some of the answers.

CHRYSLER SEES BIG UNDEVELOPED MOTOR CAR MARKET

Plans To Announce Bigger, Roomier, Easier Riding Car in Small Car Field.

Scorns Saturation Point.

A tremendous undeveloped market in the small car field for an automobile that is larger, more roomy, much better riding and exceptionally durable, is seen by Walter P. Chrysler, president of the Chrysler Corporation.

In a statement on this question, Mr. Chrysler says:

"Fully aware that there are today nearly 20,000,000 motor cars owned in Canada and the United States, it seems to me that there are almost unlimited possibilities in that market. Such a car must, of course, combine in it those qualities no other car in that field possesses, if it is to register the success of which I speak.

"There is no question in my mind but what the people who prefer a low-priced, quality automobile, are desirous of having built into that car certain features that heretofore have not been made available to that field. The industry has not given sufficient attention to the man who drives a small, low-priced car. It simply has gone on the assumption that the same measure of comforts that must be incorporated into every car of higher price, if it is to be successful, could not be built into the smaller cars.

"I disagree most emphatically with that assumption. The person who prefers to drive a small car is entitled to every consideration that can be given him. It is possible to build the qualities of comfort, roominess, easy riding and long life into a small car. The possibilities with such a car are so tremendous that it can actually be built in great quantities at remarkably low cost, if the manufacturer has the capacity and organization to do it.

"Medical authorities have definitely established the fact that the man who continuously drives a small car suffers from abnormal and excessive fatigue and nervous strain because of the noise, jolting, bouncing and excessive vibration he has always undergone to date in that type car. He has been compelled to put up with those discouraging conditions because, up to the present, no one has gone about the task of designing a small, low cost car that remedied them.

"Whenever he has had opportunity to take his family for a long, week-end drive or for a tour across several states during his vacation, the entire family has been forced to tolerate the same condition.

"Better designed cars, built to a single standard of higher quality, with modern space engineering, improved springs and generally improved riding comfort, are bound to remedy this and are bound to enjoy a conspicuous successful success for their producer.

"There is a ready-made market of 100,000 cars the first year for the company which produces that type of car. We are going to do it. Unless we are far astray in our judgment of what the public wants in the so-called small car field, it will appreciate such a car to the extent that it will make it an outstanding success from the first dat it is given opportunity to ride in thay type of car."

LIFE WAS A BURDEN.

Restored To Health Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

"It is a pleasure," says Mrs. Ross Boulter, of Victoria, P.E.I., "to tell you of the new health and strength I got through he use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before taking the pills life was a burden to me. I was so badly run down that I did not know what to do. My blood seemed to have turned to water, I was very pale, constantly tired, and was losing flesh. It was a trial to attempt housework. Added to this I had a bad cough and my husband and friends thought I was going into consumption. The medical treatment I was taking did not appear to do me any good, and I had about given up hope when a friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I got six boxes and found so much benefit from them that I got six more boxes. Before these were all taken I was a new woman restored again to good health. I gained in weight, the cough left me, my appetite returned and I once more had a good color. Better still, I was able to do my housework without fatigue. Needless to say I always recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to ailing friends, and I hope this will be the means of pointing the road to good health to some other sufferer."

Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for anaemia, rheumatism, neuralgia, nervousness. Take them as a tonic if you are not in the best physical condition and cultivate a resistance that will keep you well and strong.

If you will send us your name and address a little book, "Building Up the Blood," will be mailed you prepaid. This book contains many useful health hints.

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

VOICE CULTURE

Mrs. J. Douglas Fletcher, 309 Elias Ave., before her marriage known professionally as Madame Helen Farnum, dramatic contralto, has decided to accept a few promising voices for training. Mrs. Fletcher received her musical education from the most outstanding teachers of New York, and had years of experience in Opera, Church and Concert work in that city. For the past two years she has been on the staff of the Hambourg Conservatory of Toronto. The following extract from an article in last November's issue of "Musical Canada" speaks for itself:

"Madame Farnum was born in Toronto, but has spent most of her artistic life in New York's Musical centre. She is now conducting a strikingly successful class of singers at the Hambourg Conservatory of Music."

Madame Farnum has received unanimous praises from the press of the United States and Canada, as the following excerpts will show: "fine interpretation and feeling", "magnificent, beautiful voice," "a contralto of rare mezzo, golden quality and fine dramatic eloquence", "a singer of high endowment, ripe experience and splendid stage presence."

"Madame Farnum's success with her pupils has been equally overwhelming, many of them have been commented on by the Toronto critics in the following terms: 'floating quality of tone', 'particular charm of lyricism', 'beautiful restraint', 'excellent feeling and tone.'"

"From all these glowing tributes, and general popularity which they voice, one need not be surprised at the ranid sweeping success earned by this fine artist."

Mrs. Fletcher not only specializes in voice production and interpretation, but through her own long professional experience will include stage deportment as part of the training. Those pupils selected by her will be afforded an unusual opportunity for experience in the series of prologues and stage presentations which Manager Fletcher is arranging for the coming season at the Capitol Theatre.

CRESCENTS HIT WELL TO BEAT COGS BY 5 TO 2

Graham Makes Seemingly Impossible Catch of Foul Fly in Second.

MASTERSON FANS 13.

Cogs Get Only One Hit Up To Seventh, When They Start Rally.

Crescents clouted out a 5 to 2 victory over Cogs at Exhibition Park last evening, and as no order was received from the O.B.A.A. for the first round, it was not necessary to call a sudden-death contest. The teams will play again on Monday evening.

It was interesting baseball all the way along, with Crescents having an edge on the hitting. Both backstops were weak last evening, but while Crescents were inclined to be peevish when Cogs scored their two runs in the seventh, they were overlooking the hitting of Rishea in the first game which saved the team from a loss.

Some of the Cogs also did not fully appreciate Jack Billingsley's real good pitching performance. Had McGee been stronger with his throwing, Crescents would never have scored five runs. So there you are.

Masterson came back strong and although inclined to be wild, hung up a string of thirteen strikeouts and allowed only one hit up to the seventh, when the Cogs punched through a pair of singles.

Cogs put two on in their first on passes by Masterson, but were retired without runs on two strikeouts and a pop to Hall.

Joe Jones scored for Crescents when he walked, made second, stole third and went home on Scully's infield out by way of Billingsley.

McGee slammed out a double over McCarney with two gone in the second, and stole third, where he watched Weese fan. Rishea had a bad throw on this play, but the runner had the base stolen and the ball was retrieved in time to stop a score.

Crescents went out in a row, Graham making the feature catch of the night when he went far to right to make a brilliant play on Masterson's foul fly, just reaching the ball with his gloved hand.

Wilson got on when Hall fumbled his grounder, but the short-fielder worked nicely on an accurate peg from Rishea to get Wilson on an attempted steal. The next two fanned.

Billingsley made trouble for himself by passing Hall in the Crescents half of the third. Joe Jones lined a hit through third. The runners advanced when Billingsley's throw to second escaped. Wilson, and Hall scored on Scully's long fly to Cripps. Ranger singled into right to score Jones, and stole second and third, where he halted as Corbett fanned.

Cogs were having trouble with Masterson and they again went out in a row in the fourth. Billingsley was equally effective as he turned back the Crescents.

Masterson continued to mow down the opposition in the fifth. F. Jones was playing left field, Corbett being moved in to short. F. Jones singled into centre and brother Joe drew a double into left. McCarney singled into right to score the runners. Scully ripped a single through second and when Ranger skied back of short, McCarney, probably figuring on the play being called on "infield out" did not go to third. The ball dropped and was thrown to Weese for the out. Billingsley came right back and fanned Corbett and Masterson.

Wilson started the sixth by pulling a pass. Smith and Graham fanned and F. Jones came over to the line to make a nice catch on Billingsley's fly.

Rishea drew the only hit of the frame for Crescents, a long single between centre and left. The other three were struck out.

In the seventh Rooke fanned, a passed ball giving him the bag. Cripps enlivened things by singling into right on which Rooke scooted to third. Crary flied out to McCarney, who, after Rooke had changed his mind and gone back to third, threw the ball to the piate. The ball got away from Rishea and Rooke counted. McGee was fanned. Weese drove a hot one through first to score Cripps and Wilson was walked. Smith got Masterson in a hole and then went in himself by going after some bad ones for a strikeout to finish the game.

HOW TO SWIM

by Gilliam Cannon

TAKING A BREATH IN THE CRAWL

Breathing is very important in the crawl. It must be synchonized with the arm movement so that there will be no hitch in the perfect co-ordination of breath, arms and legs.

At first it wil be well to breathe after two strokes of the arms.

Breaths either on the right or left, as comes most natural, but make the breathing as regular as clockwork.

The breath is exhaled beneath water and the whole time the face is out of water must be used in inhaling.

Fill the lungs as full as possible on each breath. After getting used to the stroke breathe every third stroke of either the right or left arm and when that breathing count is attained one may go ahead and perfect the crawl to championship speed.

CANDIDATES IN MARITIMES HAVE STRAIGHT FIGHTS

Most of Nominations Have Been Made in Quebec Ridings.

ONTARIO LISTS.

Conservatives Have 81 and Liberals 53 Men in Field.

TORONTO, Aug. 21 (Canadian Press)—A Dominion wide review of the list of candidates already in the field in the Dominion general election, numbering 481, gives some interesting glimpses of the situation. Straight fights between Liberals and Conservatives are again the rule in the Maritime provinces. Prince Edward Island's four members in the last house are again in the fray, two Liberals and two Conservatives, each having a straight fight on his hands.

Conservative and Liberal candidates are also battling in each of Nova Scotia's 14 seats, including 13 of the former members, 11 Conservatives and two Liberals.

Sixty Liberals, including 58 or 60 Liberals elected in 1925, are nominated in Quebec. Forty-two Conservatives and four Independents bring up to 108 the total candidates contesting 65 seats.

Ontario's nomination lists present a rather "spotty" appearance just yet, despite the presence of Conservative candidates in 81 of the 82 seats. Sixty-three of these were elected last year. Another Conservative ex-member, R. L. Baker, is running this year as an Independent-Conservative in Toronto North-East, Lt.-Col. N. M. Young, having secured the official endorsation, bringing the total number of candidates for Ontario's seats to 163, of which 53 are Liberals, including twelve elected last year, eleven Progressives, including Miss Agnes MacPhail and John W. King, two former members, seven Laborites, seven Liberal-Progressives and four Independents.

Five Liberals, seven Liberal-Progressives, and four Progressives are more or less united in opposition to the 17 Conservative candidates in Manitoba. In addition there is an Independent-Liberal candidate, two Labor members of the last House, J. S. Woodsworth and A. A. Heaps respectively in North Centre and North Winnipeg, and Allan Meikie, Labor, in St. Boniface. The solid Conservative front includes the seven elected last year.

LADY STRATHCONA IS BURIED TO-DAY

Laid To Rest at High Gate—Many Attend the Funeral.

LONDON, Aug. 21 (Canadian Press Cable).—The funeral of Baroness Stratchcona and Mount Royal took place this morning, service being held in St. Mark's Church, North Audley Street, London, where a large gathering of prominent people paid tributes of respect to the memory of the deceased lady. Interment was at Highgate.

There were many floral tokens of sorrow, among them being a wreath sent by Hon. P. C. Larkin, Canadian High Commissioner in London, on behalf of the Dominion Government. Hon. Mr. Larkin attended the funeral.

APPRECIATION

This letter speaks for itself. It is one of many we receive from satisfied students. Name of writer and firm with whom placed, furnished upon request.

Mr. J. A. McKone,
Peterborough Business College, Ltd.,
Peterborough, Ontario.

Dear Mr. McKone—

A year ago I finished my Stenographic Course at The Peterborough Business College. At that time I was rather doubtful that I had done wisely in taking this course as I felt convinced that one which required only a few months of study could not be the means of securing for anyone a satisfactory position.

I am now glad to say, Mr. McKone, that these ideas have been replaced by those of an altogether different nature. My year's experience has proved to me that the position you so kindly secured for me, and for which I very sincerely thank you, is certainly all that could be desired, although I am sure you have secured equally good positions for your many graduates.

I want you to know, Mr. McKone, that the kindnesses you have shown me are indeed very much appreciated. Thanking you, I am,

Very sincerely yours,

Why not consider the matter seriously, at once, and decide to commence on Wednesday, September 1st?

The time required is short; the cost is reasonable; and the results invariably satisfactory.

THEATRE AT THE CAPITOL.

MARION DAVIES IN A NEW ROLE

In 'Beverly of Graustark' She Plays a Modern Romantic Girl.

Marion Davies heroine of many romantic roles, is playing one unlike any in her entire career, in her new Cosmopolitan production, "Beverly of Graustark," which opens on Monday at the Capitol Theatre.

Miss Davies has played romantic heroines in historical dramas of the past; has been the centre of court intrigues in mediaeval times has played roles laid in the infancy of New York — but this time she is playing the romantic centre in a European court intrigue—but of the modern day.

Royalty goes through its devious political bargainings and its Burbanked romances—just as in the days of "When Knighthood Was in Flower"—but it is all strictly up-to-date—so much so that a good deal of modern history is, perhaps unconsciously, echoed in the story, which is a spectacular adaptation of George Barr McCutcheon's famous novel.

Miss Davies plays the heroine, an American girl, cousin to the Crown Prince of a European kingdom, who, to aid her royal relative, engages in a daring masquerade, in which, in his uniform, and with her hair clipped short, she impersonates him to foil the plot of a pretender to the throne. Miss Davies' male masquerade is one of the wonders of the screen, so perfect is the illusion. In her uniform, the star is almost a double for the Prince of Wales.

A notable cast surrounds the star, with Antonio Moreno in the leading male role, Roy D'Arcy, Creighton Hale, Paulette Duval, Albert Gran, Max Barwyn, Charles Clary and others.

Sidney Franklin, director of many of Norma and Constance Talmadge's successes, directed the picture, which was produced on a lavish scale, with gorgeous settings and costumes, at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. Agnes Christine Johnston is the scenarist.

Captain Dewart

Mr. Dewart recalled that he was at Buckhorn during the last Provincial election. He said he had kind memories of the meeting.

The people now had clear-cut issues before them. On September 14 they would be called upon to decide the men who would administer the affairs of the country during the next five years.

In 1921, Mr. King was returned to power with what was really a majority of only one. With that, during four years of office, legislation was brought in which often carried large majorities, simply because it met with the approval of the elected representatives of the people.

Situation Since Last Election

Mr. Dewart proceeded to review the political situation since the last election. On October 29, 1925, he said there were returned 100 Liberals, 116 Conservatives, and 29 Progressives, Labor and Independents. No party had a decisive majority.

When the question as to who should be Premier was submitted to the House, the majority decided in favor of Mr. King.

Mr. King put on a programme of practical politics, which meant dollars and cents to the people. The electors, he though, should support the party that reduced taxation. Taxes were reduced by a sum between 25 and 30 millions by the recent budget. The cost of the implements of production had been lessened by $49 on a manure spreader, $23.50 on a binder, and $16 on a wagon. The reductions on automobiles were $51 on Ford touring cars, $87 on Chevrolet coach, and $125 on a Star 6 coach. The reduction had been declared to be the first step towards ruining the automobile industry. But the production of autos during the first six months of 1925 was 93,000. During the same period of the present year, the number was 124,000. In 1921, there was paid in wages, $7,887,000. In 1925, the sum in wages amount to $17,249,000. The General Motors Company in Oshawa were adding a half-million dollar extension to their plant. This did not look like a ruined industry.

Mr. Dewart concluded his address with an enthusiastic eulogy of Mr. Duffus who, he declared, was a man who by his own efforts and energy, had built up a successful business, had become Mayor after six years in the Council, became President of the Chamber of Commerce when that institution was heading for bankruptcy, and in two years of office placed it on its feet. He recommended Mr. Duffus as an ideal representative for the riding of West Peterborough.

Care of the Perennial Border

By Henry J. Moore.

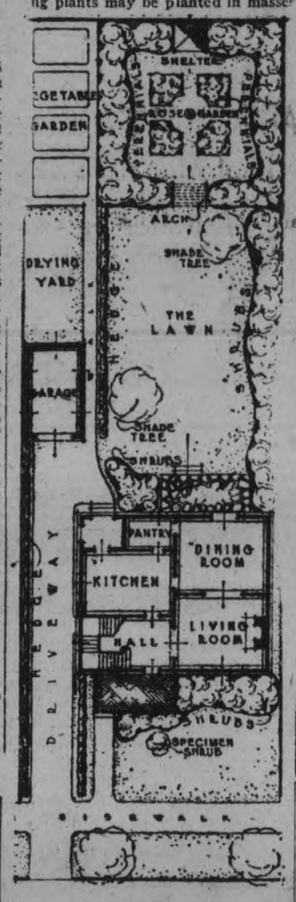
Autumn of all the seasons is a time when the perennial border should not be neglected. During this period cultivation should be assiduously effected, for it is now more largely than at any other time the moisture should be retained in the soil for the use of the plants in whose leaves food is being manufactured to supply to the roots which are to produce the abundance of flowers next year. It is also necessary that air be allowed access to the soil and also warmth so that the soil bacteria may convert the ammonia which is a result of the decomposition of organic matter (manure) into nitrates which are plant foods. Cultivation retains moisture during autumn. Cultivation, however, should cease about mid-September so as not to force growth unduly or the crowns of the plants may become unduly tender.

During late September and Early October, Paeonies and Iris may be planted. Care, however, must be exercised not to plant these too deeply. The former if planted more than a few inches deep will not flower. Two inches should be regarded as the maximum depth. It is well, however, to so plant the roots that the crowns of the plants just show above the ground. With the Iris it is much the same procedure. If you examine a clump in your garden you will find that the thick rhizomes (root stocks) have all been pushed up so that they are not covered to any extent with soil. In some cases the rhizomes are entirely above the surface. When planting see that these thickened roots are barely covered with soil. Light and warmth are essential to the development of the Iris roots, hence the reason they push up out of the soil.

Especially in localities where the winter's temperature is not of the most severe nature, it is desirable to divide the roots of perennials wherever a crowded condition in the border exists during autumn. A sharp spade is a good implemtnt to use and with it to simply sever the root stocks so that large pieces of each plant may be removed to be transplanted elsewhere. In this way crowding of the plants may be obviated for three or four years. This, however, is a procedure which may be practiced more generally in all localities in spring. When the dividing process has been completed the resultant depressions in the soil must be filled with fertile soil and the border be raked smoothly. New borders may at this time also be planted with perennials.

Planting Bulbs.

During October bulbous spring flowing plants may be planted in masses in the perennial border among those suitable are Daffodils, Darwin Tulips, Crocus, Chionodoxa (Glory of the Snow), Scilla, Eranthis, Hyemalis (Winter Aconite) Snowdrops, and other small hardy ones. For this purpose any of the fore-mentioned bulbs which were used for flowering purposes in the home last winter may now be planted in the border. They should not be repotted to be forced again into flower for some years.



Cleaning Up the Border.

During late October it is proper to cut away and remove the decaying stems of the perennials and after growth has absolutely ceased to lightly fork the soil. Especially if the soil is heavy should this be effected to favor the admission of air and of frost with their ameliorating influences. Toward mid-November earlier or later according to season, a covering of strawy litter about four inches in thickness should be placed on the border in this may be mixed any tree leaves which can be collected. It should be borne in mind that any protective material used should be of such a nature as not to preclude air from passing inward or so absorbative as to absorb and retain moisture during winter. Your plants live through winter as through summer. Air is as necessary to their lives as to human beings. Do not cover your valuable plants with impervious materials or to such a depth with any material so that air cannot get through. If you do your plants will die. Bear in mind the protective mulch is not to keep the frost out but to keep it in so that in spring, should abnormally early thaws occur the plants will not heave from the soil as the mulch will keep in the frost.

It is better to apply stable manure to your border in spring than in Fall and to fork it into the soil between the plants. Fresh, strawy manure however, should not be used but only that which is fairly well rotted. Copyright, 1926, MacLean Building Reports Limited.

Question: I have noticed in some houses where steel casement windows are used that the screens are placed on the inside of the windows. Is this necessary?

• • •

Screens on all casements opening out must be placed inside so that they will not interfere with the opening of the windows. This is not a disadvantage for it protects the screens from rust and dust, making them more durable. Draperies are kept cleaner.

MEETING OF MOOSE MEMBERS

Supreme Dictator Norman G. Heyd, of Toronto, the Speaker.

Special open meeting, Peterboro Lodge, Loyal Order of Moose, Sons of England Hall, on Tuesday night. The meeting was addressed by Supreme Dictator Norman G. Heyd of Toronto, past dictator E. M. Austin in the chair.

Mr. Heyd lectured on the wonderful good accomplished by the Order in the care of needy members and their families. In his talk he drew a very vivid picture of the "City of Children", in and conducted by the Moose Order at Mooseheart, Illinois.

He quoted statistics showing that the crime wave throughout the American continent is caused by the vast number of underprivileged children cast upon our land. It showed how this could be avoided if their parents would only make such preparation for the care of children at this Order of Peterboro.

The Moose Lodge extends to all our citizens an invitation to assist in this great work that should be supported by every man and woman that has the "good of children" at heart.

The cost of membership is very little and the good done extends throughout the land. Your help is needed. For information see Mr. H. J. Long, dictator, Charlotte street, Mr. E. M. Austin, past dictator, Downyflake, Mr. H. H. Dinsdale, secretary, Charlotte, and Mr. Manning as Deputy Supervisor.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER.

(By Mildred Marshall.)

To-day's talismanic stone is the sard, which is most fortunate for women. Set in a design in which the grape and ivy vines are interwoven it is sure to exercise its powers for good, according to an ancient belief.

The sapphire, to-day's natal stone, is the gem of constantcy, but its powers apply more definitely to those already married than to lovers. It should always be worn on the ring finger and a warning is given against possessing an imperfect stone, since the good fortune which is sought will turn against the wearer.

Green is the color to be worn today. It is significant of life, joyousness and divine protection.

The rose of sharon is to-day's lucky flower. Worn by a woman, it is believed to bestow unusual loveliness.

SHE DESCRIBES A STUNNING EMBROIDERED GOWN

This afternoon we had a pleasant reunion in the manikin room. For some unexplained reason there was more or less of a lull in the steady line of clients who have been streaming in for some time past.

"I know the reason," volunteered Gaby. "It's such a very pleasant afternoon that sensible people have decided they simply can't be bothered with clothes."

"I'm inclined to agree with you," I returned. "It's the kind of afternoon I'd play hookey if I were still in school."

"Don't put bad ideas in my head," Gaby warned. "You can play hookey from work as well as from school."

"Well, to divert you, I'll show you the newest frock in the establishment, and one which is so pretty you'll want to put it on and walk right out into the sunshine in it," I confided.

"Do let me have a look at such a creation," Gaby urged.

Accordingly, I disappeared in the direction of Madame's office, took off the simple slip I was wearing in idle moments between modeling, and donned the frock that I really think is a beauty.

It's a gray wool crepe stitchedwith lavender, and I had an idea it would catch Gaby's fancy to a marked degree.

Nor was I mistaken, for Gaby gave one gasp of pleasure and approval when I paraded in, wearing a stunning little purple straw I had picked up in the millinery room on the way

"Dear me, Madame has done it again," Gaby exclaimed. "I know it's wrong to covet, but how can I escape it when she designs such a beautiful frock under my very nose."

"I knew you'd love it," I said triumphantly.

"The rage for pastel crepes in the Winter brought in this vogue for pale colors," Gaby remarked. "And if there's anything more Springlike in appearance than soft, light gray wool crepe, I don't know what it is."

The lavender embroidery on the frock was done in rather widely spaced stitches, so that it gave a shadow effect. The bodice was semi-fitted, and finished with a scalloped treatment, while the skirt was pleated on to this.

"That is a perfect Spring dress, and I know the first young person who sees it will want to carry it away," Gaby said regretfully.

HER OWN WAY by a Girl of Today

A TENSE ENCOUNTER

I stood beside the car talking with Joan who was eagerly scanning her brother's face. I, too, looked up at him sitting on the seat of the roadster and making not the slightest move to join us on the sidewalk.

I never after that first glance was able to catch his eye, however. As far as I was concerned there was nobody at home.

"Come on in the house, Judy," said Joan. "John will follow us."

I wondered why my heart was beating so fast. It had never played this trick upon me before. I wondered why I did not want to leave John Meredith. I must have lagged for Joan took hold of my arm and said in a low voice, as she turned me around:

"Let's go in, Judy, for John will never get out of the car while you are here. He is so sensitive about his crippled condition."

With that I walked as fast as possible up the few steps into the house. Here I ran into Mr. Robinson. "Good morning," I said, and I hoped he did not notice my voice; it seemed rather strange to me.

He pointedly ignored me, however, and turning to Joan, said:

"It is not customary to have strangers at a conference of the kind which we have this morning."

"But Judy is not a stranger," his stepdaughter answered. "She is my companion and business manager, Dad."

"Since when has Miss Dean occupied that responsible position," interrupted Mr. Robinson.

"Since yesterday, Dad, when she got me out of a terrible fix."

"Why didn't you come to me?"

"You are the last person, Dad, I would have gone to. In Judy I have found the first woman since mother died, that I could be confidential with and I want her to hear everything about this settlement of my estate under my mother's will, so that she will know just exactly where I stand. Then she can transact all my affairs with some sort of intelligence."

"Joan, do you mean to tell me that you are going to make this young girl, who was only yesterday a department store woman, the manager of your fortune?"

"Why, of course, Dad, I am going to leave all my legal business in the hands of Mr. Elkins, as usual and I expect that you have men to take care of different departments of my business, but I want Judy to talk over the things these men do. I want Judy to let them know that she is on the job and if she doesn't know what they are talking about she is the one to ask questions. We are going to Europe together immediately if possible, and I am sure she will be able at least to keep my checking account straight and advise me on other matters. Surely you must know that two heads are better than one and I have just found out that Judy has a pretty level head on her shoulders."

"Yes," grunted Mr. Robinson, and he gave me a queer kind of look. I smiled back at hime as unconcernedly as I could, for to tell the truth I was very nervous, as I did not know just what to do. However, I took my courage in my hands and asked:

"Did you find the bottle that you wanted me to give you, Mr. Robinson?"

HOROSCOPE

"The Stars Incline, but do not Compel"

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

SATURDAY AUGUST 21 1926

Adverse planetary influences are strong today, according to astrology. The aspects tend toward thwarted plans and frequent disappointments.

Under this planetary government it is wise to be most cautious in signing any sort of contract. Leases must be especially investigated, it is warned.

Letters and writing should be carefully safeguarded, if there is any danger of libel, for many suits are forecast for the autumn.

This is read as a most unlucky sway for the signing of notes or for making any sort of concessions to debtors.

Women today are subject to unfavorable planetary influences which may disturb them mentally and thwart their best laid plans.

This is not a lucky day for love affairs, since men may be usually wary and suspicious.

It is not a fortunate wedding day, for it presages numerous disagreements and a desire for domination on the part of the husband.

Domestic peace may be easily disturbed while this configuration prevails, for there may be a tendency toward quarrels and irritability.

Many cases of national interest are to come before the courts in the autumn when crimes of unusual character will arrest public attention.

All the more subtle methods of obtaining money are to be prevalent in the autumn when forgeries and embezzlements may be as numerous as were hold-ups and burglaries.

Many large bequests are to be made to educational institutions and hospitals before the first of the year, it is prognosticated.

Naval affairs may be criticized, for there is a sign read as indicating extraordinary conditions in one branch of the service.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a year that brings good cheer, new friends and new opportunities are foretold.

Children born on this day probably will be very popular and will find success and prosperity easily within reach.

ADELE

Derived from the Teutonic Adilo, which also is the root of Adelaide, the name Adele, is one of the most ancient known to students. The significance of the name is of the most heroic character and it was a favorite with the ruling houses of the various German principalities as far back as the tenth and eleventh centuries. The names in its earliest beginnings was very much the same in form and even in spelling as it is today. Adela is probably the widest variation in the course of centuries.

The name was widely adopted in France, as well as in England and Italy under different forms from Adalaida to Adeline.

The jewel associated with persons bearing the name Adele is the turquoise. The turquoise is held to have peculiar properties of protecting the person wearing it from harm and warning them of ipproaching danger by breaking. Friday a Adele's most fortunate day and her lucky number is six.

A DEEP ONE, UNCLE.

Emily had been fascinated by Uncle Wil's stories. Particularly was she impressed with some exploits of Teddy Roosevelt before he became prsident of the United States.

"And do you remember him?" asked the little girl.

"Yes, indeed," replied her uncle, "You see, I'm much older than you."

"Well, then," she asked, "how much older will I have to be before I can remember him?"—Christian Science Monitor.

MADE IN CANADA

ONCE UPON A TIME — THE FLYING SHIP—VIII — by W. J. ENRIGHT.

A SWINGING

Where Harmony Church grove joined the big woods behind it, it held a cathedral suggestion of columns and arches in the tall black trunks and high springing branches, but in front, where narrow tracks ran in from the main-travelled road, other trees of wider root-hold, and better sunshine, spread so umbrageously that plenty of their branch-tips were within reach of anybody in saddle. Hence they were ideal for hitching—the trickiest saddler couldn't possibly "slip the bridle," and run home leaving a rider afoot. Surge as he might, the boughs gave to his impulse. Men and boys for the most part did the hitching—women got down decorously upon the horse-block certain that even if there was no acquaintance in the masculine group clustered hard by the church door, volunteers would touch hats and say: "You better let us tend to the horses."

Yet—there were outlaws. Witness the whispered ripple running about and inside the log church upon a bright hot Sunday.

"Look! I do wish you would look at that!" Sist' Bevridge ejaculated in a groaning whisper, eyes fast to the window. She weighed two hundred, "raised the tune" regularly, and led in prayer meetings to beat anybody. "No! Ye won't see that little fool preacher. Like 's not he's off fishin'—said hisself he always wanted to go days like this. But Polly-Ann Huelin all by herself, has rid in, past the horse-block on to the furthest hitch-tree, flung her bridle over a swingin' limb an' slid down, 'thought waitin' for any man's helpin'——"

"What of it. She's a Huelin—like 's not her Ma's gig is half a mile behind her," Sist' Mason, her gossip, returned placidly.

Sist' Beveridge snorted: "You needn't be takin' up fer that gal—she'll never more'n say Sczt to your son Joe again—her mind's plum sot on that fool little preacher."

"I doubt it—but shore's she wants him, she'll git him—that's her way," the gossip chuckled amiably.

Up went Bevridge's hands—came sibilantly from the watcher: "There he comes—the preacher—full-gallopin'—straight to Polly-Ann's tree. Lawsy! He don't moren' nod to her. Her back's to him—makin' out she's waiting for her Ma. I made shore they'd come in together."

The Huelins were distinctly what the blacks called "quality white folks." Also foremost in every good work. Surprising rather, if one took account of the facts, that Madame was a devout Methodist, her husband one of the free-thinking gentlemen who came from the seaboard states to help in the settlement of the blue grass of Kentucky and Tennessee. This crucial difference made no rift in family life. Rather it bred a tolerance as rare as it was beautiful. The squire was courteously hospitable to all ministers—it had gone hard with him to say to young Headly: "You'll understand why I say don't show yourself too friendly with us. Your church people will resent it. I'm sorry—you're of our own sort—then too, you'll be a fine measure of a man for my Polly—after a while."

Only that—but Headly understood Marian was no more for him than for her humble slave Joe Mason. Hard! How hard he had not dreamed, until the inner sense constrained him to pass her in silence—unless his eye spoke.

Did it? He wondered dully, the while he strove manfully to give heart and soul to the work in hand. He loved it—best of anything, he tried to tell his conscience. Vainly! Yet those listening fell awed. He spoke as through lips touched with holy fire. His words cut deep, stung, stirred, until listeners fell to weeping, praying, at last shouting loudly their joy in the glory, the goodness of God. Madame Huelin led the shouting—she who was normally so shy, so sweetly silent, a very white rose of womanhood. Though her husband never listened to a sermon, he came always to take her home after service. Thus in the height of her ecstasy she saw his face outside the door and darted down the aisle, crying clearly: "Jamie! I'm seeing heaven—but—if you won't come there—I'll go with you——"

With her last words Madame had sunk to her knees—to the floor—lay there breathless, white and still as death.

A week later she was almost herself. Marian had hardly left her throughout the first days. Now she was sleeping the clock round, unheeding that her father sat deep in conclave with Headly. At last the Squire asked, with a hard breath: "Son, how did it happen? You didn't do it—it was possession—something in you beyond the power of mere mortal. Was it, think you, of God—or the devil—you believe in them—I do not."

"Neither, sir!" Headly answered, his head low-bowed upon clasped hands: "Nothing more than the out-reach, the agony of love—love denied. It was a man choosing between his heart and his soul. I may be vain, but—I might win your daughter in spite of you. Her happiness would be the price She does not love me—yet—only cares for me fantastically because I'm different But—she won't forget me quite—not even when the true-love comes. You—you—'ll say goodbye for me—I don't dare. I'd die to make her happy—this is harder a lot."

"You—you—shan't go," the squire said tremulously. "Take her—with my blessing. I may be cloudy-minded about God—but I know a man when I find one."

AWAKENING

She saw him coming across the sands—just as she had dreamed that he would come to her after all the parting and pain, when she had jilted him to marry his best friend. Her husband had died, and Jim Dacre had written her a courteous note of condolence from his new home in Hawaii. She had not seen him since her wedding day until now, when she had been widowed two years, he came across the Florida sands.

"I have waited for you to come," she said with a smile.

"The years have been filled with work," he said briefly. How fine he was. He seemed to retain all of his old youthful vigor, his clear, alert eyes, his humorous mouth that once had been grimly unsmiling.

"You have never married." She made the statement as one accepts a fact.

"Why, no," he said soberly.

Her head drooped and her white fingers played with the pebbles. "Life is cruel, Dick. We expect so much of life at twenty!"

"We do that at twenty and at every succeeding birthday. Even now, at forty, I expect much of life."

"Poor boy," she wanted to say, "I will give it to you now." But she was too clever to force his hand. She believed that he had cherished her picture in his faithful heart all these years—and she was right. He had crossed the continent to come to her and win her love, if possible. Then he would take her back to his beautiful island home and they would make up for the bitter years.

"You deserve your heart's desire," she said softly.

He winced. "I wonder just how you define one's heart's desire."

She hesitated. Of course she had heard of his extensive plantations in that Pacific paradise—he was becoming rich. Best of all she still loved him. A great wave was coming in to break in lace-like foam on the sands. A dainty pink shell fell at his feet. He held it to his ear.

"It tells of the beach at home in Hawaii," he said dreamily.

"Dick—Hawaii is thousands of miles away—and your shell smells too strongly of the sea—I hate it!"

"I love that salt savor of the sea—and the musical clash of shells on a tropical shore—I cannot picture you there, Janet."

"What is it like—there?" she asked.

"Ride out with me in the early morning, Janet. My house is on a hillside, in a garden filled with roses, heliotrope, orange trees, overrun with yellow jasmine, and blazing with scarlet hibiscus. The birds are brilliant jewels, the wind is sweet with ripening fruits and myriads of flowers. A brisk ride across the pineapple plantation, down the slope, and then, the beach and the sea."

"Poor boy—so alone," she murmured.

He began to be irritated by her tone. He had believed he was rather to be envied out there in his own place—and if Janet thought he missed the round of society to which she was devoted, she was mistaken. Out in that island paradise there was a woman—a mere slip of a girl—a wholesome, fun-loving bit of femininity; the sister of one of his partners. There were golden freckles on her adorable nose—her eyes were dark blue and not too sophisticated. The very thought of this girl made him homesick, though he had never had a sentimental thought of her before—he had never dreamed of marrying her. He had always thought he would marry Janet or remain a bachelor.

He tossed the shell toward an incoming wave.

"What are you doing," she idly asked.

"Giving it a last chance to go back to Hawaii," he said whimsically.

"You foolish boy—as if it could go through the Isthmus of Panama. Ah, your shell has gone!"

"The undertow has caught it and carried it out to sea—home, some day, let us hope." He stood there looking down at her faded loveliness. "The wave of homesickness has caught me, too, Janet, and I am going back. Some day, perhaps, you will come to my island—I will gather my friends and we will be very gay and fashionable for a while."

"And your—wife—if you have one then—she will be very gay and fashionable, too?"

He blushed as ingenuously as a boy. "She is—that is—some day, she may become so—wish me luck, Janet!"

"I wish you all the luck in the world. Dick, but I shall not come. I do not like yellow jasmine, and scarlet hibiscus spoils the landscape for me! I will send you a wedding gift some day."

He hurried away as if now he could no longer wait. He had come all this distance to find that his heart was behind him in the keeping of that girl at home.

THE LITTLE FOOLER.

Josepheus called up the fire department and said that the house was on fire. When the fireman got there he ran out of the house smiling and laughing and crying, "April Fool! April Fool!" But you know how firemen are. Well, so were these, and they didn't think it a bit funny. Josepheus noticed this and rather than incur their disapproval, ran into the house and soon had a capable blaze going. That made the firemen happy again and they all went in with their axes and broke up the furniture. Even though Josepheus didn't fool the firemen, he at least played a mighty skillful joke on his father.

FALL FASHION NUMBER

Doesn't It Get Your Goat?

Clothes and the Man - By Arnold Bennett

A CONTINENTAL reputation is something; and both the English male creature and the English male creature's clothes have an enormous prestige on the Continent. At his physical best the Englishman is held to be without a rival in form, carriage, and distinction; and though some Scandinavians might well dispute this, not even Scandinavians would dispute his pre-eminence in the matter of attire. (I say nothing of his mental qualities, about which the leading continental races have their own views—to which they are doubtless entitled.)

For men's clothes London is to masculine Europe what Paris is to feminine Europe. To be dressed in London is the ambition of youthful dandies from Calais to Bucharest; and the ambition persists despite the effect of the singular attire which hundreds of thousands of Englishmen choose to display every summer in continental capitals.

Bond Street is supposed to be the chosen haunt of the well-dressed man. Well, I have had perhaps exceptional opportunities of inspecting the pavements of Bond Street on fine mornings in spring and autumn, when the latest fashions in suits appear on the most perfect male bodies in the civilized world. I have often issued out into Bond Street for the express purpose of regarding those suits on those bodies. And they made a very pleasing spectacle; and they engendered in myself the mad desire for perfection in dress, and I agreed that the continental reputation of the same was well deserved.

And yet in Britain, just as in other countries, there is almost no public interest in male attire. The world's greatest dressmakers advertise themselves freely in the papers (and indeed the papers would be a poor and a dull thing without their lovely and exciting proclamations) and they plant their establishments in prominent thoroughfares. But the world's greatest tailors are generally content to hide themselves with the modesty of violets in streets known only to taxi-drivers; the supreme sartorial names, murmured with awe in the selectest clubs, never imprint themselves in the press. No more would they dream of advertising than M.D.'s and K.C.'s would dream of advertising. The difference is that while K.C.'s and M.D.'s are forbidden to advertise and some of them privately yearn to advertise, the highest stars of tailordom are quite free to advertise—but don't. There is some enigma here, to which the key is probably lost.

One reason for the lack of public interest in men's attire is, of course, the undeniable fact that men dislike to do or be anything characteristically feminine. Women will imitate men, but men will not imitate women. Hence men keep quiet about their clothes. The dandies, or the merely well-dressed, among them, will put themselves to an immense amount of trouble and expense over clothes, and then make their appearance with a deliberately casual air as though nothing on earth had happened. Save in the strictest secrecy they will never discuss their raiment. They are content with a silent appreciation of their wonderful achievements.

But there is another reason for the lack of public interest in men's attire. Not merely do we rightly despise the fop—the man who lives for clothes—but we have a prejudice against the man who shows any sustained interest in his dress. (Such prejudice may be a remnant of Puritanism—I believe it is.) And we rather admire the man who will not go to the tailor's until he is dragged thither by his wife. With this prejudice and this admiration I have no sympathy, and I hope and think that both are dying out.

I assert that I would sooner see a fop in the street than a man whose suit ought obviously to have been sold or burnt last year but one. The fop has at least achieved something and is not an eyesore. The scarecrow is an eyesore and has simply left something undone, either from conceit or from sloth. The fop is not without his use in society. He keeps tailors alert. He sets the pace. He may often be an ass, but he is also an idealist, a searcher after perfection; we have none too many searchers after perfection, and an ass engaged in that quest is entitled to some of our esteem. The man who for any reason—affectation, idleness, self-esteem — despises clothes and the fashions thereof, argues that fashion is absurd and negligible, and that the sole purpose of clothes is to give a decent and comfortable protection against climatic conditions. This argument cannot possibly be maintained. Fashion is neither absurd nor negligible. It is one of the most powerful influences upon human conduct, an influence which nobody can escape.

Further, the sole purpose of clothes—whatever it once may have been—is no longer merely to give protection. An important purpose of clothes is to make a pleasing visual impression—partly on oneself but chiefly on other people. This is unquestionable. Why, therefore, should it not be candidly admitted?

The importance of being well-dressed while not being a dandy, is strongly insisted on in certain professions and callings; and a carefully dressed man in beginning business relations. The first thought of a negligent man seeking a situation is invariably to remedy his negligence; the pity is that sometimes he cannot remedy it.

The negligent man will object that he cannot afford to dress well. Not so. Everyone can afford to dress well on his own place of expenditure. It is a matter not of money but of interest in the subject. He who is interested in a subject will speedily acquire taste in that subject, and the skill to get the best effect at the lowest cost. Nine out of every ten of us could easily produce a better effect on the eye of the beholder than we actually do without spending a penny more than we habitually spend.

We are guilty of a number of errors and omissions, the chief of which I will enumerate.

First. We won't take trouble. A great living statesman is reported to have said: "I put on the first things that come to hand, and people don't seem to mind." This is the practice of many of us, but it is no way to dress. People do mind.

Second. We forget that dress comprises much more than a suit of clothes. If a man went forth in a suit of clothes and nothing else he would make a sensation which might seriously incommode him. There is no sense in procuring a good suit of clothes unless all the rest of the attire from hat to heels harmonizes with it, not merely in color but in style and excellence. Clumsy boots will make the finest suit look ridiculous. How often one has the misfortune to see a man who has brains and taste in matching shirt, necktie, and socks with his suit, but whose exposed handkerchief produces on our teeth the effect of scratching a coin on a slate. Such men ought to be fined forty shillings or go to prison.

Third. We place ourselves like dolls in the hands of our tailors or other furnishers. We let them work their will upon us. We accept submissively their often ill-founded assertions that everything is all right. But tailors are human, and want overseeing. The price of smartness is eternal vigilance.

Fourth. Having got our clothes, we do not take care of them. We treat them like stepchildren. Of course, courage as well as true affection is needed for the just treatment of clothes. It takes a brave man to press his trousers on a frosty night.

Fifth. We do not put our clothes on properly. I defy you to walk a hundred yards along the Strand or Fifth Avenue without seeing a man the collar of whose coat sticks up above the collar of his overcoat—except in summer, when his overcoat is left lying huddled in the wrong creases at home.

COMB EFFECT

A charming Spanish comb effect has been achieved in this bridal veil of fine lace draped over a comb of pearls. A single row of pearls catches the veil at the forehead.

This new velour hat has the crown caught at one side with a knot. The brim has an unsually charming line.

Styles draw sharp lines between Young Men's Styles and Others

YOUTH has strongly asserted itself in evolving the suit and overcoat fashions for this Fall and Winter. It has prescribed, or brought its influence to bear, upon those who design and dictate what shall be worn.

And it proclaimed its desires with no faltering or unhaltered emphasis. Therefore, there are very definite lines of demarcation this season between young men's or college styles and the fashions that have their appeal to the more mature dresser.

From all of which arises this season a new model suit—that is new in contrast to what has been worn in the recent seasons. The suit you'll see worn in "varsity" towns; the more fashionable "prep" schools and by that coterie of alumni who represent the "smart set" in society and the men "coming up" in the business world, is rather "drapish" model.

The Suit of the College Set

It has a straight-hanging, loose set front to the coat and with it has very little "figure finding" in the back. Its outstanding characteristic is simplicity and sedateness and is such a coat as you would expect the retired dresser to wear.

With all this prelude and prominence given to this model it will by by no means be the style of the masses or the majority. It is merely the outstanding new note of the season and for popular consumption the regulation sack coat will no doubt get a plurality of endorsement.

What the Masses Will Wear

The sack suit is built on normal athletic lines. It has a moderate lapel, its lines are fairly form tracing, giving both emphasis to the waist and chest both in front and in back, and it has more than an average degree of shoulder that is attained not by padding but by good tailoring handiwork, depending upon the sturdy figure to give a foundation for its robust appearance.

Then still maintaining its popularity is the double-breasted suit. Up until a year ago the double-breasted jacket was an outsider. Then it came back and has been coming back stronger for the last two seasons. This fall it still has a firm grip on the good dressers and even the school boys have taken up the style in preference to all other models.

Blues Remain Popular

Whether it was the popularity for blue fabrics that made the double-breasted desired or whether it was the double-breasted that created the strength of blue fabrics is not known, but these two factors go so well together and became popular at about the same time and they both cling tenaciously in favor for the fall and winter seasons.

That is why all sorts of blue cloths are having their day. There are the regulation blue serges, but the more distinctive weaves are the most wanted. These are the unsheared cheviots, wide-wale weaves, diamond, diagonal, pine-apple, herringbone and birds-eye effects.

But not all the double-breasted suits are blue. Fancy effects are introduced with these double-breasted models and in both the double-breasteds and the single breasted sack tans, browns and greys lead the color scheme with their relative prominence in the order quoted here.

Greys Also in Good Taste

Greys were so extraordinarily popular during the summer, especially with the young men that they are expected to hold over this fall in the young men's styles but the new trend as a compromise to fellows that like something different and up to date each season will find tans and browns are most variously shown.

Vests are cut higher in sympathy with the higher set lapels and single breasted vests have the call even in the suits that have double-breasted coats. Both the lapel vest and lapelless vests are shown.

Trousers remain fairly wide, but not as wide as shown during the past few seasons. They are more shapely in leg formation and nearly all trousers have cuffs.

Topcoats Mostly Tubular

There is not much difference between the styling of the topcoats and overcoats. A matter of the weight of the cloth and the character of the weaves are the main distinguishing features.

The tubular effect is still the coat with just a shade more body lines than heretofore. The overcoat models are a bit longer, ranging from 48 to 52 inches in length. These coats are for the most part plain backs although there is shown a modified ulsterette with a half belt but long and tubular shaped in its general lines.

The next ranking coat in style calendar is a more form-fitting effect. It has broader lapels, more accentuated waist and just a suggestion of a flare in the skirt. It's for the man who is not tall enough to wear the severe tubular coat becomingly and for the man who likes the dash of figure effect.

Chesterfield Coat Modified

Another coat that is quite strong with the conservative dresser is a modified Chesterfield. This coat is a bit longer than the regulation Chesterfield but its other characteristics are pretty much the same.

There are a variety of models. Some have the velvet collar; some have the self collar. Some are single-breasted button-through; some are double-breasted button-through and some are single breasted fly-front. Blue and black fabrics have the call in this type of coat.

The range of fabric weaves is wide for this winter. Heavy tweeds, cheviots, Bannockburns, Scotches, Shetlands, Meltons, Kerseys, Beavers, Friezes, Montagnacs, Chinchillas and numerous novelty weaves are shown in the types of coats described above with the heavier and rougher cloths being also shown in the ulster which never loses its place in the fashion or in the desire of the man who puts warmth and ruggedness above all else.

What the Trapper Contributes

There is still one type of coat that cannot be passed up in any resume of the overcoat styles of these days. That is the fur coat that motorists and college fellows and football rooters have popularized in recent winters. These great coats will go big again this winter.

These fur coats are shown on raccoon, marmot, bearskin and kindred pelts and some nabobs who care not how they spend even order these coats in costly minks and seal skins. Hence, like the lumberjack blouse, a garment that originally was identified only with the woodsman and the rancher and the herdsman and the trapper has now become a thing of the elite.

Hence, as in life, the lowest in order can arise to the top if it renders a distinct service and utility.

Fall Haberdashery leans toward the unusual in designing

NATURE better get busy and filter her spectrum, jumble up the rainbow a bit more and devise some color tones or very soon fashion will have exhausted all the tints and hues that she has on hand of this orgy of high colors continues.

Man is getting just as gay and flamboyant in his desire for radiance in his attire as his sister. If you don't think so just roam around a bit among the shelves and counters and display windows of your favorite haberdasher.

Take a look at the neckwear, the shirts, the hosiery, the handkerchiefs—yes even the garters and the pajamas and you'll find yourself dazzled—but delighted.

Yes "he-male" fashion has gone in for brilliance, but beauty, loudness that's likeable. And why not? Fashion is the art of adornment. Take away the subterfuge of apparel being but a matter of body-covering and you have underlying it all, man's vanity and the effort to make himself as attractive as possible to the opposite sex. And if Fashion is to remain an art it must employ all of Nature's elements of coloring and symmetry to remain so.

For Instance Neckwear

Never has the neckwear of mankind taken on such brilliant hues and such exotic designing as is prescribed for this season. Not even in the days of the gay Louis' of France and the Cavaliers of the Middle ages have men indulged in more riotous display of color as is reflected in the neckwear color schemes of today.

Bright colors are all the go and these enhanced by rather wild patterning surely make the man's cravat an outstanding feature of his attire. The finest lustre silks and satins are employed as foundations for these ties.

Charvets, mogadors and repps. Conventional figures, floral effects and the bolder ideas in stripes and blocks all add their color or decorative motifs too varied and diversified to detail. You'll have to see them—and hear them.

Shirts are Boldly Patterned

Patterned shirts are the vogue and these largely have collars to match. In other days of more sedate dressing when shirts were accompanied with the patterned collar at all the pattern was usually a fine stripe or a modest dot.

But today there are very elaborate stipple treatments of bold stripes with conventional designs intervening or else all-over floral, scroll or geometrical figure motifs. Most of these shirts have the laundered collar. The soft collar is not so good for this Fall season as it was this Spring.

There is a slight tendency evidenced toward the return of the silk shirt which has been weak since war time. Such shirts also have the patterned collar and, of course, these shirts have the collar "au naturel"—that is, soft. The silk shirt, however, has not as yet come back with sufficient strength to make a factor in the season's fashion.

Collegiate-Shaped Collars

Madras and percale cloths lead the fiber and mercerized fabrics largely because they lend themselves better to the stiffened collar. The collar of the season is the "varsity," or collegiate shape with rather deep tabs and a narrower "V" than we have seen recently. The French cuff has come back almost to the exclusion of the barrel shape cuff.

Next to these patterned shirts come the plain whites and plain color tints. The tints are mostly in pastel shades of soft greys, tans, helios, mauves, violets and such delicate tones. These are in soft fabrics with soft matched collars and are largely broadcloths and similar lustre finishes.

Quieter patterned shirts are in poplins. These are very smart and come only in the more expensive lines. In such shirts the patterns are daintier—neat stripes and the colors are soft and almost always confined to two tones. Flannels show a fair amount of strength.

Young Man's Hosiery Howls

Not all men go in for loud hosiery but almost all the young do. The young fellows nowadays wear low shoes the year 'round, therefore, want noticeable hosiery.

The sockless collegiate is passe and the college fellow has gone to the other extreme of wearing gaudiest hosiery. Such hose are in prominent blocks, plaids, bold stripes, diamond effects, herringbone treatments and "what have you." The weaves are mostly worsteds, cashmere and wool mixtures.

Some Plaids are Modest

A trifle quieter in their tones are the lisles and silks and silk mixtures. This class of hosiery go in for the more modest plaids and stripes. Some are accordion effects, some have contrasting clocks. The embroidered socks and drop stitch treatments are not so much used. Plain colored socks are always the reliance of the conservative dresser and in the final analysis the conservative dresser is in the majority, but he is not the style adherent hence his taste and his purchases while in the majority, do not make food or fabric for a fashion article. If you belong to that clan there are oodles of plain blacks, brown, greys and tans to be found in lisles, mixtures, wools and cottons as well as fine silks.

The Minor Accessories

Handkerchiefs, the dress kind, that peak out of your breast pockets are either colored silks or fancy bordered linens. For personal use the conventional whites are still in order.

Gloves show but little that's new. Buck, chamois, pigskin, mocha and cape in the usual colors. The snap fasteners are used much more than the button variety.

Long Points the Vogue

Long pointed collars are the vogue. Plain effects are more popular than the self-patterned piques and wale effects. Semi-stiff and white are proper and most popular. For evening dress either the wing or the turn-down. The former leads for formal dress.

Pajamas are gay in pattern and color treatment. New ideas are the knee length coat and the one-piece garment. As yet these are novelties and the military model still remains the most popular.

Belts are a trifle less wide than last year. Buckles are becoming more and more ornate and unique.

"Two Frenchmen went up in an airplane. The plane went into a tail spin and they both fell out. What nationality were they when they came down?"

The Fall and Winter Mode in Millinery

Envelopes a Copious field

HATS—hats—hats. All the money that she gets she spends for hats. So ran the refrain of an old song. The writer of it little realized at the time how true his song was. If one was to keep up with the ever changing modes in millinery, one must spend an unlimited amount of money.

This season offers so many beautiful styles that one will have a hard time picking out just what she wants. However, try to wear what suits your type best and stick to it. For sports wear, the ever faithful fur and antelope felts are the most popular. Again, as in former seasons, the small hat with variations is shown.

Draped or Pinched Crowns

One particularly smart model, in pine green, had a bowler shaped crown, narrow brim slightly wider in front and was banded in a self-colored grosgrain band tailored bow. Other felt models have draped or pinched crowns, narrow brims and banded in velvet or grosgrain ribbon. The crowns of our western cowboys' hats evidently served as an inspiration for these pinched crown effects. We who have ever attended a rodeo will remember the type hats worn by the participants. They have rounded crowns, wide brims, and are banded according to the wearer's fancy.

Dame Fashion has boldly transported this model to the world of fashion. Another felt hat adaptable for sports wear has a rounded crown and soft narrow brim of double faced felt. The brim and crown match in color, and the underneath part of the brim which is in a darker shade matches the grosgrain ribbon band.

Beret Model is Popular

For afternoon wear, the outstanding fabrics used are felt, velvet, faille nd satin, either alone or in combinations. One of the most popular models displayed is the beret made either brimless or with tiny visors, in a variety of styles and combinations. One of the smartest seen was made of black moire and velvet. It had a draped sectional crown and head band of a vividly colored Roman striped grosgrain ribbon.

The same type models are also to be had in the softest quanilty antelope felt trimmed with self-colored grosgrain ribbon and jeweled pins. Square crowns are going to play an important role in afternoon hats. One hat, made of brown velvet, tucked in small squares, had this type crown, narrow brim and was banded in self-colored grosgrain ribbon.

Small Turbans Liked

Other modish features in fall millinery are the small draped turbans made of two tones of grosgrain ribbon, velvet, double faced satin or ribbon. Berets are made of moire and velvet, velvet and felt, double faced satin ribbon, faille and grosgrain, plaided velvet and solid colored velvet and many combinations.

For the woman who cannot wear the small hat successfully, there are the larger hats, not too large, of felt, satin, ribbon or velvet. Some of the felt hats are trimmed with small brightly colored cut-out flowers, the ends of which are tipped with sealing wax or hand painted. Other trimmings seen on felt hats are self-colored fringed grosgrain ribbon, or a single large felt flower, with either raw edges or bound in self-colored silk binding.

The satin hats are generally trimmed with self-colored ribbon and a jeweled pin. The velvets are trimmed with appliqued flowers of sealing wax, chenille and silk embroidery done in fruit designs, ribbon embroidery, hand painting which resembles needlepoint or tailored ribbon bows.

One large black velvet hat, suitable for more formal occasions, had a facing made up entirely of tiny blue flowers. Around the crown was a narrow black satin which tied in the front with a bow

Head dresses for evening wear play a minor role. However, for those who still cling to them, turbans of metallic cloth are favored.

Variety of Ornaments

Millinery ornaments displayed for the fall and winter include crystal spikes in pairs, marcasite ornaments in geometric fob or scroll designs, insect type pin,s made of crystal and enamel, rhinestose and pearls or steel and nacrelacqne, monograms made of black, jade green or red composition, combined with rhinestones.

Colors in vogue are burgundy various shades of blue, red green, all the wood shades and black.

For the kiddies the general trend is similar to the grownups. There are the berets and cloche models of felt or velvet. The children's hats show a marked simplicity, the only trimmings being grosgrain ribbon, tiny feather cocardes and felt flowers.

So the song goes on, "Street hats, dress hats—price out of reach—hats."

Fashions in Autumn Footwear

Being well Shod gives one that delightful comfortable feeling

BLESSINGS on the king who demanded that one of his courtieres discover a way to carpet the world, so, that when he went abroad, pebbles would not injure his naked feet. The courtiere hit on the idea of carpet bags, which were the forerunners of our modern footwear.

The season offers so many novelties in footwear, that the most fastidious will find something to her liking. For sports wear, the ever-popular oxford and one strap models, in variations are shown. The heels, of course, are low and suitable for walking. The oxfords are made of calfskin and combinations of calf and suede, alligator, calf skin and cobra, and can be had in gray, brown, fawn, biege and combinations, also black.

Plenty of Variety

A larger variety of styles, colors and combinations are found in the afternoon and dress models. Black patent leather, or patent leather with combinations being the favorite. The patent leather opera pump, with either the walking or spike heel, are worn with or without a cut steel buckle.

Other patent leather models made with the ankle strap, have trimmings of kid or suede in contrasting color. Sometimes, the heels of these slippers are in the same colorings as the trimmings.

Some of the smartest models are made in variations of the oxford and with very few exceptions they have the high spike heel, are tongueless, and have cut out designs on sides and front. They lace with wide silk laces, to the ends of which are attached metallic bead-like ornaments.

Oxfords come in patent leather and combinations of alligator, cobra, kidskin. All shades of brown and tan plays a large part in fall footwear. Plain black satin or moire opera or one strap pumps are worn with satin or moire afternoon gowns.

Fashion's Fancy Runs Wild

For evening wear Dame Fashion has allowed her fancy to run wild. Many interesting models are displayed. Some of the favorites are made of plain velvet, have one strap, and gold or silver heels. Other velvet slippers have contrasting pieces of colored leather appliqued on the front, giving a harlequin effect.

Some of the satin slippers are embroidered in the most delicate colorings, while others have rhinestone heels and trimmings. There are opera and strap models of silver and gold kidskin, with the high spike heels, having tiny mirrors in them . Some of these slippers have rhinestone and colored jeweled buckles. Metallic brocade slippers, too, are made in similar styles.

If the dear old king could see what his demand has created, he would indeed be astonished.

Travel Etiquette

As you approach the rear car from the station, start to get on this last car. You will be told by the trainman that it is a Pullman and that you must not get on. Do not let this discourage you, but point out that the moon is looking rather strange tonight, and while the trainman is looking at it sneak past him and climb on the train. Then pass through the Pullman, taking care to brush aside all the drawn curtains of the berths with your suitcase. One sometimes learns strange things by so doing. During your transit down the aisle it is proper to use the same suitcase to bump any protuberances which may project into the aisle as they are not supposed to be there. Now pass into the next car which will also be a Pullman and repeat the process, correcting any mistakes which you made in the last one. After passing through three more Pullmans you find the coaches.

Slowly pass through the coaches looking for a vacant seat next to the window. Keep on looking as you go from car to car and in the last car next to the engine you will find what you desire. With an old newspaper wipe the old banana from the seat and sit down sticking your ticket in the back of the seat in front of you and await results. In a few moments you will hear feminine footsteps coming down the aisle and upon turning you will discover an attractive young lady carrying a small suitcase and looking for a seat. This is the signal for you to move as close to the window as possible and brush off the other half of the seat. The young lady will pass by and take the seat three ahead on the other side, and the seat you have prepared will be taken by a fat middle-aged old lady who is carrying two suitcases a bag and a lunch done up in paper all of which she will hold in her lap and which will gradually slip into yours. The train will then start with a jerk throwing all the baggage to the floor which you will pick up and hand to the lady upon her request. She will not thank you, but will glare as though you caused them to fall. At this point the conductor will come through asking for tickets, and the fat lady will take yours from the seat in frontand hand it to the conductor. You are now supposed to ask her what the big idea is, taking up three-fourths of the seat and then making you pay the fare. She will not answer, but the conductor will request that you hurry up and produce your ticket. You will answer that the lady (accent the word lady) has appropriated your ticket and that she, no doubt, has another for herself.

The fat lady will then glare at you again and deposit all her baggage directly in the pit of your stomach while she makes a puffing and groaning search for her ticket. She will find it in her reticule and will haughtily hand it to the conductor, glaring at you again. She will then get up in a rage and find another seat, muttering under her breath something about a dog's descendent. You, of course, will be very sorry to see her go, but to keep up appearances it is proper to say "Ha-Ha" jovially. This will cheer the fat lady up immensely.

The Pulse of Fashion in Women's and Misses Apparel

by Adelaide G. Ettenson

WARS may rage, emperors may lose their thrones, the whole world may be turned topsy turvey, but, the seasonal changes in feminine apparel, like the tides of the ocean, must go on forever.

The cold tingle of the fall days checks our summer laxness, and the first thing brought to our mind is the need of new clothes. It is most natural thing to start first with dresses. For street and afternoon wear, there are the tailored and simply trimmed dresses of light weight cloth, moire and satin. They are made in coat effects, bloused back, straightline and a few flared bottom models. They are trimmed with crepe or satin collars and cuffs, plain or metal braiding, soutache embroidery, and narrow metal belts.

Black Moire Smart

One particularly smart coat dress was made of black moire, had modified blouse effect on sides and back, with a straightline front. The shawl collar and long sleeves were trimmed with flesh-colored satin. Crepe satin and moire are very strong and the colors most popular are Vendome blue, Valencia red, Chanel red, fern green, pine green, all the wood shades and black. Dresses are being made about two inches longer.

The dresses for evening and dinner show a decided tendency toward longer skirts. The bouffant model with its tight bodice being the favorite. These dresses are made of moire, satin, or taffeta, trimmed with embroidery, metallic laces and ribbon sashes.

There are also two-piece models with the tunic silhouette, made of romain crepe, chiffon or metallic cloths. These are sleeveless, and are cut low, with "V" or round necklines. Embroidery, strass trimmings and beads are the only trimmings used. A few lace dresses are also shown for evening. Ivory white, geranium red, sapphire blue, flesh pink, and black are the leading colors.

Suits in the Background

Suits will not play the prominent part that they did during the spring and summer. Those that are shown are made of wool plaids, tweeds and suede finished fabrics. Without exception, they have the seven-eighths length coats, made in straightline or bloused back models. The skirts of the two-piece suits are pleated in front or wrap around models.

The skirts of the three-piece suits have bloused tops, or satin or self-material, with long sleeves and button up to the neck collars. A suit made of a dark green suede cloth stood out above the others. It had a straight wrap around skirt, seven-eighths length coat, the back of which was bloused and slight shirrings at the side back. The front was straight. It had a high choker collar, deep cuffs, and a piece across the bottom of the back of the coat of leopard fur.

Plaids, in many color combinations, are the most popular for suits, however; reds, greens and wood shades in solid colors are used a great deal. Suits are trimmed with kit fox, caracul, krimmer, wolf and leopard.

Many Styles in Winter Coats

Winter coats, most essential in the feminine wardrobe, are offered to us in divers styles. For sports, street and travel, coats are made of novelty sports wool fabrics which include ombre plaids and fancy weaves. They follow the popular tubular mode, have patch pockets and are trimmed with badger, Jap fox, wolf, belly squirrel and raccoon.

One brown and tan plaided fabric coat had a full length tuxedo collar of rock sable and huge patch pockets. Black and white, and brown and tan, in plaids are strong. Reds, greens and browns are popular in the novelty weaves.

For afternoon and dress wear, coats are made of pile and suede finished fabrics. They are made in straightline, wrappy and bloused back models with set in, kimono and dolman sleeves. Furs used are Kolinsky, mink, beaver, fox, mole and squirrel.

Gray Suede Fabric Liked

A very smart coat made of gray suede fabric had blouse back, straight front and kimono sleeves. The sleeves and lower part of the front and back of the garment were embroidered in a darker shade of gray. The coat was topped with a large gray fox collar.

Also being shown are several models in reversible coats. These are made on the tubular lines, of flat pelt furs and wool fabrics. The outstanding colors for afternoon wraps are chanel rouge, willow green, shell bark tan, Jap ivy, brown and black.

Other Fabrics, New and Smart

There is a fine wool velour, very soft and velvety in appearance, that lends itself beautifully to the interpretation of the more formal winter coats. It is particularly lovely in the wine reds, deep nut brown tones and the grayish greens so much in favor. Many of the new novelty weaves have a rough, heavy aspect—with knotted or nubbed surface—these are especially well adapted to use in sports coats.

There are also canvas weaves—some in a tapestry effect that is very striking. There are fabrics that have their inspiration in the primitive weaves of North Africa. They have an irregular texture and are woven in wide bands of different colors—in an effect of hand weaving.

Reps, too, are smart, and they, too, have this irregular surface, caused by the threads of different sizes. Ribbed woolens with big velvety ribs are stunning for tailored coats—particularly in combination with the hardier furs such as raccoon or nutria.

Tucking that is a part of the fabric is also a feature of the newer textiles. The tucks give an effect of heavy threads through the fabric, crosswise, and are grouped in bands or used singly at intervals.

Evening wraps of sumptuous metallic brocades and chiffon velvets are made on lines identical to the afternoon coats. The more luxurious furs, such as sable, chinchilla, ermine and fox are used. One wrap of canary colored chiffon velvet had wide kimono sleeves, bloused back and was trimmed with cordings. The unique part of the wrap lies in the fact that the fox collar was dyed to match the color of the velvet.

So things go on. What will be the next change in fashion?

LITTLE girls and flower buds are synonymous. Both want to become full grown. We have, at last, discovered the way to help little girls and that is by dressing them along the same lines as their mothers.

Many adorable models in dresses and coats are shown for the youngsters this fall and winter. For sports wear, there is the two piece wool jersey dress, with its pleated skirt, long sleeves and button to the neck collar, the regulation blue serge sailor suit, plaid and solid colored wool dresses, in simple models, trimmed with colored buttons, crepe de chine, leather belts, etc.

For Afternoon Wear

For afternoon wear, the little miss who has always wanted a black satin dress like big sister's, will find her wish gratified. Black satin is the last word in fashion and is made in straightline, pleated, and two piece models, trimmed with touches of ecru or cream filet, Irish or val laces, and bits of very colorful embroidery.

Suede and Pile Cloth Lead

For dressed up wear suede and pile cloth or velveteen hold first place, and are trimmed with fox, squirrel, wolf, krimmer and opossum. They are made in dolman, blouse, or wrappy models, and have pouch or shawl collars, puff cuffs, etc. Some of the wrappy models have inverted pleats below the pockets. The dressy coats are trimmed with nutria, opossum, squirrel, and chapchilla. The colors most in demand are rust tan, greens, in various shades, navy and brown.

And now, little girl, we think we have solved your problem for this season.

Furs

as presented for Fall and Winter By Dame Fashion

By Adelaide G. Ettenson

IN THE fall a woman's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of fur. Long before the first tang of cold weather is felt, milady wears her fur neckpiece on either a dress or suit. This season silver fox holds first place among neckpieces. Nothing is more flattering than this soft, black pelt, always giving to its wearer a decided air of chic.

Pointed foxes come next in popularity, followed by Russian or Hudson Bay sables and stone martens. Because of the small size of the martens and sables, it is necessary to use two or three animals to make up a distinctive looking scarf. They have not changed much in style from previous seasons. They remain crossed in the back, and the loose ends can be fastened around the neck, in accordance with the wearer's fancy.

Smart Sport Fur Coats

Then, we feel the tingle of the colder days, and we remember that we must have a snappy looking fur sports coat for the next football game. This season, the sport coats tend toward strictly tailored straight-line effects, with small standing military collars and straight sleeves. They are forty-three to forty-five inches in length, and mostly all have slit or pouch pockets lined in chamois.

We, who suffer so with cold hands, can readily understand what a boon these pockets will be. In these coats a wide assortment of the hardier furs are used, such as raccoon, American or Australian opossum, antelope, American panther and pony in either natural or brown. They are lined with light weight duvetyns, silk brocades or velveteens. Surely, when wearing one of these warm garments, we need not worry how cold the day may be, we will be able to sit out the entire game, cheering for our team.

Coats for Special Occasions

And, now, come those delightfully cold afternoons, with their teas, luncheons, ma jonggs and bridges. We more than appreciate our fur coat, for, without it we would have to remain at home, and cuddle up to the radiator or stove.

Dame Fashion has offered such a wide variety of furs, for afternoon coats, that one has practically to suit oneself to be in vogue. Here, as in the sports coats, the more tailored lines are favored, although there are many flared bottom, dolmans, and blouse models shown.

Collars are puffed, the softly rolled shawl or military in style. The majority of the sleeves have the pouch cuff. Fox is the most popular of all trimmings, and is used on the collars and cuffs only. The fur that holds first place for afternoon coats is mink marmot. After that comes Hudson seal (dyed muskrat), jap mink, squirrel, persian paw, nutria, caracul paw, beaver, broadtail, muskrat, summer ermine, beaverette, mole and sealine. They are made full length and are lined in silk brocade.

Some of the higher priced afternoon coats are lined in solid colored crepe satins or velvets. These linings have the applique motifs of fur in the form of animals or else are gorgeously hand embroidered.

Jacquette on the Wane

The short fur jacquette, so popular for the last few years, is conspicuous because of its absence.

Trimmings used on dresses, suits and cloth coats are fox, natural or dyed squirrel, krimmer, jap mink, badger, lynx, baronduki or skunk. For the cloth coats which are to be given rough wear wolf, raccoon or opossum collars and cuffs are considered correct. Several of the velvet evening gowns are being trimmed with clipped coney dyed to match the dress.

As the day draws to the close, we hasten homeward in a state of great excitement. The concert this evening that the celebrated soprano or tenor will sing at. We will don our best. For evening wear white ermine and mink are tied for first place. Here, as in the afternoon coats, the individual must allow her own taste to come into play, as to style. Besides, the straightline, dolman and blouse models, a few capes are shown for evening wear.

Mink Wrap Self Trimmed

The majority of the ermine coats are self trimmed; a few, however, have collars and cuffs of white fox. No matter what style the mink wrap may be, it remains self trimmed. For linings one uses solid colored satin, silver or gold cloth veiled in colored chiffon. The metallic or velvet evening wraps are trimmed with bandings of flat furs or fox.

Fur coats for children are almost miniature replicas of the grown-ups' sport coats. They, too, are straightline, and well deserve the name "Tomboy" style. The smartest of these coats come in raccoon, opossum, squirrel, nutria or beaverette.

Furs are always flattering. They add zest and charm to the plain woman and make the beautiful one more enticing. And now, having seen the furs presented by Dame Fashion for this season, is it any wonder that, in the fall, a women's fancy more than lightly turns to thoughts of furs?

HOROSCOPE

FOR SUNDAY, AUGUST 29, 1926.

(Copyright, 1926, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Astrologers read this as a day in which the planetary government is marked by changeable influences. Strong benefic aspects are manifested, while adverse rule is alao evident.

Women are well directed under this planetary government and should find their charitable and philanthropic efforts successful.

In the churches women will be prominent in new movements of civic and national movement, it is prophesied.

This is an auspicious sway for love affairs and they are likely to be prevalent among persons of all ages.

Women are warned that the stars presage for those no longer young a morbid sentimentality which be overcome by all affected by it.

One of the signs of times, in which there is an ebullition of emotions as part of the process of change, will be a tendency toward romance that is not based on normal impulses, it is foretold.

Under this rule of the stars increased interest in religion will be apparent and there will be in all probability much fanaticism awakened in the course of controversies among organizations of differing faiths.

Again the rise and fall of strange cults as well as old church associations is prognosticated.

Church and state are to be allied, but in reform movements of nation-wide extent.

The seers foretell that many young men will enter the ministry of Protestant churches. The pulpit is to attract many who once would have sought the stage, it is foretold.

Canada and the eastern part of the country may expect autumn storms of extraordinary violence.

The coming winter is to bring exceedingly cold weather and fuel problems. The poor will require much aid.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a year of great activity in which unusual experiences little dreamed of may be expected.

Children whose birthdate it is probably will be inclined toward pride and austerity, but they will be talented and able to command respect and consideration everywhere.

FOR MONDAY, AUGUST 30, 1926.

This is a day that should be stimulating and helpful in planetary influences, according to astrology.

Again women are subject to the most encouraging and promising aspects, making for success in public as well as domestic affairs.

This is read as a favorable day for romance and for love affairs, since it will enable women to take the initiative, the seers declare.

Weddings on this date should bring happiness and long life, for the aspects appear to presage congeniality and constancy.

Actors and actresses should make the most of to-day's opportunities, but they should delay the signing of contracts.

The theatrical season is to develop many surprising conditions which will be most fortunate for a few artists.

In the coming winter season music is to be a growing factor in American life, if the stars are read aright. Operas are to be popular and new singers are to win fame.

In the west immense artistic enterprises are to be undertaken, it is foretold, and there is a sign of promise for art galleries and museums.

This is read as a day fortunate for educators and for progressive undertakings concerned with intellectual work.

Lawyers and law courts are to have a period of continued overwork, for there is to be litigation of international importance, the seers foretell.

Expansion of the steel and armament factories of Great Britain has been persistently foretold for the autumn.

London astrologers prognosticate for the United States earthquakes and severe storms, while there will be many serious accidents.

While Americans are to prosper in business and commerce in the coming months they should safeguard the health, for much illness and many sudden deaths are indicated.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the forecast of a year of much pleasure and many journeys which will be enjoyable.

Children born on this day probably will have rather complex characters. They should have great ability which they must be taught to use wisely.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

AARON BURR AND THEODOSIA PREVOST

(By The McClure Syndicate.)

Aaron Burr, who achieved political fame, was Vice-President of the United States, and later became an execrated name in American history through his slaying of Alexander Hamilton in a duel he forced upon him, was a devoted lover and fond father. The woman he married was a widow with two children not beautiful and ten years his senior. Why he married her is still a puzzle, for he was a rising man and could have had his pick of eligible society beauties. Theodosia Prevost, widow of a British officer, was, however, a very cultured woman and this probably fascinated Burr, who was himself a keen lover of the arts.

The following very prosey letter Burr sent his fiance a short time before they were married:

". . . I confess I have still some transient distrusts that you set too little value on your own life and comfort. Remember it is not yours alone, but your letters shall convince me. I waive the subject. I am not certain I shall be regularly punctual in writing to you in this manner every day when I get at business, but I shall, if possible, devote a quarter of an hour a day to you. In return I demand one-half a day from you; more I forbid, unless on special occasions. This half hour is to be mine, to be invariably at the same time and for that purpose fixed at the hour least liable to interruption and as you shall find most convenient . . . the children shall have their sheet and at the given hour write, if but a single word. Burr, at this hour, is to be a kind of watch-word."

That Theodosia did not live up to these instructions, is evident from another letter after their marriage:

"I have lived three days upon the letters I expected this evening and behold the stage has arrived without a line from you. I have been through the rain and dark and mud, hunting up every passenger to chatechise them for letters and I can scarce yet believe I am so totally forgotten."

At the age of twenty, when Burr was aide to Gen. Putnam and garrisoned in New York, he had his first love affair. The lady was Margaret Moncrieffe, aged fifteen, developed beyond her years, beautiful, passionate and a vamp in the modern sense. Margaret was the daughter of Maj. Moncriefe, stationed with the English troops at Staten Island. Fearing for the safety of his daughter, who was with him, the major sent a soldier with a flag of truce to General Putnam, begging him to take care of Margaret. Putnam was Moncrieffe's enemy officially, but to Moncrieffe the father he was a friend and he gladly consented to act as Margaret's guardian. Margaret was sent to Putnam forthwith and the general placed her with his family, who showed her every kindness.

While with the Putnams, Burr fell in love with Margaret and she presumably with him. But one day Burr discovered the English girl painting a bouquet of flowers. This was an occupation usually with girls of culture, but Burr, coupling this with the fact that Margaret seemed very fond of watching the manœuvres of ships in the bay with a telescope, got the idea that Margaret was painting a message to the enemy in the language of flowers.

Burr was a lover but he was also a prudent man. He told of his suspicions to Washington, who had the girl removed to a place where she could do no damage and held her virtually a prisoner of war. That was the end of Aaron Burr's first love.

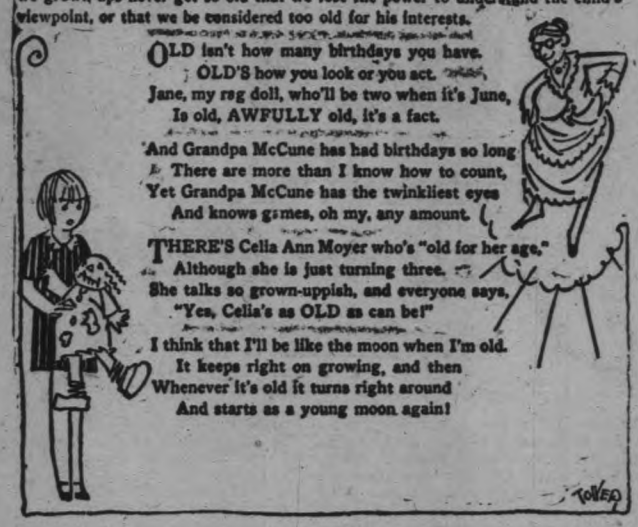
Old

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS.

IN Grandmother's time often people of fifty were old. They wore bonnets and shawls, beards and frock coats, and settled down to being old. Now-a-days one is just as young as he chooses to be, and the years only add interest to living. May we grown-ups never get so old that we lose the power to understand the child's viewpoint, or that we be considered too old for his interests.



OLD isn't how many birthdays you have.
OLD'S how you look or you act.
Jane, my rag doll, who'll be two when it's June,
Is old, AWFULLY old, it's a fact.

And Grandpa McCune has had birthdays so long
There are more than I know how to count,
Yet Grandpa McCune has the twinkliest eyes
And knows games, oh my, any amount.

THERE'S Celia Ann Moyer who's "old for her age,"
Although she is just turning three.
She talks so grown-uppish, and everyone says,
"Yes, Celia's as OLD as can be!"

I think that I'll be like the moon when I'm old.
It keeps right on growing, and then
Whenever it's old it turns right around
And starts as a young moon again!

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite Shawnee Okla.

Curtis A. Hodges, General Manager and Managing Editor of the Indianapolis news, says:

THAT Elias Howe died in poverty because, though he had the inventive genius to create the sewing machine, he did not have the ability or the opportunity to market it. He had to wait until one woman bought and told another, and such primitive and painfully slow word-of-mouth advertising could never build the market his invention deserved.

And the real tragedy of his failure was that for another generation women had to wear out their eyes, impair their health and waste countless hours at sewing by hand, when the machine they had waited for since the beginning of time had already been invented for them.

This tragedy can never happen again.

As soon as an invention is perfected, it is made known and made available in every town and hamlet, every city and on every farm in the land—at once—through advertising. Look at radio—the automobile — the vacuum cleaner—the electric refrigerator!

Advertising is a public utility. It is the art of making known. It is mighty in the public service. It conquers time, it banishes distance, it saves incalculable treasure, it speeds production and prosperity, creates national distribution, makes life richer and better—and it pays for itself by reducing the cost of making, distributing and selling goods.

An advertisingless world would speedily revert to feudalism.

Daily Short Story

BOBBY CHOICE

"Somebody ought to do something about Bobby," sighed his elder sister as she ruefully regarded the much-discussed young man swaggering down her driveway. "Really at twenty-five he ought to show some signs of settling down. Now his driver's license ha. been taken away for reckless driving. Really, someone ought to do something about him."

The other brother Ned happened to be the only other occupant of the broad veranda, as he assumed that the remarks were addressed to him. "Somebody ought to do something about Bobby—that's all I hear. Everyone says it and no one does anything. Of course I can't do anything. He never did have any respect for my advice."

But Ned decided that while he himself could do nothing to reform Bobby somebody could—some nice, attractive, animated young girl, for instance. Maybe one reason Bobby had spent Maybe one reason Bobby had spent so much time sewing wild oats saw because things at home had always been too tame. Having a taste for wild oats he had to live in a garden where only dainty little garden flowers grew—forget-me-nots and sweet peas. Now if he, Ned, could produce, let us say, a rich, red wild rose—that would satisfy Bobby and at the same time cure him of his taste for wild oats.

Ned drove rapidly along toward the country Club, a ce that seemed to him most likely to yield the sort of red, wild rose he was in need of.

He'd find some eminently sensible girl, very attractive and fond of a good time, and he would contrive to throw her in Bobby's way. B would have to fall in love with her, and of course the girl would fall in love with Bobby. Girls always did.

At the country club he saw Sally Drew—Sally was dark and slender and wonderfully graceful. Ned had met her once or twice before. He had never thought much about her but now he realized that she possessed decided magnetism. He contrived to talk to her, but found himself unexpectedly shy about it. So Ned decided to enlist his sister's help.

That night he told her of his plan and suggested Sally——

"Why in the world pick Sally?" she exclaimed. "Bobby needs some big girl with a square jaw and a strong fist. No other sort of girl could handle him——"

"Well, then," snapped Ned, "he won't be handled. No man likes that type of girl, least of all a fellow like Bob. A girl like that would try to reform him. Now, Sally wouldn't approve of the way Bob behaves and he'd realize that he'd have to buck up without being told to."

Ned had to manage with only half-hearted cooperation from his sister, but just when they had launched their campaign and had contrived to get Sally to spend a week-end with them at their mountain lodge, then it was that the arrant Bobby seemed to be possessed with a renewed zeal for uncultivated oats and kept to himself practically the entire time that Sally was at the lodge.

Meantime Ned became increasingly preoccupied. Chagrin over the failure of his plan added to the anxiety he felt over his brother's preoccupation. Then came another reason for distress. He came rather suddenly to the realization that he himself was intensely, in love with Sally. It was hopeless, of course, this infatuation, but he was possessed with increasing desire to see what she would say and how she would look when he confessed his passion for her.

The confession finally came one afternoon on the broad veranda. Sally said she had no one to play with and had come to see Ned's sister but Ned's sister was out. Sally told Ned that she felt that he was preoccupied about something and Ned told her that he was concerned over his brother.

The audacious Sally reached over from her chair and took one of Ned's strong hands in hers. Ned, at the time leaning against the railing of the veranda, bent over Sally's hand and kissed it so solemnly that Sally gigled it little. Then he stammered out his concern over his brother—and after that he told her mournfully of his own hopeless love for her. He had got to that point in his confession when the heartless Sally jumped up from her chair, released her hand that Ned was still holding and looked down the driveway. There was Bobby walking up to the house with a woman beside him. Bob was not short, but this strapping girl was obviously taller than he. Ned was struck by the strong set of her jaw and the healthy glow of her unpowdered face. Beside this young Amazon Bobby seemed for the first time in his life to look rather callow and stripling.

"Ned," began Bobby with much embarrassment, "I want to present you to my wife. Ned, this is Miss Keeler—oh, hang it all—not Miss Keeler now—it's my wife Jane."

And then after brief, embarrassed, joyous explanations Bob told Ned and Sally that the girl of his choice was a settlement-house worker.

"Jane is going to reform me," laughed Bobby.

"I'm sure she'll be able to if any one could," observed Sally. Then the bride and bridegroom went indoors and Sally looked archly at Ned.

"What were you saying when they interrupted us?" she asked.

"I was saying," said Ned, pressing Sally's hand again to his lips, "that I love you desperately——"

"And I love you, too," whispered Sally.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

DAVID HAS A CHAT WITH A HAPPY FAMILY.

David raised his little shotgun to shoot a bird, when a hand caught and held his arm.

"Well, well, Happy Giggles, where did you come from, anyway?" David cried.

"From the same old place," replied Happy Giggles. "Always from Make-believe land. I knew you just raised that gun to call me."

"Thank you, Happy Giggles," chirped the bird, flying down to a bush right near David and the elfin. "I was afraid this boy was going to shoot me. I'll admit I wear a black mask over my face, but I'm not a robber at that."

Then Happy Giggles said, "David, this is Daddy Titmouse. I hope your wife is well."

"Never better," chuckled Daddy Titmouse. "I'm glad to know you're a friend of the elfin," and he held up his claw to shake hands with David. "Happy Giggles' and Squeedee's friends are always mine. Many folks think because I wear this black mask over my eyes, that I belong to the robber family, but I don't." Then he continued, "Happy Giggles, you should see the wife. She is taking care of a nestful of eggs. Come on over if you haven't anything else to do."

"Of course we will," replied the elfin. He and David followed Daddy Titmouse to the tree, where he and Mama Titmouse had their nest.

"Well, of all things!" David cried in astonishment when he saw the lovely soft nest, hanging like a beautiful purse from the twig of the tree.

"I'm Not a Robber."

"I thought your nest would be in the trunk of the tree like all Titmice I've seen. But you haven't any crest on your head like he has."

"Oh, no," laughed Mama Titmouse, sticking her pretty head out of the hole in the side of the hanging nest. "That's Mr. Tufted Titmouse's family. They have tufts on their heads. Daddy Hanging Titmouse and I wear these black masks. Tufted Titmice build in old Woodpeckers' deserted houses most always, but Daddy Hanging Titmouse doesn't approve of that. He and I together built this lovely hanging nest. Just take a peek inside. Come in and see how nicely it swings in the breeze."

David stepped into the little opening of the lovely nest. It was a nice, soft, comfy nest. Mama Titmouse showed Happy Giggles and David her pretty little eggs.

"Now if nothing happens they will all hatch out in a day or so: when we'll be happy," she laughed as she cuddled down again on her pretty eggs.

"Nothing will happen," promised Happy Giggles. "I'll take good care of that. The folks around here need the help of your family to keep out the bugs and insects that destroy their fruit. Come David, we must go," and bidding Mama and Daddy Hanging Titmouse good-bye, they hurried back to David's back yard.

FOR YOUR SUIT

Smart accessories for the tailored costume are a matching tie and kerchief of printed silk—the kerchief considerably larger than the usual feminine square.

USED FOR SPORT

Very decorative coats are made of hand-blocked linen, silk lined, and often set off with a bit of fur in light fluffy tints.

BLUE AND ROSE

The combination of navy blue and old rose is one frequently met with this season, and is exceedingly attractive.

A SLENDERIZING STYLE

Many of the new coats make no pretense of closing in front in the conventional manner, but are open, Tuxedo effect, and held in place by a narrow belt low over the hips.

LAUNDERS PERFECTLY

Summer lingerie of printed voile is bound with ribbon or with colored organdie, and made on very serviceable, tailored lines.

COPYING THE PARROT

Yellow felt hats are extremely smart with all white outfits, and so are those of yellow and parrot-green in combination.

GORGEOUS APPAREL

Early showings of fall modes emphasize the use of printed and brocaded velvets, banded with fur. The coat style is popular.

ALL IN ONE COLOR

Some of the very smartest of chiffon and satin evening frocks have girdles of velvet, a shade or so deeper in value than the frock.

MADE BY HAND

An attractive model for sport wear is of white crepe de chine with a double pleated jabot in front, and a pleated section in the front of the skirt

Delightful Details

necessary to Feminine Chic

SOMETIMES a slight detail overlooked will ruin the construction of an otherwise perfect building. The same statement can be deftly applied to the gowning of women. For the fall and winter season, resolve to pay more attention to the little things that count so much.

Pearls to the right—pearls to the left—but pearls it must be, for rings, bracelets, earrings and necklaces. Pearls in all sizes, the most popular ones being almost the size of moth balls. Pearls in every conceivable color combined with imitation and semi-precious stones. Tiny pouch or envelope evening bags made of pearls with rhinestone frames or clasps are the "dernier cri." Pearls, the insignia of riches and royalty, now within every woman's grasp!

Reptilian Leathers in Bags

The smartest handbags are made of reptilian grain leathers and combinations. They come in underarm, strap handle and large flat pouch models, in almost every wanted color and combination. For dressy occasions there are envelope bags made of moires and fancy silks, trimmed with petite point insertions, marcasite, or rhinestone monograms. Some of the silk bags are also trimmed with bits of contrasting colored silk or embroidery. The bags come in black or colors. Those matching one's costume, or in direct contrast are considered in good taste.

To give color to the sombre fall costume, one should wear huge carnations, chrysanthemums or gardenias. They are worn singly or in pairs and come in a full array of pastel colors or white.

Here are Practical Gloves

A very practical glove, now being worn by the best dressed women is made of white, tan or grey washable kid or suede. For the woman who desires something a wee bit different, there is the one clasp kid glove, in various colors, with turn back cuffs. The cuffs are trimmed with tiny inserts of colorful petite point and the stitching of the glove matches the predominating color of the insert.

The tailored dress which often needs just a touch to brighten it up will find itself rejuvenated with white or pastel satin or organdie collar and cuff sets.

Squares for the Scarf

Whatever the size of the scarf may be, fashion has decreed that it must be square. For sports wear, it is fashioned of figured crepe with solid colored bandings. For dress wear scarfs are made of solid colored silk fabrics on which are painted motifs of all kinds. The rich metallic scarfs, which are used for evening wear, are lined with chiffon and banded in silver or gold cloth. Some scarfs are so large in size that they can be worn as a wrap.

Quite an array of handkerchiefs are popular this season. The best liked for afternoon use are made of white linen and have tiny self-colored monograms. For eveing use, a hanky of plain colored chiffon edged with lace or net.

By choosing our accessories carefully, we can sometimes create startling effects in an otherwise mediocre ensemble.

Some Charming New French Lingerie Modes

Harmonious Colors and Pastel Shades Fashion Dainty Undies. By Annette Bradshaw.

THESE are fashions in undies just as there are fashions in gowns and hats and shoes. One year the smart world inclines to bloomers and vests in the way of undergarments and the next year nothing but "teddies" will do.

Certainly, there is no garment which rivals the popularity of the chemise today. It combines the advantages of several undergarments in its own dainty, complete self. And the woman who desires above all things to look slim and girlish, knows the importance of having underclothes that are not bulky.

The teddy at the left is one of the most popular styles. It is a combination of bandeau brassiere and chemise. Really, it is all that is necessary under a silk gown in the warm weather. The lace is ecru while the crepe in which the chemise is fashioned may be pale peach, flesh, green or yellow. The dainty pintucks add to the distinction of the garment.

At the right is a more elaborate and unusual piece of lingerie. It combines the benefits of the slip and the chemise The pleated ruffle at the bottom reaches almost to the hemline of the new short frocks and it is sufficiently full to take the place of the slip. The top or bodice is straight and very simple.

The combination undie has come to stay, for the modern woman likes simplified clothes and prefers to reduce the number of garments she wears to the minimum that is compatible with modesty and an attractive appearance.

AFTER a spring and summer season when Mr. Man stepped out in footwear of the gayest seen in many a year the modes again revert back to the conservative tones and lasts that usually accompany the fall and winter.

Last summer footwear for men went to an extreme, with its colored trimmings of various animals whose hides were tannable, but now the pendulum swings backward and we are just about where we were a year ago.

The semi-balloon last, which met with popular fancy last spring, promises to continue in good grace during the coming months. This last is a modification of the full balloon last worn so extensively when the balloon trousers were in fashion.

Change to Conservative

But since the stylists and designers decided that man should wear narrow trousers the footwear critics followed suit. The balloon trousers demanded a substantial base, but the newer styles in clothing call for the change toward the conservative.

Among the leathers that will be worn to a great degree with the approach of cooler weather is Scotch grain, featured for its durability and its ability to keep its neat appearance most of the time. These will be worn with a heavy sole and in some instances a welt turned-in sole to keep out wetness. These are about as water-proof as shoes can be made.

Tans and Black

As for colors the ever-present tans and blacks will be shown. There is a tendency to favor the tans in various shades, especially by those wearing the lighter colored clothing.

The propaganda is still on to push the sale of two pairs of oxfords—tans and blacks—the latter to be worn after dark and this campaign upon the part of aggressive shoemen is meeting with headway.

There also are efforts on the part of a certain group to make Mr. Man buy several pairs of shoes. The theory, of course, is that man's health demands a change of footwear every day. Incidentally it has been pointed out that shoes worn in that manner will last much longer. Tests have proven this point.

Few High Shoes Worn

Only the extremely conservative or the ailing will wear high shoes in winter. The sale of this class of footwear is almost nil and only in severe weather will the man discard his oxfords in favor of the high ones.

There is some effort being shown in the part of some makers to bring the button oxford back into good standing, but whether this style will return is a matter that only time can tell. Unusually smart creations are being brought out.

For the smartly-dressed man spats will form a part of his wardrobe. These are presented in shades of light tans or grays to dark tones with pearl gray ruling.

CRUELTY

"I'll never speak to Olga again. She is mean! I bought a hat just like hers, and then she went and bought a new one and gave the other to her cook!"—Kasper, Stockholm.

NOT BY THE BOOK

"Have you read your novel to anyone?"

"No."

"How did you get that black eye?"—Pele Mele, Paris.

CANDID BUTCHER

"Are you sure there is no horse-meat in this sausage?"

"I can assure you there is no meat at all there!"—Nagels Lustige Welt, Berlin.

KNEW BETTER

"What are you doing here?"

"Fishing."

"Can't you see that notice, 'No fishin' here'?"

"No fish in here? Don't tell me that. I've caught a dozen already."—Karikaturen, Oslo.

FALL HATS

THE flippant brim which has been in vogue, off and on, for a number of years, promises to come back stronger than ever in men's hats this fall.

This style made great headway last spring and the momentum of six months will show itself during the early fall months.

Advance information gained from reliable sources, such as leading makers and foremost retailers, points to a season in which the turned down brim will share the honors of the season on a fifty-fifty basis with the fedora or alpine shape.

Young Fellow Likes Rakish Style

This is particularly true concerning the styles that will be worn by the younger fellows and this class includes the collegian, who likes something that is rakish, instead of set and formal.

It is true that the ever-popular fedora shape which has been in good taste for many years, will continue to hold its many followers. This is the style that is favored by the man who prefers the conventional; the man who is set in his ways.

Outside of the shapes and shades of the last year there are no really radical differences in either the snap down or fedora hats.

The one noticeable innovation will be the bow, which some makers are placing at the back of the hat instead of the side. Whether or not this idea will win favor among the smarter dresser is problematical and will not be definitely decided until the season is well advanced.

Darker Shades in Bands

Last spring the fancy band on felt hats was worn extensively, but it is the belief of stylists that men will revert back to the sombre bands—such as plain colors of blacks, browns, tans and grays. There will, of course, be a number of bands shown with narrow stripes to offset the severity of hats.

As for colors, browns, light grays and light tans will have the popular call. There also will be various tones of these. Some greens will be displayed but not as extensively as in past seasons. This color, while in favor in certain sections never has come universally to the front so will be hereafter regarded as an also ran.

Two Hats a Season

Hat makers are endeavoring to put across a campaign—two hats a season And for fall a felt and derby make up the program. Of course, the alternate wearing of them is conducive to better dress—and incidentally keeps both in better condition.

Just how strong the derby will be this season also is a matter that cannot be decided right now. In the far east this hat is coming to the fore and it is believed that the trend of style will move westward in time.

As for caps the eight-piece style has the greatest following. Only a small percentage of one-piece caps are being shown. In most instances light, rich, all-over patterns prevail.

STUNNING EFFECT.

Black and white is the chic combination in millinery. White corded ribbon is used very effectively on the large black milan models.

IDEAL DANCE FROCK.

For summer dances, the simple frock of pastel colored chiffon with handkerchief points or an irregular hemline of some sort and a molded bodice, is a wise purchase.

PETES OVERWHELMED 10-0 IN PLAY-OFF GAME AT KINGSTON; BELLEVILLE WIN SECOND PLACE

Johnstonites Can Do Nothing Right and Are Slaughtered in All Important Game.

EARLY ERRORS HURT

Misplays Give Belleville the Jump in First Inning and the Petes Fail to Rally.

By F.D.C.

Miles below their usual form, the Petes passed out of the Central Ontario League picture at Kingston yesterday when in the play-off game with Belleville to decide which team would meet the Ponies in the league finals the Johnstonites were overwhelmed 10 to 0. It was one of those games in which the losers could scarcely do anything right, and the winners did nothing wrong.

Belleville smashed through the Petes' defence for seven runs in the first two frames on a combination of lusty hitting and bad fielding, and the issue was decided then and there.

The decision of the league executive that the decisive game should be staged at Kingston had much to do with the dismal showing of the Petes.

In the first place, a motor trip of 135 miles was poor preparation for such an important game, and in the second, the Petes seem to find it impossible to play good ball in Kingston.

In the whole period that Kingston has been represented in the Central loop the Petes have not turned in a good game there more than three or four times.

No one pretends to believe that the Belleville crew are ten runs better than the Petes; they were not that even on yesterday's play, although, of course, they were infinitively the better side so far as the proceedings at Kingston were concerned.

They played a sparkling fielding game behind good pitching by Jack Ouellet, and on the attack the war clubs of Weir and the Mills brothers gave them a punch that was sadly lacking in the Petes' offensive. Harry Mills drove in four runs, besides carrying in two more himself, and the trio mentioned were responsible for eight of the eleven hits collected by the Nationals. Meagher had the feature play of the game when he dived to his left after a low sizzling drive by Rose and grabbed the ball in his gloved hand for a circus catch. Hagerman in left field came through with several pretty efforts that helped Ouellet secure his shut-out, and the rest of the crew all did their bit. Ouellet had plenty of stuff, and with an early lead to work on, operated smoothly and effectively.

Jeff Hardill was given the Petes' pitching assignment, and the big youngster got an unlucky start when two errors by Hap Harrison, with a base on balls, enabled Belleville to score three runs on one hit. When they continued the attack in the second and had two more runs in with only one down, Heckman was sent in "cold" to the rescut, and two more counters were registered before the side was retired. Heck held the winners with considerable success for the balance of the game, and they did not get a hit after the fifth, but that did no harm except to their batting averages.

The brightest features from a Peterboro standpoint were the hitting of Wolfe and Heckman and the fine performance at shortstop given by Shiner Johnston. The Petes' onlot tossed out twelve men during the game and had but one miscue in thirteen chances.

A big crowd, including many Belleville fans, saw the Petes go down. The Kingston crowd rooted solidly for Belleville, and the losers had little or no support.

The game was well handled by Umpires Sullivan and Nicholson.

How It Was Done.

The skids were put under the Petes in the first inning. Wicky Ross walked, and when Weir bunted for a sacrifice, Harrison dropped Hardill's toss, and the runner was safe. Harry Mills doubled to left centre, to score Ross. W. Mills' roller got away from Harrison, and Weir and Harry Mills scored. Blakely flied to Wolfe. Palmer hit to Rose, who dropped the ball in trying to tag W. Mills. Meagher rolled to Hardill, who tossed W. Mills out at third, and Hagerman hit to Johnston, forcing Meagher.

For the Petes, Wolfe grounded to Harry Mills. Rose was robbed of a hit by a sensational one-handed catch by Meagher, and Jimmy Hall's liner to left was snared by Hagerman.

Ouellet rolled to Johnston to start the second, but Ross drew his second walk of the game. Weir singled over third, and the runners pulled a double steal on a short passed ball. Harry Mills' long single to centre sent Ross and Weir in, and Hardill out of the game, Heckman going in "cold." W. Mills singled over second, and when Wolfe's throw to third took a high bound over Helson's head, H. Mills scored. Blakely singled to right, to score W. Mills. Palmer flied to Jimmy Hall and Meagher was thrown out by Johnston.

In the Petes' half, Ross rolled to Ouellet and Ash was thrown out by Weir. Harrison reached second on Blakely's low throw. Helson was out on a fast play by Blakely.

Hagerman opened the third with a single between short and third. Ouellet was thrown out by Johnston. Ross walked, Weir bounced a single over third, scoring Hagerman, but Ross was thrown out by Jimmy Hall when he tried to go to third on the play. H. Mills flied to Wolfe.

The Petes lost a great chance. After Johnston had been called out on strikes, Heckman singled solidly to left, and Wolfe smashed a single over second. Rose walked, filling the bases, but Hagerman made a fine running catch of Jim Hall's short fly to left, and Meigher went out into right field to pull down a fly from Bob Ross.

In the fourth W. Mills singled over second. Blakely fouled to Helson. Palmer forced W. Mills, Johnston to Rose. Meigher dropped a single into left. Johnston tossed out Hagerman.

In Peterboro's half Ash flied to Hagerman and Harrison walked. Helson struck out and Johnston popped to Blakely.

Ouellet flied to Jim Hall at the beginning of the fifth. Ross struck out. Weir singled to Short, stole second, and registered on Harry Mills' long double to left. W. Mills rolled to Johnston.

The Petes threw away three clean hits. Heckman started with a bounder over Weir's head and Wolfe stabbed a hot single past Meagher. Rose flied to Ross. Hall singled between short and third, filling the bases. Ross, however, fouled to W. Mills and Ash struck out.

In Belleville's sixth Blakely flied to Wolfe, Palmer struck out and Meagher popped to Helson.

Harrison led off for the Petes with a single off Blakely's shins, but Helson popped to Meagher and Johnston to Blakely, and then Harrison was caught off first.

Hagerman fanned to begin the seventh. Ouellet rolled to Johnston and Ross flied to Ash.

For the Petes Wolfe hoisted one to Weir, Rose was thrown out by Meagher and Hall flied to Ross.

Johnston tossed out Weir and Harry Mills in the eighth and Peeney Mills fanned.

The Petes had a chance again. Ross was hit and Lennox, batting for Ash, singled past second, sending Ross to third. Lennox, however, was thrown out stealing second, and Meagher threw out Jack Hall, batting for Harrison, and Helson leaving Ross on third.

In the ninth Blakely was safe on Johnston's fumble, and stole second. Helson fumbled Palmer's tap. Meagher sacrificed the pair along, and Hagerman's long sacrifice fly to Wolfe scored Blakely. Ouellet for the fourth time rolled to Johnston.

Johnston started the Petes' ninth with a single over second, but Holyman, batting for Heckman, filed to Ross and Wolfe and Rose followed suit, giving the Belleville captain three put-outs in the final frame.

BROWNS LOSE OPENING GAME TO THE YANKS

Yesterday's Loss Makes the Fifth Defeat For St. Louis.

KNOCKED FROM BOX.

Athletics Fall Back Into Third Place By Losing Double.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21 (Canadian Press).—The New York Yankees took the opening game of a series from the St. Louis Browns yesterday, 10 to 4, making the fifth successive defeat for the Browns. Ballou was knocked out of the box in the fourth when the home club scored four runs. Jones was chased also in the same inning, but the visitors could do little against Bob Shawkey, his successor.

Detroit passed the Philadelphia Athletics back into third place, handing them a double defeat, 4-2 and 5-4. Whitehill held the Athletics to six hits in the opener, and George Dauss pitched good ball to win the nightcap. He relieved Wells in the third inning.

Urban Faber, White Sox pitcher, tamed the Red Sox, holding them to seven hits and Chicago won the game, 5 to 1. It was Boston's first defeat in six starts. Barret drove in three White Sox runs and fielded sensationally.

The Cleveland-Washington game was washed out.

PETERBORO BOWLERS LOSE CUP TO CLEVER WARKWORTH RINK

George Cairns Defeated by C. Smith in Meyers Trophy Games.

TOURNEY FRIDAY

Twenty Rinks From District Compete at Campbellford.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 20.—Peterborough's possession of the A. J. Meyer's Cup was terminated in the Campbellford Bowling Club's tournament for rinks for fours by C. Smith's smart quartette from Warkworth, who battled all day through the major competition and turned back the last Peterborough thrust made by George Cairns' rink with the score of 16 to 10. Last year Tom Curvin of Peterborough carried off this trophy, and his club mates yesterday almost retained it.

In the final round Warkworth hung up three three-ends, before Cairns broke into the score column, and that nine point margin proved too heavy a handicap. Smith played a steady game, and defensively conceded only five of the first twelve ends for only six points, while the Warkworth count was then complete, Cairns getting a three and one on the last two ends.

The winenrs received binoculars with the Meyers trophy, and the Cairns' rink drew silver cream and sugar services.

J. P. Archer, president of the Campbellford Club, welcomed twenty rinks as the tournament got under way Friday morning. Peterborough, Warkworth and Cobourg each sent three rinks; Port Hope two, and Tweed, Hastings and Belleville one each.

Neil McDonald skipped the entry from the new Hastings club.

JAPAN AND FRANCE TO MEET IN FINAL ROUND OF TENNIS TIE FOR RIGHT TO CHALLENGE STATES

Japanese Team Clinches American Zone Honors By Defeating Cuba.

AT MOUNT ROYAL

Will Enter Final Round Against the European Zone Winners.

MONTREAL, Aug. 21 (Canadian Press).—Japan and France will meet in the final round of the Davis Cup-tie for the right to challenge the United States for the international tennis trophy. The Japanese team clinched the American zone honors by defeating the Cuban doubles team at the Mount Royal Tennis Club courts yesterday. Takeichi Harada and Senio Tawara followed up their sterling victories in the two opening singles by winning the doubles from Rogelico Paris and Ragul Chacon of Cuba, 6-4 ,6-3, 6-2.

As a result of their victories in the first three matches of the tie nothing depends on the outcome of the two final matches this afternoon. Assured of entering the final round against the European zone winners—the French team—Takeichi Harada has decided to rest from the final singles play to-day, giving Eeijo Tora, third Japanese player, the experience. Tona will play Dr. Banet, of Cuba, replacing Harada, while Sekio Tawara will meet Rogelio Paris in the other singles match, play being scheduled for 2.30 p.m.

Victory in the doubles for Japan was a repetition of their wins in the singles on Thursday. Cuba once made a valiant effort in the first set, losing by a narrow margin, the reverse proving a moral handicap, and in the second and third sets they gradually wilted before the devastating, bullet-like drives of their opponents.

Once again it was the more experienced generalship and steadiness of the Japanese which brought them the honors over their less seasoned rivals. Japan started somewhat hesitantly, but it only took a few games for Harada and Tawara to locate the weaknesses in the Cuban defensive system, and once these were discovered, the Japanese pair opened up their play confidently.

Tawara smashed between Paris and Chacon every time they attempted to advance on the net. Harada, playing up close in centre court, tricked them with glancing cuts to the sidelines, and in this manner the Japanese took command of the offensive play.

Paris and Chagon fought valiantly, engaging in frequent rallies with the Japanese pair.

Using spiked shoes for the first time, the Cubans were less handicapped than on the first day, and they covered their court well. They were smart in returning the terrific drives from the racquets of Tawara and Harada, but could find few loopholes through which to break for points. They were forced to defensive tennis and tactics designed to bring points through mistakes by their opponents. Both Harada and Tawara showed a tendency to drive out of bounds. The Cubans lobbed frequently in an effort to have the kills go out. But Harada and Tawara were not to be tricked. With a variety of strokes, they showed great strength in their overhead game, frequently outguessing the Cuban pair.

But the southerners were not disgraced. They made a gallant fight, accepted defeat gracefully and left the courts satisfied that they had gained valuable experience which would stand them in good stead when the 1927 matches start.

The doubles matches was preceded by a singles in which Teijo Toba, third member of the Japanese team, contested in a singles match against Dr. Arthur Ham, of Toronto, who was the third member of the Canadian team which was beaten by the Cubans last month at Havana. Toba, champion of Western Japan last year, plays a style of tennis similar to that of Harada, though a little less accurate. Toba found little difficulty in defeating the hard-hitting Dr. Ham, though he was extended by the Toronto player, who carried many games to deuce before conceding defeat, 6-1, 64-. It was an exhibition which sparkled with spectacular strokes. Ham proved a revelation to those who were watching his play for the first time. He clearly demonstrated that with practice he has the ability to rise much higher in the tennis world.

Inside Sporting Dope

By A Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

By the time these limping lines sees print the play-off between the Petes and Belleville will be over, and I for 1 ain't going to attempt to make no guesses as to the result. I know this, however, that the league moguls was wrong in refusing to accept the Petes' sporting offer to flip a coin to see if the play-off would be staged in Peterboro or Belleville. It was a raw deal to make the home lads travel all the way to Kingston for this croocial battle. Anyway, a team that has to visit Kingston 4 or 5 times in the regular season has had punishment enough.

The Wed. game in Belleville, Mac, was noisier than the street sweeper tuning up to go into action about 4 a.m. Believe me, if the fighting at Ottawa over the customs report produced any more argument it musta been a lulu. What the 2 teams didn't call each other and the umpires coulda been wrote on a postage stamp. Right off the reel this Mister Woodley, who can make more wrong decisions in a afternoon than a politician can make promises in a whole campaign, waved Mister Holyman from the scene of action because our well-known short-stopper tossed his glove into the air after 1 of Mister Woodley's cock-eyed calls. That was where Mister Woodley pulled a boner. He hadn't seen nothing yet. Later in the afternoon Mister Poeney Mills showed him some real tossing by heaving his glove and mask into the diamond and using some language what would make Mister Mussolini keener than ever to cut out strong talk. And so it went on. More oratory than the political campaign is producing, worse guessing by the umpires than partinsan newspapers is pulling in regard to the election results, and now and then some baseball.

Our youthful Mister Collins had a busy afternoon trying to stop the Bellevillians from stealing bases. The only way he coulda won a decision from Mister Wooley was to beat the runner 10 feet to the bag, and the way Mister Collins was chucking he couldn't carry no 10 ft. handicap.

Belleville reports is to the effect that Deloro will be found in the Central loop next season. The Smelters has a nice team right now and is ambitious to enter senior company. They'll find a large welcome on the mat from the Central moguls, because it is a cinch the organization couldn't stagger through another season on three legs. The inclusion of Deloro would be the league's salvation.

Well, Mac, I ain't got nothing more to get off my chest today, so I'll pin my well-known signature to this and let it go at that.

Sportfully yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

GARNET WHEAT IS MAKING GOOD

Tests Show That New Variety Is Highly Satisfactory.

HEAVY YIELD.

OTTAWA, Aug. 21 (Canadian Press).—Garnet wheat, heralded as possessing qualities that would push the wheat producing areas of Western Canada 100 miles farther north, is making good. The results of tests made last year by individual farmers and on the Dominion Experimental farms have, in the opinion of the Federal Department of Agriculture, proved highly satisfactory, and tests are being made this year on a larger scale. During the present season nearly 75,000 bushels of Garnet seed wheat has been sown by Western farmers.

Reports have just been received by the Department from Brandon, Man., that Garnet wheat is threshing 40 bushels per acre from summer fallow and more than 26 bushels from stubble land.

which passes all tests will receive a card bearing the imprimatur of the Kiwanis Club certifying the fact.

A charge of 15 cents will be imposed. This, as Mr. McNabb, pointed out, is not with a view of making a profit, but is simply to help to defray the cost of the carrying out of the plan.

Several Kiwanians will be present each evening along with the mechanic. Kiwanians Harry Dickin and Charles Elliot will be on the spot on Monday evening.

The plan which has been under consideration for some time by the special committee under the leadership of Kiwanian Isaac McNabb is enthusiastically endorsed by President J. J. Craig of the Kiwanis Club. "I am heartily in sympathy with the project," he stated this afternoon. The club is anxious to do all it can to put this thing across. We want the public to assist us in every possible way."

Dr. Craig mentioned that a Safety Drivers' Club was in process of formation. Drivers would be asked to join and to pledge themselves to think "safety" and act "safety" in every possible way. Three thousand stickers have been ordered and are expected in the near future. These will be handed out to drivers taking the pledge and joining the league. The object underlying both proposals was to inculcate in each driver the wish and will to take all the necessary precautions instead of "leaving it to the other fellow," said Dr. Craig. The increasing number of accidents due to faulty brakes and glaring headlights showed that some preventative action was imperative.

Acting Mayor Phelan.
Acting Mayor Nagle E. Phelan, approached on the subject, declared he was whole-heartedly in accord with the idea. Every effort that tended to reduce the possibility of car accidents was to be commended. The step taken by Kiwanis was in the right direction, and he considered the club was performing a public service by tackling the problem. He bespoke for the scheme the hearty co-operation of public and officials alike.

Electric Heat Makes 8,200 Pipes Into One

The longest pipe line in the world whose joints are welded has just been completed. It is a water line made up of 15 miles of 24-inch and seven miles of 22-inch pipe serving the city of Vallejo, Cal. Every connection was made by sealing the pipe ends together with metal melted into place by the heat of an electric arc welder. Thus the line became a pipe 22 miles long. Before the long pipe went into use it was tested for leaks. All of it withstood pressure to 225 lb. per square inch—far in excess of any pressure it will probably meet in service— and some sections as high as 720 lb. per square inch. There aree 8,200 lengths of pipe in the line.

FISHERMEN'S WIVES GET COMPENSATION

Loss of Sylvia Mosher the Heaviest Demand on Board.

HALIFAX, August 21 (Canadian Press).—The loss of the Lunenburg fishing schooner 'Sylvia Mosher' off Sable Island several weeks ago with her entire crew of twenty-five men involves the heaviest single demand ever made on the Fisher branch of the Workmen's Compensation Board. The amount to be set aside for the payment of annuities to the widows, children and other dependents of the missing seamen, is in the vicinity of $80,000, according to V. J. Paton, chairman of the board, who said that the tragedy had been classified as a "disaster."

The relatives of the lost fishermen, it was pointed out, all benefit under the Workmen's Compensation Act of Nova Scotia.

Thirteen of the ill-fated schooner's crew were married men and twelve single.

AMERICANS SPEND MILLIONS IN CANADA

U. S. Government Estimates Tourists Will Spend $190,000,000 in 1926.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21 (Canadian Press).—Unofficial estimates prepared by the authorities of the Department of Commerce forecast an expenditure this year closely approaching $500,000,000 by United States tourists in Europe. To this they add $190,000,000 as the amount that probably will be spent by Americans visiting Canada, bringing the total of this item, classified as an "invisible export," to $690,000,000.

PAPERS SHOW BIG REBELLION

SANDIEGO, Calif., Aug. 21. — (Canadian Press).—Papers seized when General Enrique Estrada, former Mexican Secretary of War, with a band of his followers, were arrested at Duluzura, Imperial Valley, on Sunday night, have revealed an extensive plot to overthrow the Mexican Government, Captain A. A. Hopkins of the Department of Justice believes. Captain Hopkins said last night that although a complete study of the documents has not been made, it has been learned that the revolutionary move had assumed widespread proportions. Coincidentally with his remarks, it was rumored from a number of points that insurrecto bandits were about to launch their attacks.

Among these rumors was one that a boat left San Pedro, Calif., Wednesday or Thursday night with thirty-five men and arms for lower California peninsula. There they were to be joined by others in an effort to seize lower California. Another of the rumors was that a plot of 100 revolutionists to march from United States to Mexico heavily armed at Columbus, New Mexico, had been discovered. After having been in jail since his arrest, General Estrada was released late yesterday under $20,000 bail.

LIBERAL RALLY
A Message to Liberals and Liberal Friends of Peterboro Riding in this Campaign.

A Candidate has been chosen to contest this riding in the Federal Election, which is upon us. That man is J. J. Duffus. Joe Duffus is no stranger to any of you. He is a well-known and successful business man. A farmer's son, who still retains his interest in the farm. By hard work, persistent efforts and honesty he has worked himself up step by step. He has built up a huge and successful business in the City of Peterboro. For eight years a Member of the City Council, two years of which he was Mayor. An ardent member of the Chamber of Commerce, of which he was President for three years and now Chairman of its Advisory Committee. He is now Vice-President of the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce, and Vice-President of the Ontario Tourist Association, which was formed largely through his instrumentality and which is bringing thousands of tourists to this portion of Ontario, a lucrative business for hotels, summer resorts, store keepers and the production of the farm and garden. He is a Director of the Peterbor ough County Plowmen's Association and President of the Provincial Plowmen's Association. President of the Peterboro Hockey Association, with which he remained night and day last year until the Ontario Championship was brought to the City of Peterboro. In a word an ardent worker for everything pertaining to the welfare of the community.

He has a GOOD chance of winning. There is a swing of victory in the air. He cannot win alone. He has got to be helped. The Liberals and friends of Liberalism in Peterboro City and County have got to rally around him and help him carry this riding in this campaign.

There are Liberals in Peterboro who for some years have not been active in elections. They have been taking it a bit easy. This appeal is to them on behalf of Joe Duffus and on behalf of the Robb Budget. The Campaign is going to be short—a little over three weeks. Will the old time stalwarts jump into the fight and help redeem West Peterboro? If you will it can be done. Will you help to turn the tide in favor of Our Candidate?

We are not asking you to make any great sacrifice. We are not asking you to take hold in a long, arduous Campaign. We are simply asking you to lend the Liberal Campaign Committee your help and influence for just three weeks. WILL YOU HELP?

RALLY TO-NIGHT

TO-NIGHT at Liberal Headquarters in the Duffus Building, Cor. Charlotte and Water Streets, there will be an enthusiastic Meeting to give those who desire to do so a chance to rally around the Liberal Candidate in this Election.

REGISTRATION

Men, women, girls and boys are cordially invited to do whatever they can. There are many names off the list which may be included. Even among those who were registered last year there are many omissions.

There are quite a number of prominent business men's names not on the list. You are urgently requested to take a deep interest in registration during the next few days.

Will you come out once again and help enthuse the others by your presence at the Meetings and around the Committee Room? If you will you can be a help and an inspiration. You are cordially invited.

CHEMIST ILLUSTRATES VISIONS OF WARS IN WHICH POISONOUS GAS IS DROPPED FROM AIRPLANES

Foresees Conflicts Fought to an End Within Few Days

ESCAPE UNAVOIDABLE

British Scientist Says Navy Cutting Won't Bring Peace.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 23.—Sir James Colquhoun Irvine, Principal of the University of St. Andrews, Scotland, one of Great Britain's foremost chemists, painted an alarming picture of the future of chemical warfare in a lecture Saturday before the Institute of Politics.

Appalled at the prospects opened up to humanity if the use of gases and poisons made in the chemical factory are continued in war, Sir James uttered a warning that the whole machinery of war may be scrapped, warships may be sunk, armies may be disbanded and fortresses demolished, "but the chemical factory must remain, and so long as it exists it is a potential war factory."

Since gas poisoning has once been used in war it will be used again, said Sir James. Germany broke the treaty of 1900 which forbade the use of gas, thus demonstrating the futility of paper promises and taking the first step toward chemical warfare, he asserted.

Unless chemical warfare is abandoned, the war of the future may be declared, waged and won in a few days, said the British scientist. Passenger-carrying airplanes can easily be converted into bombing machines. There will be no need for heavy guns or the customary materials of war in future conflicts, as the chemical factory will provide the poison shell-fillings and the airplanes will speed to their destinations and distribute their bombs on their objectives.

"I leave to your imagination what these objectives are likely to be," he said.

A Decision Up To The Nations.

Raising his voice, "not in panic by reading sensational articles in the press as to the unimaginable potency of gas poisons," but because he had respect for the abilities of chemists, Sir James went on to say that as matters now stand, the nation which possesses the most efficient chemical industry possesses also the most efficient instrument of war. It was clear to him that the nations of the world stand at the parting of the ways with regard to the question of retaining chemical warfare as a permanent part of their war equipment.

Despite the almost universal loathing and abhorrence with which the chemist regards the idea of developing poisons for war, said Sir James, the general opinion of scientists whom he consulted was that under present conditions it is impossible to stop such development. So long as the chemical factory remained it could be used for gas poisons, "and thus we come to the uncomfortable conclusion that while there is a general consensus of opinion against this method of warfare, we are swept along by a tide against which it is impossible to struggle."

His conclusion was that the evidence of history justified the hope that in the science of chemistry would remain a force which operated in the right direction, could do much toward reconstruction, and, having arrested back ward movement, might resume the higher function of fostering forward progress.

Irvine Recalls Horror at Ypres.

In his lecture, Sir James C. Irvine said that the necessity for the Allies to take part in the chemical warfare came after that April morning in 1915, when, without warning, waves of chlorine gas swept over the allied lines north of Ypres. After describing the panic and confusion which prevailed when men were confronted with the terrors of the unknown, Sir James said in part:

"The calamity at Ypres was at least the end of a period of anxious suspense. Now it was something more than war to the knife. The retort and crucible were to play their part, and the challenge had been thrown down to the country where, to quote an insolent criticism 'there was no real science, only playing at science.'

"Two problems stood out pre-eminently in the new warfare: First, protection for our troops, and second, retaliation. I do not seek to reopen this debate and it is far from my desire to criticise those who, on principle, urged that we should refrain from following Germany's lead, but I must state in a word that we had no alternative save surrender.

"In the popular mind the impression may have been created that Germany had exercised unusual scientific foresight and capacity when she first deluged the allied lines with waves of chlorine gas. I would remind you that chlorine was discovered by the Swedes, that the methods of preparing it electrolytically were discovered by the British, that its application as a bleaching agent was first rendered possible by the French, and that it was first used deliberately to kill by the Germans.

"I am not a pessimist, but am nevertheless appalled at the prospects opened out if man is to wage war in this way. What is the remedy, and what safeguards can we provide to secure that this mad abuse of scientific discovery will not recur in the future?

"A modern works designed for the large-scale preparation of organic compounds such as dyestuffs requires very little alteration in plant or personnel to be converted in a few hours into a place from which will pour materials more deadly by far than those used in the late war. No peace treaty or visiting commissions can control or even detect research work designed to furnish lethal agents for the future, and this research may be going on now, anywhere, in preparation for the next war.

"The time may come—must come—when man will rise superior to the envy and passion which make for war, but that time is not yet. We must face facts. These can be readily summarized:

"1. A nation leading in scientific development and in chemical manufacture broke a pledge and utilized chemical poisons in warfare.

"2. Other nations retaliated and formed definite chemical warfare departments to prosecute and expand the new methods.

"3. Since the war most nations have expanded the range of their chemical industries.

"4. The staffs of the various chemical warfare departments have been greatly reduced since the war, but are still in existence.

"Almost universally the opinion is given that in his hearts of hearts the chemist loathes the suggestion that his science should be utilized for developing new and more effective poisons for warfare. Nevertheless there is a general opinion that under present conditions it is impossible to stop it.

"No nation can afford to depend on other nations, be they friends or foes, for anything which has become a necessity. We must, as a consequence, manufacture scientifically, and to do so we must learn to think scientifically.

"I do not ask that every man should be a scientist, nor do I plead for a great scientific awakening merely because science has helped your country and mine to win one war and may shield us in the next. But for good or ill we live in a material universe and in a scientific age; the world is faced with social and economic tumult. But as I have endeavored to show in my earlier lectures, the evidence of history justifies the hope that the science of chemistry will remain a force which, operated in the right direction, can do much toward reconstruction and having arrested backward movement, may resume the higher function of fostering forward progress."

Shoots Himself So He Will Get Hospital Rest

HAMILTON, August 23. — Stuart Wilson, who was found on the mountain on August 10 with a bullet wound in his right leg and who afterwards told the police a thrilling story of a hold-up during which he was shot, was arrested by local police. It is alleged the wound was self-inflicted.

Police state he admitted that he fired four shots at himself, the last one taking effect.

Wilson, police declare, stated that domestic troubles and ill-health prompted him to shoot himself and that he had no intention of committing suicide, but merely wished to be taken to a hospital, where he would get rest and care.

SUNDAY SCHOOL BEING ERECTED

Work Is Started In Preparation For New Building.

AT GEORGE STREET.

Employees of McIntyre Brothers who have secured the general contract, estimated at $60,000, for the building of the new Sunday School of George Street United Church, were busy today in tearing down the old shed to the north of the church. The first sod will be turned tomorrow at 7 o'clock.

The Sunday School will be 62 feet 4 inches by 48 feet 4 inches, and will contain eight classrooms, with corridors, on the ground floor, seven classrooms and corridors n the first floor, and eleven classrooms and corridors on the third floor. The boiler and furnace room will measure 48 by 36, and the link between the church and Sunday school, 36 by 16. A new garage, measuring 22 by 13, will also be built. The chimney will be 67 feet from the ground and will have a ladder inside.

The work will be of solid brick and cut stone, with Georgia pine trimming, will have hardwood stairs and flooring throughout, and be fitted with cathedral glass and leaded lights.

Some alterations will also be carried out within the church. New heating, plumbing and wiring arrangements will be installed. This contract has been allotted to the Miller-Powell Company.

BITTERNESS IN MEXICO ON WAY TO ADJUSTMENT

Conferences Between President and Prelates May Bring Religious Peace.

HOPE FOR SETTLEMENT

Agreement Will Be Reached Unless Unforeseen Obstacles Should Arise

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 23 (Associated Press).—Mexico's bitter religious controversy, which has sorely strained the business interests of the country, set the Government and the Roman Catholic Church in strongly opposing positions, and concentrated the anxious attention of the world on this Republic, appears to be in a fair way to amicable adjustment through personal conferences between President Calles and the prelates.

It is confidently hoped by the Episcopate that an agrement will be reached, unless unforeseen obstacles develop.

Cordially Received.

President Calles last Saturday night cordially received two high dignitaries of the Church, Most Rev. Leopoldo Ruiz y Flores, Archbishop of Michoacan, and Bishop Diaz of Tabasco, at the Presidential Palace, and a statement issued by the Episcopate after the conference described it as "truly satisfactory." The President informed the prelates that registration of the priests, as required by the new regulations, was only for administrative purposes, and that the Government did not intend to interfere on the questions of dogma or religion. The Episcopate accented this declaration, and announced that, as soon as the churches had fulfilled these legal requirements there would be no further objection to renewing church services. In the meantime the Church will continue its efforts for constitutional amendment of the laws through the medium of Congress.

Thus, three weeks after the withdrawal of the priests from the churches in protest against the regulations—three weeks in which business reached a low ebb not equalled except at the worst period of actual revolution — three weeks of utmost anxiety and uncertainty — Mexico is once more breathing freely and hope has been renewed by reason of the statement issued by the Episcopate.

GLADIOLUS SHOW TO BE BEST EVER

Is Expected To Surpass All Former Exhibitions of Society.

OPENS TO-MORROW.

The Canadian Gladiolus Society, which holds its fifth annual show in the Armories tomorrow and Wednesday, is the only Canadian society of its kind. Its membership includes leading professional and amateur growers of gladioli all over the Dominion, chiefly in Ontario. In the show last year at Hamilton, the entries were in the neighborhod of thirteen hundred. The large hall of the Armories in Hamilton was filled with very fine gladiolus blooms. It is expected that this year's show will surpass all its predecessors in entries and magnificence of bloom. This is a fine opportunity for local gladiolus lovers to see an unusual display of the best and leading varieties of their favorite flower.

There is a fine local section for members of the local society only, with a prize list of over $160 in cash and goods. These classes have been made as simple as possible so as to be within the reach of every amateur gardener.

The directors ask every member with any "glad" bloom available to

Poincare Cuts Meals to Two Dishes As Step in French Economy Campaign

PARIS, Aug. 23.—The wonderful and extensive dejeuners and dinners for which the restaurants of the French capital have been famous for centuries, came under government ban on Saturday as part of Premier Poincare's plan of restriction.

Following a cabinet meeting a communique was issued in which it was set forth that the Premier had decided that the clients in high class restaurants eat too much and that henceforth only two dishes would be allowed at a meal, soup and dessert not counting.

The communique adds that this measure is indispensable to put an end to exaggerated consumption, particularly in luxury establishments especially frequented by foreigners."

With all due respect to the Premier, observation shows that it is more often the French than the English or Americans, who constitute a majority of the visitors to France who order expanded repasts.

When an American has had soup, fish, meat and dessert he generally considers it enough whereas when one runs up against a 10-course dinner at Foyot's, Ciro's, La Perouse's or La Rue's, the chances are it is the result of a conversation between the head waiter and a Frenchman.

Another measure of the government looks to the establishment of good but popular restaurants for that part of the "population particularly hit by the the high cost of living," which the government offers to aid and encourage.

Merchants selling objects other than luxury articles will in future have to post their price lists on the door of their establishents, which price lists will be the subject of a daily inspection by government officials.

Then there'll be a government commission which will study the market and decide what are fair and average quotations.

Special attention will be paid to the prices of the central markets and stock yards.

It was also made plain that the policy of brown bread will be carried out by adding other grains to wheat, to limit the importations, which otherwise would have been necessary owing to the poor French crop.

DIOCESAN PILGRIMAGE TO SHRINE OF MARTYRS OF FORT STE. MARIE ATTENDED BY OVER 900 PEOPLE

Bishop O'Brien Leads First Official Journey To New Church.

CONDUCTS MASS.

All Parts of Diocese Are Represented in Large Body of Pilgrims.

It was a sublime gesture of faith in unison that took nearly one thousand pilgrims yesterday from the city and the surrounding district over a hundred-mile train journey to the Martyrs' Shrine at Fort Ste. Marie. At an early hour yesterday morning, the platform at the C.N.R. station was black with people, waiting under a drizzly rain for the commencement of the journey that was to convey them to the site of what bids fair to be in time one of the most popular shrines on the continent of North America.

The hand of time puts the clock back, but to a different measure. Nearly three hundred years ago, the hill at Fort Ste. Marie resounded with the cries of bloodthirsty savages, screeching exultantly in their Indian language over the sufferings of the French missionaries who had come among them to bring the teachings of the meek and gentle Savior into their rude lives. Yesterday, up the same hill toiled the figures of followers of the same Christ, and the Church of God looks down on the now peaceful valley of the Wye, the silver thread of the river running through green fields, the panorama of natural beauty stretching as far as eye can reach over what was in olden times a lake.

One of the most inspiring sights of a day of inspiration was this ascent of the steep hill at Fort Ste. Marie by the pilgrims, toiling up the incline in a column of fours, weary after a three-hour train journey, their boxes and baskets of lunch borne with them. There was something of an Old-World atmosphere about the sight that lent a curious impression of a scene from other lands, and this same note of age, rather than of brash newness, lingers about the church which tops the steep hill, and which was actually opened to the public within the past two months. Perhaps this impression is gleaned from the greyness of the stone of the exterior and the brownness of the interior, finished with wooden veneer over every inch of the wall and ceiling surface.

Thirteen coaches bore the pilgrims to Fort Ste. Marie, with every coach filled to capacity. In the city, seven hundred and eighty tickets were sold, and in Lindsay, about one hundred and thirty. They came from Ennismore and Douro, from Indian River and Cobourg, and spent the most of the day in prayer, for prayers were said to the Martyrs and hymns were sung on the train, en route to the Shrine with Pontifical High Mass following immediately in the church. Then came an interlude for dinner, taken by a few at the hostel adjoining the church, a fine building capable of accommodating fifty guests, and supervised by Mrs. Godfrey of Toronto, or, as was the choice of the majority, taken from baskets whose contents were spread on the green hillside. In the afternoon, many made their way to the old Fort,

Horse Stolen in Hempstead The First in Fifteen Years

HEMPSTEAD L.I., August 23 — There is a horse thief on Long Island. When Edward Wilson of 80 Bennet Avenue reported the loss of his horse to police headquarters here oldtimers in the department scanned the records and found that it was fifteen years since a horse was stolen here. Nothing but automobiles now, they said.

There was a time, though, when truck farmers hauled all their supplies all the way to New York in carts and wagons. In those days horse thefts were not as infrequent.

But there is a horse missing now. Wilson's white horse, with a star in its forehead, disappeared from Wilson's stable last Tuesday and no trace of it has been found. The stable door was latched and it appears impossible to the Hempstead police for the horse to have wandered off, especially as it would have had to latch the door behind it.

Prize Talking Parrot Commits Suicide When Humiliated; Mynah Beats It Talking, Making It a Laughing Stock

LONDON, Aug. 23 (United Press).—Apparently insane with jealousy of a Ceylonese mynah that won from it the bird talking championship, the prize parrot of the London Zoo has committed suicide by holding its head under the water of its drinking basin.

The parrot used to attract great crowds It was the best talker the Zoo had ever had, but the mynah, a recent importation, soon put it in the background. Though unknown previously in this country, mynahs are declared to be far better talkers than parrots.

One of the parrots favorite sentences was, "I live in Park Lane." For a few days the mynah contented itself with imitating the parrot, but on the seventh day, when the parrot boasted to a large crowd about its residence in London's select district, the mynah screeched "The devil you do."

The parrot was obviously humiliated by the laughter that followed, and retired to a corner.

Similar incidents were repeated daily, and the parrot refused to eat. While keepers were still seeking a means of consoling it, the parrot was found drowned, its feet still clutching the rim of its drinking basin, and its head pressed sideways on the bottom under an inch of water in such a manner as to preclude the possibility of accidental death.

VALENTINO DIES AFTER RELAPSE FROM OPERATION

Pleurisy, Due To Weakness, Sets In When Recovery Seems Certain.

31 YEARS OLD.

Movie Star Was Born in Italy and Spent His Boyhood There.

NEW YORK, August 23. — Rudolph Valentino, the famous movie "shiek," died at 11.10 this morning.

The cause of death was given officially as septic endocarditis, resulting from a double operation.

The last rites of the Roman Catholic church were administered at ten o'clock by Father Joseph Mangedo, of the Church of the Sacred Heart of Jesus and Mary, who is from Castelanetam, the little village in Italy, where Valentino was born on May 6, 1895, and spent his boyhood.

The screen star, who was 31 years of age, was eight days in the hospital, and although at first he was reported in a critical condition, improvement was shown during the latter part of last week, and it was believed he was safely on the road to recovery.

Last night, however, he suffered a relapse due to pleurisy which set in in his left breast due to weakness following the double operation for acute appendicitis and gastric ulcers.

His real name was Rudolpho Alfonsza Raffaelo Pietre Milibert Guglielmi Di Valentina D'Antonguella.

He came to the United States 13 years ago, and tackled dancing, both as an entertainer and an instructor, landscape gardening, sweeping out stores, and shining brass on automobiles, before he went into the movies as a "heavy" at $50 a week.

Thereafter his rise to fame and fortune as the screens' perfect lover has been meteoric.

He leaves a brother and a sister in Italy.

His life was insured by Joseph M. Schenck, who had Valentino under contract, for one milion dollars.

Valentino did not know he was dying until just a short time before he passed away.

NEGRI PROSTRATED.

LOS ANGELES, August 23. — Canadian Press. — Pola Negri, who frequently admitted her engagement to Valentino, was prostrated with grief in a hotel here to-day when she first received news of the "Sheik's" death. She was unable to speak when asked for a statement.

MARKED DORY WASHED ASHORE

Named Julia One of Six Found on Sable Island

MARK UNKNOWN

HALIFAX, August 23 (Canadian Press).—Six more dories have been washed ashore on Sable Island, one marked "Julia." This information was contained in a radio received here last evening by C. H. Harvey, local agent of the Marine and Fisheries Department, from Superintendent Henry at the island.

Mr. Harvey said he had been in touch with La Have in an endeavor to identify the marked dory, but that the name "Julia" was unknown there. It is possible that the dory was attached to some Gloucester vessel. The other five dories were unmarked.

THE WEATHER.

The recent rains were heavy. On Saturday rain fell to the depth of .66, or two-thirds of an inch. On Sunday it amounted to 1.13. Grain was being cut in all directions, and harvesting operations were in full swing. What effect the rain will have on the cut and standing grain, I am not prepared to say, though it should revive the pastures.—W.P.

GREEK DICTATOR LOSES POWER SHORT REVOLUTION SUCCEEDS WHILE HE TAKES HIS VACATION

General Pangalos Is Arrested by Successor's Orders While On Island

CONDYLIS LEADER

Former Minister of War Is Head of the New Government

ATHENS, August 23 (Canadian Press).—The dictatorship of General Theodorus Pangalos has been overthrown in a quick and bloodless revolution headed by General Condylis, former Minister of War. President Pangalos was taking a holiday at the time on the Island of Spetsae.

The "Greek Mussolini" himself was arrested yesterday morning and placed aboard the destroyer Pergamos for conveyance to Athens. The destroyer Pergamos left Spetsae about noon. After the destroyer departed it became evident that Pangalos was making an endeavor to escape, but the Pergamos had insufficient fuel to reach a foreign port, and cruised about in the narrow straits between the Island of Hydra and the mainland.

The warships Kilkis and Leon were ordered to pursue her. They fired blank shells while hydroplanes bombarded her. The Hydra then steamed at full speed to the south in an attempt to join the squadron steaming toward the Aegean, hoping to receive support. But the Kilkis and Leon have been instructed to sink her if she persisted in refusing to surrender.

The coup was engineered without disturbances in the early hours yesterday morning, both army and navy rallying to the Condylis standard. General Condylis yesterday was reported master of the situation and complete calm was reported in all sections of the country. The general public in Athens is exhibiting general satisfaction at the turn of events.

Messages from Spetsae stated that President Pangalos had been arrested on telegraphic orders from General Condylis, and was being taken on the Pergamos to the capital over which he had ruled with an iron hand since he forcibly seized power a year ago. If he has not escaped, he, together with the members of the Eutaxis Government, all of whom have been placed under arrest, will have to answer for alleged tyrannical misrule.

Admiral Coundouriotis, former provisional President of Greece, who is spending a vacation on the Island of Hydra, has accepted the invitation of General Condylis to take over the Presidency again.

A commission will be appointed to fix responsibility for the conduct of the Pangalos administration.

The downfall of Pangalos was looked for by close political observers, as much and growing dissatisfaction had been expressed with his ambitious dictatorship.

DIED TO-DAY.

NEW MINISTERS MAY BE SWORN THIS AFTERNOON

Hon. Andre Fauteux and Dr. Eugene Pacquet To Enter Cabinet.

BOTH FROM QUEBEC.

Will Be Solicitor General and Minister of Health, It Is Said.

OTTAWA, Aug. 23 (Canadian Press).—Two new cabinet ministers may be sworn in before the day is out. In the absence of the acting Prime Minister from Ottawa this morning definite information is not forthcoming, but there is a strong possibility that two of the vacancies in the Cabinet may be filled with ministers from Quebec. They are said to be the Hon. Andre Fauteux and Dr. Eugene Paquet.

Mr. Fauteux is spoken of as Solicitor General. Dr. Paquet, who is the Conservative candidate in Bonaventure will probably take the portfolio of Health and Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment.

Sir Henry Drayton will not return to town until this afternoon. In the absence of the Governor General, the Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Mignault, of the Supreme Court, probaly will officiate at the ceremony which may take place this afternoon or tomorrow morning.

THREE BROTHERS DROWN IN NORTH

Row Boat Is Swamped and Only One of Occupants Saved.

UNABLE TO SWIM.

OTTAWA, August 23. — Three brothers, Cleophas Belaire, aged 25; Euclid Belaire, aged 20, and Arthur Belaire, aged 17, were drowned in Trout Lake near Fort Coulogne, Ont., and about 65 miles from here, late on Friday night, it became known here yesterday. The fatality occurred when their rowboat swamped as they were crossing the lake. A cousin, Frank Belaire, aged 2[illegible] clung to the wreckage and was rescued.

According to information received here, the four young men had rowed across the lake to visit a cousin. On the return journey shortly after midnight, they were faced with a stiff wind and rough water. A heavy sea swamped their boat and it broke into pieces. Frank Belaire clung to the wreckage, but saw his three companions sink before they could reach portions of the boat.

Frank alone was able to swim a little. His shouts for assistance were heard on shore by a cousin, Fred Belaire, who rowed out and rescued Frank, who was in an exhausted condition. They patrolled the spot in a vain search for any signs of the other men.

ST. LAWRENCE PLAN ADVANCES

Owen D. Young Says There Is Chance For Treaty About Power.

SPECIAL FACTORS.

PAUL SMITHS, N.Y., Aug. 23.—(Canadian Press.) —A great advance in understandings concerning power development of the St. Lawrence River have been made in recent conferences between representatives of the State of New York and of the Province of Ontario, Owen D. Young, Chairman of the Board of General Electric Co., informed President Coolige Saturday.

Receiving newspaper correspondents after his conference with the president, Mr. Young expressed the belief that there was a reasonable chance for a treaty to be concluded with Canada concerning the use of the stream for power purposes. He also indicated that he favored at least part of the plan of Governor Smith of this State, by which the power development on the St. Lawrence on account of the special factors which exist, should be done by a quasi public corporation.

BOYS MISSING ON LAKE HURON

Broken Motorboat Is Found But Occupants Are Missing.

BELIEVED DROWNED.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Michigan, August 23. — Canadian Press. — Missing three days, George Pond, Mackinac Island, George Ackerman, Detroit, and Charles Black Chicago, are believed to have lost their lives in the storm which enveloped upper Lake Huron last Friday.

The three were at a camp on Les Cheneaux Islands and started to cross to Mackinac Island.

Their broken motor boat with the engine missing was found on Saturday, but search parties have been unable to locate the boys.

REV. A. M'LAUCHLIN TAKES NEW CHARGE

Enters Upon His Duties in Grafton United Church Circuit.

GRAFTON, August 23. — Rev. Andrew McLauchlin, a former popular pastor of Keene, has commenced his pastorate at Grafton, Wicklow and Vernonville Churches, under most promising auspices. Both the Wicklow and Grafton Churches have been re-organized according to the new basis of union, and at Wicklow a record was established in the appointment of three women elders. A very pleasant social time followed the election of these officials, Mrs. McLauchlin being present with her husband, who presided over the meeting.

Centreton was formerly united with Grafton and Wicklow, but this appointment has now been made a separate charge, with Rev. Wesley Dorin, father-in-law of Rev. A. McLauchlin as minister. The old Methodist parsonage at Grafton has been sold, and the part of the proceeds of its sale which falls to Grafton will be largely used in making needed improvements to the manse, Mr. and Mrs. McLauchlin's place of residence. Quite a considerable sum is to be expended in added conveniences.

GLADIOLUS SHOW

show in some class. The full cooperation of every member will make a display of which the city will be proud, and will let visitors see what Peterborough can really produce.

Exhibits must be in position in the Armories by Tuesday forenoon.

Judging will probably be concluded for four o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

There is considerable enthusiasm among flower lovers of the city over this show which is of Dominion-wide importance.

Add gladiolus show ....

The Armories is a busy spot today. J. Grierson, chairman of the exhibition committee for the big Gladiolus Show, and his staff, are rapidly getting the tables and containers in shape to receive the exhibits. Mr. Melton, who is in charge of decorations, also has a busy few carrying out his instructions. Mr. Grierson has word from several large exhibitors, who will require considerable space, and is preparing it for them. Judging by the rate the work is progressing, the society made an excellent choice of a chairman of the exhibits committee.

Mrs. E. Schumacher, the capable secretary of the Canadian Gladiolus Society, arrived today, and took charge of the final preparations.

Entries are flowing in, many are already booked, and the success of the show is already assured.

Tomorrow will see the Armories a veritable hive of busy exhibitors, ticketing and placing their own exhibits, as well as the Horticultural Society committees, who will be taking care of the exhibits that are sent in unaccompanied.

Certainly not for many years again will such a floral spectacle be presented for Peterborough people to witness. It is hoped that the citizens will show the visiting society their appreciation of the honor of making Peterborough the home of the Fifth Annual Show and Convention, by crowding the Armories to capacity Tuesday evening, and all day Wednesday.

DIES SUDDENLY.

WARSAW, Aug. 23—John Leslie, an aged man, who lived alone, was found dead this morning in his home here. Heart failure is believed to have been the cause of death.

Mr. Leslie had left home early this morning to call on a neighbor, Mrs. Fred Parcels. He returned to his own house to obtain something for Mrs. Parcels, and didn't come back. Becoming alramed, she went to see what had detained him and found the body lying on the floor.

WHAT ABOUT THE PROGRESSIVES.

Trying to pin down the Progressive movement in the present election campaign is a feat that the average citizen finds almost impossible of accomplishment.

While in some constituencies there is a Liberal-Progressive alliance, in other sections of the country former Progressive candidates are now running as United Farmers, and we find President Amos of the United Farmers of Ontario sharply condemning hyphenated candidates.

What the final result of the present manoeuvring will be forms an interesting study for political observers.

Will the next Parliament be still further complicated by the presence not only of Progressives but of still another group of United Farmers, between which and the former there is apparently some considerable difference of opinion?

What connection is there between the party led by Mr. Forke and those candidates who are in the field as United Farmers?

The public is very much in the dark on these aspects of the political situation.

THE GLADIOLUS SHOW.

Peterboro citizens do not seem aware of the honour that has been conferred upon the city in choosing it as the location of the annual show of the Canadian Gladiolus Society, which is to be held in the local Armouries tomorrow and Wednesday.

Rare blooms from all parts of Canada will be included in the exhibit, and the show will attract visitors from all over the country, who regard the annual gladiolus show as one of the outstanding events of the year.

The gladiolus, hailed as the world's most popular flower, will be seen in innumerable variety, and those who have seen the displays in other years at Guelph, St. Thomas and Hamilton prophesy a rare treat for Peterboro citizens who attend on this occasion.

Nothing approaching this show in country-wide interest has been seen in this city, and the opportunity to see the gladiolus at its best and to be delighted by the wonderful displays of this popular flower from Canada's best known professional and amateur growers should not be allowed to go by default.

Such exhibitions come all too rarely to be missed when such a chance is offered.

REGISTRATION.

The registration of voters before His Honour Judge Huycke opens tomorrow at the Court House, and The Examiner cannot too emphatically warn the voters of the city to make sure that they are on the lists before it is too late to take advantage of the machinery set up for the final revision of the lists.

If the lists posted up by the registrars are not conveniently located so far as you are concerned, the campaign headquarters of the political parties will be glad to tell you whether or not your name is listed.

If it is, your worries are over.

If it has been omitted, the proceedings before His Honour Judge Huycke gives you a chance to protect your franchise, and you will be advised how to go about it.

Simply call up the headquarters of the party whose policies you favour and you will be given every assistance in looking after this most important matter.

If you fail to do so and find yourself on election day without an opportunity of expressing your opinion as to the composition of Canada's next Government, you will have nobody to blame but yourself.

The means of putting your name on the list are still available; it is the duty of each elector to make sure that his or her name is already on or is added during the present week.

A CHANCE FOR CAR-OWNERS.

The opportunity offered by the Kiwanis Club to motorists of the city and district to have their brakes and headlights tested should be taken advantage of generally this week.

This plan is a feature of the safety drive inaugurated by Kiwanis as a contribution toward safer conditions on our streets and highways.

It is admitted that defective brakes and glaring headlights are among the most prolific cause of accidents, yet many people are not as careful about the condition of either brakes or lights as they should be.

The action of the Kiwanis Club is arranging for an adequate test each night this week at the Market Square affords a convenient chance for every car-owner to satisfy himself that his brakes are in a safe condition, and that his headlights conform with the regulations and are not a menace to the safety of other drivers.

It is to be hoped that there will be general co-operation in this test because, of course, the success of the plan will depend upon the extent to which motorists respond to the invitation to have their cars inspected.

Any movement that promises to help in reducing the number of automobile accidents should have the hearty support of the public.

FOOLED THE COURT.

His court, on two occasions in the last few weeks, having been victimized by American tourists to whom leniency had been shown, the Police Magistrate at St. Thomas comes to bat with the announcement that in future he will conduct a strictly cash business, says The Hamilton Spectator. Other tourists who are prosecuted in the future for infractions of motor vehicles regulations and who may be short of funds will be detained until they raise the amounts of their respective fines, the Magistrate declares. It is a ruling that is certain to lead to unpleasantness, but the responsibility for it will be upon the heads of the "slickers" who fooled the court officers. A Chicago motorist, who pleaded lack of ready cash, gave a cheque in payment of a fine of $10 and costs and then, upon securing his release, had payment of the cheque stopped. A Buffalo motorist is reported to have worked the same game in connection with a telegraph money order. Tourists from the other side of the border can have no complaint that they are persecuted when they are visitors to Canada. Their ignorance of local traffic regulations is taken into consideration by the police and it is only when their offenses are flagrant that they are detained. It is an unwritten law that works both ways and Canadians who motor to the United States report that they are given the same consideration. The two motorists who fooled the St. Thomas Magistrate knew they were safe from prosecution when they crossed to their own country and they are likely still chuckling about the incident. Unfortunately, other tourists who will be denied equal consideration in St. Thomas' court in the future will be unable to see the joke.

LONG LIFE AND "NAGGING."

The expert who arranges statistics for the Life Extension Institute of New York has found that married men live longer than bachelors.

Scoff if you will, but it's a fact. These experts don't guess at things. Not a bit of it. They go scooting all over the country counting those who fall by the wayside, and chalking them down as married or single.

Not often, either, that these people resort to reason and explanation for their deductions, but Dr. Fisk does. He says plainly that a "nagging wife" is a certain token that the man's going to live a long time.

He doesn't contend that nagging is pleasant for the man, but his figures prove that it's good for him. She insists that he shall take his liver pills now and then, makes certain that he gets his epsom salts in season, sees to it that he soaks his feet when a cold is coming on, cuts off his late hours and shoots him out in good time in the morning.

Back of it all there may be method in her system. The man is the producer around the premises, and his wife's not going to have a cripple on her hands, hitting on two cylinders or blowing up before the mortgage is raised off the homestead.

The bachelor is a different sort. He lives in a house where he's only a roomer. Yes, all the designation he gets is that he lives at the second door on the left-hand side, first floor up.

He has to eat what's set before him. If it's liver and onions, he's got to fork it in whether it's good for him or not. If he gets his feet wet and finds a shiver has cast itself upon his spine, there is no one to mix mustard plasters, brew senna tea, or whatever it is they do in such cases. The bachelor has simply to putter about as best he can, and the chances are that he'll do the wrong thing.

Now don't get riled up over this, because it's not the opinion of a layman, but the considered findings of an expert.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

CAUSE OF CRIME.

Professor W. R. Vance, of the Yale Law School, addressing the Ithaca Rotary Club a few days ago, declared that "Prohibition is raising a race of criminals for the next generation." It was an unhappy choice of words he made. Much closer to the truth would it have been if the professor had said that the profits that are to be made from violation of the prohibition amendment are luring recruits to crime. The professor made no case against prohibition, but against those to whom enforcement of the 18th amendment has been entrusted. He was on firmer ground when he declared the real cause for the prevalence of crime to be the coddling of those who transgress the laws. "The American people have a distorted notion of sport," he is reported to have said. "The moment a man is arrested and put on trial for a crime, the public takes the attitude that a game is on. They see the poor, lone, unbefriended defendant on one side, with the uniformed, powerful hosts of the law on the other, with money behind them, and they begin to root for the defendant, who seems to be playing a losing game." And all the time it is the public, sweating in the bleachers, that is taking the punishment. When, as pointed out by Professor Vance, criminal statistics reveal that not more than 34 per cent. of those who commit murders in the United States are ever brought to trial, when only one per cent. of them pay the death penalty, when an average of six policemen are killed for every murderer whose life is taken by the State, is it any wonder that there are in the Republic 350,000 men and women who make crime their sole means of livelihood? The newspapers of the United States carefully guard against the wiles of press agents whose job is to keep the names of their employers before the public, yet those newspapers throw the front pages wide open to the press-agenting of crime and criminals. The man who invents a public boon gets a "stick" of publicity, if he is lucky; the gunman who preys on the public gets the eight-column spread of red type and the black-face ten-point. "The emotional reports of the bravery, the heroism of the defendant and the way he stands up under the strain," to quote Professor Vance again, are playing their part in defeating the ends of justice and winning recruits to the criminal army. When the coddling of the criminal ceases and he is treated not as a martyr, but as a public enemy, then will the war against crime be won. Professor Vance only said what every one of his auditors already knew.—Hamilton Spectator.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The announcement that Jimmy Simpson, of Toronto, is to be a candidate will convince some doubtful people that we are really in the midst of an election.

August storms are not any more popular than August election campaigns.

United States authorities estimate that tourists from that country will spend $190,000,000 in Canada this year. That is a harvest in the benefits of which we all share.

Have you bought your advance tickets for the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition? This is the week the four for a dollar tickets are on sale.

Some political candidates are passing out ice cream cones, a plan which it must be admitted is much superior to the handing round of the old-time campaign cigar.

CHICAGO GRAINS

CHICAGO, Aug. 23 (Canadian Press). — Unofficial crop reports from Winnipeg that the total wheat yield of the Prairie Provinces will be as large as in 1925, that is about 390,000 bushels, took wheat values downward yesterday. Closing quotations here on wheat were heavy, 1 3-8 to 2 1-4 net lower, with corn 1 1-8 to 1 1-2c down; oats 1-8 to 7-8c off, and provisions varying from unchanged figures to 15c decline.

Emphasizing the bearish effect of Canadian crop advices were unlooked for, setbacks in wheat prices at Liverpool and the view was strongly urged by some trade leaders that the North American wheat surplus this season will be enough larger than last year to offset European shortage. Considerable falling off on Saturday in the volume of current export business was also a weakening factor.

Corn and oats sympathized with wheat weakness. Growth conditions for corn were favorable, but a late fall is requisite.

Provisions tended down grade in line with the hog market.

STIRLING EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, Aug. 23 (Canadian Press) — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here Saturday as follows:

Sterling demand $4.84 1-2.
Sterling cables $4.85.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Aug. 21 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market Saturday was dull and featureless. The cash grain market was also quiet and prices were steady.

A moderate amount of business was worked in Spring wheat flour for local account and the undertone to the market was easier but prices showed no change. The trade in winter wheat flour was quiet and prices were unchanged.

Prices for all lines of millfeed were well maintained under a fair enquiry. The market for standard grades of rolled oats was quiet but firm.

Considerable business was transacted in eggs and the feeling was firm. The receipts were 1,272 cases.

The demand for butter from foreign buyers continued fair and a good trade was done and prices ruled steady. The receipts were 2,275 packages.

Extreme dullness again marked the cheese trade, but values remained firm. The receipts were 9,485 boxes.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

FORETHOUGHT

The wise consult the wiser skies
Before they try the uncertain seas;
A wealth of signals, to the wise,
Predict the gale, assure the breeze.
The fool has little thought of these,
And nothing proves, and nothing tries,
And in some hour of folly, dies.

The wise take time, while folly sneers,
When death comes thundering down the rails.
To him who neither heeds nor hears
Death walks the roads and rides the gales.
The weary world owes half its tears
To him who nothing ever fears.

Brave men of better stuff are made
Than useless folly. 'Tis to wear
Wisdom as well as shining blade,
To dare when there is need to dare,
Take care when there is need to care.
The wise the braver part have played;
Only a fool is not afraid.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite.

THAT by the force of will, the study of the situation, and application of common sense, many cities determine the policy of their city; then with hard work, enthusiasm and persistency, they carry out the policy to a successful conclusion. These cities are known as growing cities.

THAT the increase in productive area that looks to your city, either as its market or source of supplies, means that your city will benefit in proportion to the size of the area developed.

The men who kill a city are always sorry when it is dead.

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

"ONE AFTER ANOTHER HAVE"

An error that is quite common is the use of a plural verb, such as "have," with the expression "one after another," as in the following sentence, taken from a newspaper:

"One person after another have passed the courthouse without noticing that the upper panel of the bronze front door is damaged."

This should be, "One person after another has passed," etc. If we transpose the words of the sentence slightly, we shall see why this is so, we should not say, "One person have passed after another," etc. Even a very elementary knowledge of grammar would teach us that in this case we should say, "One person has passed after another."

This error is akin to many others in which the speaker or writer is guilty of the fault or error of using a singular noun with a plural verb, or vice versa.

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL

THE WILL TO BE NOTICED

By Dr. Frank Crane.

The other day a small boy in Chicago swallowed a nail to attract attention.

The desire to be noticed follows men from the first breath to the last. It is a craving as real as the desire for food.

This "will to be noticed" results in daily demonstrations, some fantistic and some tragic.

In an eastern state a young man put several sticks of dynamite upon a railroad track. He said he intended to rush out and remove them just as the fast passenger train appeared—thus making himself a hero.

Unfortunately for his plan the explosive was discovered before the train appeared and he was arrested and sentenced to the penitentiary.

Another young man told a thrilling story of leaping from the deck of a vessel and rescuing a drowning man. While he was in the water, he said, someone stole four hundred dollars from the pocket of the coat which he had stripped off on deck.

This last detail proved too interesting.

It gave the story front-page prominence all over the country. This publicity led to the discovery that there had been no drowning man and no four hundred dollars.

The youth confessed that he had made up the story to attract attention and to appear a hero in the eyes of his friends.

Even in death the desire to attract attention has power.

Many of the suicides in New York occur at the 125th Street elevated station during the middle of the day.

Those who leap from this platform land in the middle of a busy street.

It is said that in a town in Italy a guard has to be kept on a certain cliff overhanging the business district to prevent suicides. The reason the spot was so often chosen is that those who leaped from it landed in the center of the town below.

Ever since—and probably before—Empedocles chose to make a spectacular exit from life by leaping into a flaming volcano, men have sought to attract attention for a final brief moment by means of an unusual death.

The "will to be noticed," when directed in lines of real worthwhile effort, has accomplished many of the great achievements of the world.

But when applied to vain and useless demonstrations it produces only the tragic or the laughable.

CAMPBELLFORD CITIZENS HOLD ANNUAL COMMUNITY PICNIC

Large Gathering at Crow River Bridge for Outing.

MANY EVENTS

Afternoon and Evening Filled With Entertainment for All.

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 23.—The Second Annual Campbellford and District Community Picnic was held at Crow River Bridge on Friday afternoon and evening, and drew a large crowd in spite of other attractions and the fact that farmers are right in the midst of Harvesting.

The Northumberland Regiment band, under the direction of William Pearson, furnished music from five o'clock till late in the evening and their selections were highly appreciated by the crowd.

A fine programme of sports ield the attention of the crowd during the whole afternoon, every event being closely contested; the Single Ladies' Race being run the second time when the judges could not pick the winners in the first attempt.

The fat men's race failed to draw an entry, the portly gentlemen not taking any chances on losing their reputations as speed merchants.

The Shot-put, a new addition to the regular programme, proved very popular, drawing an even dozen entries, most of them without previous experience at the strong man's game.

Seymour West and Petherick's Corners opened the sport sheet with a softball game in which runs, hits and errors were numerous, and the western boys were returned winners, 25 to 15. They out-hit their Eastern rivals, and didn't make as many babbles in the field.

Billy Macoun, for the Western outfit, hit a homer with the bases loaded in the sixth.

Seymour East or Burnbrae was unable to get out the regular tug-of-war team, and rather than take chances on losing their fine reputation with a weakened team declined to enter, Pethericks Corners again being the opposition for Seymour West. The Western boys were again successful in two straight pulls. Petherick's got away to a fine start, at the first of the pull, but were unable to hold their advantage for the full minute, and the west, by a series of combined efforts, pulled the eastern team over.

LIBERAL LEADER HAS COMPLETED WESTERN TOUR

Will Leave for Maritime Provinces Stopping at Sherbrooke Enroute

RETURN SEPTEMBER 5th

Shall Spend Final Week of Campaign in Touring Ontario

NORTH BAY, Ont., Aug. 23 (Canadian Press).—"The Tory campaign of slander is not so much a smoke screen to hide the main issues of the campaign as it is poisonous gas intended to injure the reputation of honorable men and to poison the minds of the electors with untrue allegations and vile insinuations," declared Mr. Mackenzie King here Saturday. The Tory campaign had failed, and now the party was raising the cry of annexation to the United States to influence electors by a false appeal to patriotic feelings, he said.

The leader of the Opposition has completed his tour of Western Canada, and after spending Sunday in Ottawa will leave for the Maritime Provinces, stopping at Sherbrooke on the way to New Brunswick. The next two weeks will be spent in the Maritimes and Lower Quebec. September 5 will find the Liberal leader again in the Capital, preparing for the final week of his election tour in Ontario.

Mr. King displayed to the audience here a copy of The Toronto Telegram of August 16. A full page was devoted to an article entitled "Mackenzie King pictured as Wall Street's hero—Financial interests of U.S. are told that King and his followers believe Canada should be free of British influence." The page reproduced an article which it stated was published in The Wall Street Journal.

Mr. King said the article reminded him of the saying of Dr. Johnson, that "Patriotism is the last refuge of a scoundrel."

The Tory party, defeated in its campaign of scandal, was now seeking a refuge which Dr. Johnson had said was the last resort of scoundrels.

"The article, according to the statement which appears at its head, has been written, not in the States, but in Canada," Mr. King declared. "I venture to say it was written not very far from the office of The Toronto Telegram itself. Not only has it been inspired from Tory sources, but its publication and distribution is being effected by Tory money." The leader of the Opposition stated that while the article was devoid of truth and was in the nature of political progaganda, it made it clear that "the big interests in Wall Street were combining with the big interests of Canada to do their utmost to prevent the return of the Liberal government to power."

"We haven't stepped down, we've simply stepped to one side in order to give the people a chance," said the Liberal leader Saturday night while predicting a return to power.

A year ago the Conservatives had peddled the patent medicine of Protection about the country, claiming they could improve conditions in Canada. At the same time the Liberal party had asked to be returned in order to produce the fruits of several years in office. This the Government had done. The railway situation, the trade balance, and the national debt all bore testimony to the wise economies of the late government. The four basic industries of Canada had been helped and today the Conservative party dared not cry blue ruin throughout the country.

Mr. King was preceded by L. A. Rivet of Montreal, who, speaking in French, said he had been asked by Hon. P. J. A. Cardin, to speak to the French-Canadians of Northern Ontario. Mr. Rivet made light of the claims of Mr. Patenaude, and referred satirically to the Minister of Justice's alleged "conversion" of Mr. Meighen.

LEAGUE MEETING

Good Atttendance at Regular Gathering at Petherick's Corners.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, Aug. 23.— The meeting of the People's League was held in the church on Thursday evening, the regular meeting night, with an attendance of about 50. The Reds were again in the lead while the Khaki increased the lead over the Whites to 25. The programme was in charge of the Citizenship Department and the leader for the evening was Albert Gifford.

After a short song service and the general business, Rev. Mr. Daniel gave a devotional talk on the application of the Golden Rule to the business life of to-day. Everett Fairman gave an impromptu talk on his recent motor trip to Northern Ontario and the interesting points which he brought out in his discussion of this new country were both instructive and entertaining to his audience. A solo by Rev. Mr. Daniel and the National Anthem completed the programme. Next Thursday evening the semi-final softball game between the Reds and Khaki will be played, the winners to meet the Whites.

WEDDING BELLS.

WILKINSON—ST. JOHN.

CAMFBELLFORD, August 23. — A pretty wedding was held on Wednesday at 3 p.m. in the Victoria Corners United Church, when Lillas Merle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur St. John, Uxbridge, became the bride of Mr. C. Leon Wilkinson of Hamilton. Rev. Mr. Newton performed the ceremony in the presence of a large number of friends. The bride looked lovely in a gown of white georgette, with silver lace trimming, embroidered veil with wreath of orange blossoms, and carrying a shower bouquet of roses and baby's breath, entered the church on the arm of her father, to the strains of Lohengrin's bridal chorus. They were preceded by the ushers, Mr. Clarence Phew of Uxbridge and Mr. Scott Flynn of Hamilton.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Dorothy St. John, who looked charming in a gown of Nile green georgette, black picture hat and carrying a bouquet of Columbia roses. The groom was supported by his cousin, Mr. Ernest Cochrane, of Toronto.

During the signing of the register, Miss Gertrude Simmons of Toronto sang "O Promise Me." The bridal music was played by Miss Ina McCloud.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. St. John, and a buffet luncheon was served to about 60 guests. Mrs. St. John wore brown georgette, large black hat and carried a bouquet of sweet peas.

The young couple left on a motor trip, the bride travelling in a sport coat, sand hat, rose and sand canton dress and blonde shoes and stockings.

The groom's gift to the bride was a brown fox fur.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilkinson will reside in Hamilton.

Mr. Wilkinson is an old Campbellford boy, and his many friends will extend to Mr. and Mrs. Wilkinson hearty congratulations.

MAIL BY STEAMER STARTED IN 1840

Letters for Canada Were Landed at Halifax Then

It is interesting to note that a Canadian-built vessel, the "Royal William", was in 1833 the first to cross the Atlantic under steam, making the trip from Pictou to London, in spite of the adverse conditions, in twenty-five days. A claim is sometimes made in this connection on behalf of an American boat, the "Savanah", which made a trip across the Atlantic in 1819 with a certain amount of assistance from steam, but she could not be properly said to have made the trip under steam. A steam engine was placed on her deck and she was equipepd with paddle wheels of a primitive pattern which could be lowered over the sides of the vessel when the weather was calm and brought on deck again when the wind rose; and her log shows that of a total of 707 hours occupied in the voyage, she ran only 80 hours under steam.

In the spring of 1838, two steamers made successful trips from the United Kingdom to New York of fifteen and seventeen days duration respectively. As confidence in this means of ocean transportation increased, the desirability and advantage of such vessels for the transmission of mails was recognized and the Great Western Steamship Company applied to the British Government for a contract for the conveyance of the mails to New York. However, the Maritime Provinces were at this time strongly urging that a steamship service direct to Halifax be provided, to replace the existing service by slow sailing packets and to take all colonial mails instead of having some of them go by way of New York; and the Treasury eventualy decided in favour of this project and invited tenders. By 1840, arangements were effective with Samuel Cunard of Halifax for a direct mail service twice a month by steamship between Liverpool and Halifax, and the first trip was made in July of that year, the passage taking twelve and a half days. Mails for Canada were taken overland from Halifax to Pictou and thence by steamer to Quebec. Provision was also made for subsidiary services by steamers running from Halifax to Boston, to Newfoundland and Bermuda.

So far as the mails for Canada were concerned, while this service via Halifax might be satisfactory in summer, in winter the mails could be received from England more quickly via New York or Boston, owing to the length of time required for the carrying of mails overland between Halifax and Quebec during the winter season; the time gained on the Atlantic as between Halifax and Liverpool trip to Quebec. Moreover, difficulty soon arose over the question of who should bear the cost of the expensive land service. It was not long before the desirability of some other landing-place for the British mails was again under consideration, and Boston seemed to be particularly favoured for the purpose, on account of the railway lines which were being extended inland from that port. The United States Governmen was quite willing that the British mails for Canada should be transmitted in this way, and arrangements were finally concluded accordingly. The first trip from Liverpool to Boston with these mails was made on the 4th of April, 1845. Mails were conveyed between Boston and Montreal in charge of a British officer apointed by the Postmaster General.

BRITISH WEEKLY SEEKING VIEWS ABOUT RELIGION

Sends Out Questionnaires to Many Leading Citizens.

MANY QUESTIONS

Replies Will be Published, But Names Kept Secret.

LONDON, August 23 (United Press).—England's first symposium of the religious views held by its leading minds is expected as the result of a questionnaire published on Friday by "The Nation," an influential London weekly magazine.

"The Nation" goes into the homes of intellectuals in all parts of the country. Its religious questions cover the field in so exhaustive a manner that the real views of those answering them seem assured. Names of those responding will be confidential, but all answers will be printed.

The questionnaire takes up, among other subjects, the belief as to a personal god; personal immortality; divinity of Christ; the forms of Christianity, the apostles' creed; the historical authenticity of Genesis; and the divine inspiration of the Bible.

BLUE THIS FALL.

For fall, style authorities tell us, blue will be exceedingly prominent, though at the present time red—the dark Chanel red and the claret shades, undoubtedly has the preference.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorneliff

SHE DESCRIBES A BIZARRE TRAVELING COSTUME.

Miss Shaw, one of Madame's prettiest clients came rushing into Madame's office early this morning and informed us that she was going abroad in a few days and really had nothing to wear. She wanted to get a few things to take with her, for of course, she expected to buy trunkfuls of clothes in Paris. The first thing she wanted was something to travel in.

Madame sent me to the manikins' room to don an outfit which had just been finished. We call it the "Red Bird," and you'll easily understand why when I describe it to you.

The slim coat is of black kasha and has a cape of white kasha. This is lined with the loveliest scarlet crepe and the one-piece dress underneath is also of the scarlet crepe. It is really a most startling outfit, but one which I knew would be particularly becoming to Miss Shaw, as she is very dark and has most vivid coloring.

I knew as soon as I walked into Madame's office that she liked the outfit, for she exclaimed:

"Just what I've been looking for! How soon can I have one like it, or would it be possible for me to have this one, Madame?', Madame assured her that she could have this one, if it fitted her, and she immediately went to the fitting room to try it on. It did fit her beautifully and she was so delighted that she wanted to keep it right on.

The tie neck of the coat certainly gave a novel touch to the outfit. And when Miss Shaw donned the hat which was designed especially for the costume, and is made of the scarlet crepe, she certainly looked adorable.

Madame told her she should have a handbag to match, so she purchased a rather capacious red Morroco one, for, as she explained, one had to carry so much when traveling.

I'm planning to have one like it for my vacation, but I don't think the white would be particularly practical for me, so I'm planning one in black and king's blue and I think it will be as effective as the black, white and red combination. Pam thinks so, too, and she is going to help me make it.

I think kasha is about the most practical material one can use for travelling for it doesn't crush easily and is not too warm for these Summer days. Then, too, one can use the little dress for sport wear, and the coat may be used over most anything, so really, I don't feel that I shall be extravagant to invest in such an outfit.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

JULIA DE L'ESPINESSE AND M. DE GUILBERT

"Dearest, I have not seen you and you tell me it is not your fault!" cried out Julia De L'Espinesse, one of the beauties of the French salon, who had Paris by the ears, in a letter to her lover, De Guilbert, "but if you had the thousandth part of a wish to see me you would be here and I should be happy. No, I was mistaken, and I suffer; but I do not covet the pleasures of heaven, dearest. I love you to distraction, to folly, to extravagance, to despair! Every day you torture my heart most cruelly. I saw you this morning and forgot it all; it seemed as if I could not make enough of you, loving you with my whole soul and feeling as if I could live and die for you. You deserve more than that of me; yes, if I only knew that you loved me it would be as nothing, for nothing could be more simple and natural than to love to distraction one so good as you. But, dear friend, I more than love—I suffer. I will give up all my happiness for your good."

Julia is noted in history for the number of famous men who gave her their whole-hearted admiration, and sometimes love. Chief of those was D'Alembert, the philosopher, who loved her even when her own infatuation for him had long since been dead and when several others had taken his place in turn in the heart of Mlle. Julia.

Julia De L'Espinesse was the daughter of the Countess D'Albon, born during a rather lengthy absence of the Count, her husband. The baby was registered by a tradesman under his own name and lived in his family.

When Count D'Albon considerately passed away the Countess brought Julia to her rightful home, but she was still a kind of Cinderella, the household bearing sharply in mind the circumstances of her birth. When the Countess died, she left full acknowledgement of Julia's parentage, but her half-brother, now the Count D'Albon, betrayed his mother's trust and turned Julia out-of-doors.

The unfortunate young woman was next found by Madame du Deffand, at the age of fifteen, washing dishes in some kitchen; and struck with the girl's attractiveness, wit and vivacity, took her away and introduced her to Paris. She soon became the rage.

Her love letters are fascinating documents and show a depth of feeling that seems out of place in a woman of her character. M. De Guilbert to whom she wrote many amorous declarations is dead to the world in name as well as in body, but her letters to him are deserving of remembrance. Here is another feeling missive:

"I give way to the desire of my heart, dearest! I love you. I feel as much pleasure and torture as if it were the first and last time in my life that I pronounced these words. Ah! why do you torture me? Why am I so humbled? You will know some day. Alas! you will understand me. It is dreadful that I must suffer for you, and through you. Is that for loving you? Adieu, dearest friend."

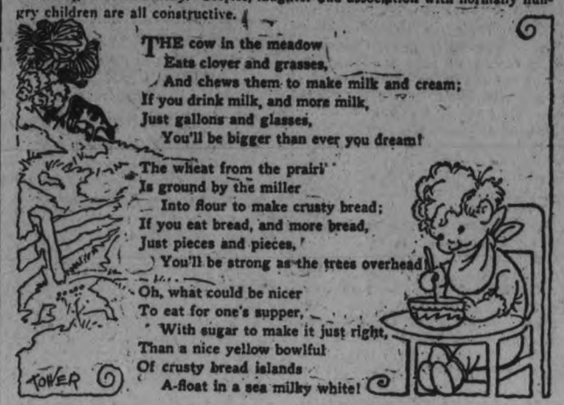
Bread and Milk

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

THE problem of the child who won't eat proper things is common to many homes. Scolding will never make him hungry. Talking about his lack of appetite only makes him feel that he is important because he refuses to eat. Aversions to certain foods are largely notional and should be ignored by calmly assuming, "Why, of course, Billy eats all good food!" and then placing it before Billy. One of the happiest solutions is to make mealtime so attractive that the child forgets to be finicky. Stories, laughter and association with normally hungry children are all constructive.



THE cow in the meadow
Eats clover and grasses,
And chews them to make milk and cream;
If you drink milk, and more milk,
Just gallons and glasses,
You'll be bigger than ever you dream!

The wheat from the prairi'
Is ground by the miller
Into flour to make crusty bread;
If you eat bread, and more bread,
Just pieces and pieces,
You'll be strong as the trees overhead!

Oh, what could be nicer
To eat for one's supper,
With sugar to make it just right,
Than a nice yellow bowlful
Of crusty bread islands
A-float in a sea milky white!

HER OWN WAY by a Girl of Today

AN UNDERSTANDING

I could not tell whether Mr. Robinson was angry or frightened but the blood rushed to his face until it was fairly purple. I knew, however, that he understood by the questions that I had said nothing to Joan and would not do so unless he drove me to it. As far as I was concerned the episode was closed. After slight hesitation he said:

"Yes, I found the bottle, and I surmised that it was you who left it there. Thank you, very much.

I was sure by the way he spoke that he knew I never would betray him in any way to his stepdaughter.

The door opened into the drawing room and entering I was very much surprised to find John Meredith already standing near the mantel. He must have come in through one of the long French windows, for we had been standing in the hallway.

"Hello, John," said Mr. Robinson, casually.

"Hello, Dad," answered John Meredith just as impersonally.

"What brought you here to the city where you have not been for so many years?" his stepfather inquired.

"I wanted to be present at the settlement of Joan's and my estate, which was to be made today."

"Are you sure it's today, John. I'm certain that Elkins has forgotten it. Did he send you a notice?" asked Mr. Robinson with assumed surprise.

"No, Dad, I didn't get any notice, and I expect I would not have thought of it myself, as everything seems to be going on so well, if Symington had not called upon me for money to start the expedition, which I am financing."

"Well, I'm sorry to disappoint you, my boy, but I'm sure the work cannot be done today. Elkins will not be able to come. He has been very ill."

"That's all right, Mr. Robinson," I broke in. "Both Elkins, Sr. and Jr., are going to be here. I'm expecting them any minute. That was all arranged by telephone this morning. Mr. Josiah Elkins is feeling quite well today and he thought the drive would do him good. He said that with what small help he could give him, his son had been working on the papers for a long time and they were practically finished."

"You certainly have been on the job already as business manager, Miss Dean," said Mr. Robinson, with a smile that was a cross between admiration and sneer.

I did not think it was necessary to tell him that Jerry had found it all out for me through his father, who was also a client of the Elkins. I merely contented myself with a nod.

My eyes strayed again to John Meredith. This time I caught an expression on his face which was entirely different from any I had ever seen there before. It was one of interest and appreciation I would almost say that he had received a distinct thrill. As soon, however, as he caught my eye his face settled back again into its sad indifference.

Elkins father and son, were announced and we proceeded to seat ourselves.

HOROSCOPE

"The Stars Incline, but do not Compel"

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

MONDAY, AUGUST 23, 1926.

Good and evil planetary influences contend to-morrow, according to astrology which finds certain adverse aspects active.

Jupiter is in a place mildly helpful to those who buy and sell. Merchants should benefit.

Unusual attention is to be given to dress, it is foretold, and while large profits will come to merchants and manufacturers there will be losses.

Many changes in women's attire are foretold, for it will reflect reactionary influence which are to be prevalent.

This is not a lucky day for women, especially those who have been belles at the summer resorts, for the sway is supposed to reveal to men many feminine frailties.

Love affairs are subject to a menacing influences making for inconstancy and disappointments.

Although there may be many flirtations of brief memory the summer will record numerous romances that greatly increase the number of autumn weddings.

Saturn today appears to presage profit to farmers and to all who till the soil. Food prices are to increase, it is forecast.

This should be a lucky day for making sales and especially for real estate transactions.

The lunation of this month has been read as ominous for all of Europe and as presaging anxieties on this side of the ocean.

New complications may afflict ruling powers and will disturb Great Britain, it is prophesied. Bitter controversies may be expected in parliament.

The London strike appears to be directed by menacing aspects for all of England.

Persons whose birthdate it is should have good luck in the coming year when building plans should be especially fortunate.

Children born on this day probably will be recognized for their intellectual power and their great integrity. These subjects of Virgo frequently develop into philanthropists who are concerned with living conditions.

BRITISH DELEGATION SAIL NEXT MONTH

LONDON, August 23. — Canadian Press. — The British Government's delegation to Canada and the United States to study industrial conditions with special reference to the relations between employers and employed, will sail for New York early in September.

The delegation will consist of Sir William Mackenzie, Ernest Bevan, Michael Dewar, J. Kaylor, F. W. Laggett Haig Mitchell and Randolph Smith.

JAPAN INTENDS TO POPULATE ITS DOMINIONS

Will Colonize Formosa, Hotchkaido and Other Possessions.

CHANGE OF POLICY.

Foreign Office Sees That People Are Not Wanted Elsewhere.

TOKIO, August 23 (Canadian Press).—Henceforth Japan intends to colonize Hokkaido, Formosa, and other possessions, but does not intend to emigrate to Canada, Australia and other countries, realizing that the previous policy caused much trouble and ill-feeling, a Foreign Office spokesman announced to-day. The spokesman said Japan had reversed its entire emigration policy after discovering the futility and folly of previous efforts to send out its excess population to places where it is not wanted.

POWER LESS FEARED.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 23.—(United Press.)—The danger of a "color war" in the Pacific has grown remote, according to H. Duncan Hall, lecturer at the University of Sydney, Australia, speaking here to-day at the Institute of Politics.

"Australian people are beginning to realize how much the economic and military strength of Japan has been exaggerated," Hall said. "It is an elementary fact that the Japanese do not possess the maritime transport necessary for serious invasion of a distant country. Various discussions here have indicated the great weakness of Japan in raw materials and resources vital to waging a protracted large scale war.

"The Government of Australia is beginning to realize the importance of these new factors and is ceasing to view with serious apprehension its future relations with Japan."

BLENHEIM MILL IS BURNED DOWN

One of Finest Plants in the Province Is Totally Destroyed.

LOSS $100,000.

BLENHEIM, Aug. 23.—(Canadian Press.) — The plant of the Rutherford Milling Company, one of the finest flour milling institutions in Ontario, to-day is a smouldering heap of ruins, after 42 years of operation. The plant consisted of isolated office, five story brick flour mill, wheat elevator, bean elevator and warehouse. The blaze early Saturday swept away four buildings and left only the office. The last appraisal a year or so ago was $140,000 for the buildings and machinery. Two years ago $50,000 mortgage bonds were offered to the public, nearly all of which was sold. The bondholders are concerned in the insurance, the details of which are not being made public pending settlement of the adjusters early next week, but it is reported the total insurance will be in the neighborhood of $100,000. The plant was one of the best, being equipped for grinding hard and soft wheat, and until a year or so ago had run several years full 24 hours each day.

PRAY FOR MEXICO.

BUDAPEST, August 23 (United Press).—More than 100 persons were injured during the celebration by 150,000 pilgrims and townspeople of St. Stefan's Day here on Friday. The streets were jammed with people as a reproduction of the right hand of St. Stefan, first king and Patron Saint of Hungary, was carried at the head of the parade.

Following the celebration a monster mass meeting was held as a mark of protest against the alleged anti-religious laws of Mexico. Mass was held in behalf of the Mexican Catholics.

NATALIE

Natalie is another holy name, coming from the Latin title of "Dies Natalis," the birthday of our Lord. The word Natalie has furnished the title of the east to all the Romance portion of Europe.

France made the word Noel from it, meaning Christmas, and soon Noel became a Christian name there. In Italy it appeared as Natale. Spain and Portugal used the name Natal.

There is a feast celebrated on the 8th of September by the Greek Church as the festival day of St. Natalia, the devoted wife who attended her husband, St. Adrian, in his martyrdom.

He is the same Adrian whose relics filled the Netherlands and whose name became celebrated in the West where his wife Natalia was long neglected. The East, however, reversed the arrangement and Natalia is popular there, while her husband is forgotten.

Natalia was one of the favored Greek Christian names. Russia adopted her and, adding the usual consonants o language, calls her Natalija, Natasehenka, and Natasehn. The first of the three names is extremely popular there to-day, or was, until the Bolsheviki came into power and withdrew the attention of etymologists from the study of feminine names.

France is said to have secured Natalie from Russia, though there is record of a Natalie at Cambrai in 1212. England preferred Natalie to any of the other forms, rejecting Natalia as too Latin in its influence. Whether American Natalies are representative of the English, or taken direct from France, is a matter of personal preference.

The pearl of purity is Natalie's talismanic gem. It promises good fortune for its wearer and makes her gentle, kind, and lovable. Thursday is her lucky day and 4 her lucky number.

UNCLE WIGGILY

Today's Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE SLAMMING DOOR

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

"Oh, goodness me! Can't you do something about it!" sighed Mrs. Longears, in Uncle Wiggily's hollow stump bungalow one day.

"Do something about what, my love?" asked the rabbit gentleman kindly, for he knew his wife was nervous and often had headaches.

"Fix that slamming, screen door," went on Mrs. Longears. "Every time the children run in and out, and they do it all day, they let that door slam and it gives me the craw-craws, not to mention the dinky wobbles."

"Bang! Slam!" sounded through the bungalow.

"There it goes again!" sighed the rabbit lady, holding her paws to her head.

"Yes, I heard it myself," said Uncle Wiggily, and, leaning out of the window he saw Jingle and Jangle hopping down the back steps. The two little rabbit girls had come in to get some carrot bread and clover jam from Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy. Going out they had let the screen door slam hard.

"It's terrible!" cried Mrs. Longears. "Can't you do something to make the door shut more softly?"

"I'll try, my precious," said the bunny. "But tell me—did that last slam give you the craw-craws or the dinky wobbles?"

"Both!" sighed his wife.

"Bad—very bad,—agreed Uncle Wiggily. "I must fix it at once. You had better stuff some cotton in your ears he went on.

"Stuff cotton in my ears! What for?"

"So you won't hear the door slam many times in the next five minutes said the bunny uncle. "You see," he explained, "I am going to open and shut the door and let it slam hard, very often, so I can find the best way of making it soft."

"All right," said his wife. "But instead of stuffing cotton in my ears so I won't hear the noise, I'll hop across the street and visit my friend, Mrs. Twistytail."

When Uncle Wiggily's wife was in the lady pig's house, the bunny gentleman tried the screen door to see just how hard it slammed, and to try to discover a way of making it softer. In and out he hopped, just as did the forty 'leven little bunny children. For it was their trips into and out of the house that kept the screen door busy.

All of a sudden, as Uncle Wiggily was trying the door, jumping in and out as the children did, from the bushes back of the bungalow the Fuzzy Fox saw him.

"That rabbit must be crazy!" thought the Fox. "He has gone silly in his old age, popping in and out of the door so many times. And if he is silly I ought to be able easily to catch him. I'll slink up close and the next time he jumps in through the doorway, letting the screen slam after him, I'll follow and nibble his ears."

To and fro Uncle Wiggily let the screen door slam and bang, but he could think of no way to make the sound softer. Then, all of a sudden the Fox, who had crept nearer and nearer, suddenly slipped in after the rabbit. The door slammed shut, but it made no sound at all.

Why, do you ask? I shall tell you. Because the Fox didn't get his big, dusting brush of a tail out of the way in time, and the door slammed on it, the fuzzy hair causing all noise to stop.

"Ha!" cried Uncle Wiggily turning about. "I have discovered a way to stop the screen door slamming!" And then he saw the Fox with his tail caught and the Fox howled:

"What do you mean? Letting the door slam on my tail that way? Ow! Wowchie! Wow!" And, giving his tail a yank, the Fox pulled it loose and, pushing open the door with his paw, away he ran. His tail was too sore to let him stay to nibble the bunny's ears.

"But I have discovered a way!" cried Uncle Wiggily. "Something soft, hung between the door and the side, will stop the noise. I can't have the tail of the Fox—Ah! I have it! a soft rubber ball such as the children bounce!"

No sooner said than done. Off he hopped to the one and two penny store where he bought a rubber ball. When this was fastened on the screen door, there were no more slams or bangs and Mrs. Longears was happy all the rest of the summer. And if Jack Frost will turn two dew drops into ear rings for the gold fish, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the cat bird.

PROF. G. D. FERGUSON.

KINGSTON, August 23. — Prof. George Dalrymple Ferguson, B. A., LL.D., who bore the distinction of being the oldest living graduate of Queen's University, and the oldest minister in the Presbyterian Church, and who was besides the first professor to be appointed at the Royal Military College, passed away at his home, Bagot street, at 8 o'clock on Saturday morning, after a short illness. He was in his 97th year.

MRS. SUSAN WEBBER.

CAMPBELLFORD, August 23. — The death occurred on Wednesday, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George McConnell, of Asphodel, of Mrs. Susan Webber, in her 91st year. The late Mrs. Webber was born in Norfolk, England, daughter of James and Mary Yarhams, and came to Canada when about four years of age. They settled in Lakeport for some time, later moving to Colborne, where she remained until her marriage. Her married life was spent on a farm in Seymour Township, later moving to Campbellford. Her husband predeceased her ten years ago. Mrs. Webber was a lifelong member of the Methodist Church.

She leaves to mourn her loss two daughters, Mrs. George McConnell, of Asphodel, and Mrs. Ben Hopps of Seymour; two grandsons, Fred. Phillips of town and Albert McConnell of Asphodel, and four great-grandchildren: Mrs. Carl Sloggett, John Phillips, George McConnell, and J. Hopps. Two daughters, Mrs. John Phillips and Miss Margaret Webber, died several years ago.

The funeral service was conducted at the home by the Rev. W. B Tucker, assisted by Rev. Mr. Moir, pastor of the Westwood circuit. Mr. Tucker, as a personal friend, spoke highly of the late Mr. and Mrs. Webber. He said that a life lived as well and as conscientiously as Mrs. Webber's was surely an excellent example for the younger generation, and that to know her was a privilege.

Interment was made in Mount Pleasant Cemetery, Campbellford.

The flowers were beautiful and showed the esteem in which the deceased was held.

Many friends were present from Peterboro, Keene, Otonabee and Colborne.

1100 Days vs. 600 Days

Mr. Bennett, mill superintendent for the Cobalt Reduction Company, had never felt very happy about this bucket elevator. It was a "belt hog." Carrying ore with a 5 to 1 dilution of slime and water, it used up an 8 ply belt in 600 days or less. 600 days was the best record.

Then he decided to try the Goodyear Belt recommended by Mr. Dodge, Goodyear salesman.

It is a seven ply belt. But up to June 11th, this year, when Mr. Bennett gave us his last report, it had seen 1100 days of service—24 hours a day, 7 days a week. It had elevated 412,500 tons of wet ore. And it was still running.

It is such incidents as this—cutting belt costs to less than half, insuring dependable, continuous service which are bringing industry more and more to Goodyear Belts.

For the same principles of construction, the same quality of materials, the same skill in building go into every Goodyear Belt—conveyor or transmission, large or small, for factory, farm, mine or mill.

Goodyear builds a belt or a hose or a packing or a valve specially to meet each problem of industry. Leafs Gain Lead When Baltimore Loses Double-Header to Syracuse

FIREMEN WIN FIRST OF SERIES BEATING KINGSTON FRONTENACS 16-10 IN FAST SOFTBALL GAME

Local Champions Beat Winners of Kingston League Without Trouble

GOOD PITCHING

Dunkerley, for Winners, Has Fourteen Strikeouts—Opponent Wild

Playing almost airtight ball and hitting hard behind good pitching by their veteran hurler, the Firemen, champions of the Peterborough Men's Softball Association, defeated the Frontenac Regiment team, 16-10, in the first game of the O.A.S.A. playoffs here on Saturday. The visitors won the championship of the Kingston league and the second game will be played in the Limestone City tomorrow evening.

Saturday nights game was played in the Armories. Originally scheduled for the afternoon at Riverside Park, the continual downpour of Saturday made it necessary to postpone the game until the evening and to play on the indoor diamond in the drill hall. As a result the rival outfields had little chance to show their worth and many long flies hit the walls for safe hits which would have been easy outs in the open.

A large crowd gathered in the Armories, filling both galleries and all the space back of the plate, and giving the umpires and Firemen a busy time keeping them off the base lines.

Dunkerly's Good Work.

Joe Dunkerly was the hero of the game. The Firemen's hurler turned back fourteen of the visitors on strikes and held them to ten scattered hits. He drove in three runs and scored two more himself, having a perfect batting average, with two triples, a double, a single, and a walk in five appearances at the plate. He was given airtight support by his team mates, who added encouragement by compiling enough runs to give him a good lead to work on. Dobson, behind the bat, held the pitcher up well.

Watts pitched for the visitors. He was able to strike out only three batsmen and most of the five walks he issued came at inopportune moments. He didn't get the best of assistance, Montgomery, who started to catch, being particularly weak.

Fielding features were rare, although Weese and Purdy made fine pickups of sizzling grounders. Every infielder made some good stops and some of them made some bad ones. Only one fly was caught in the outfield all evening.

Well-known as a rugby player, "Liz" Walker appeared before Peterborough fans in a different role on Saturday, acting as umpire at the plate. He gave the pitchers every possible benefit in the matter of balls and strikes, especially on low ones across the plate, but called three similar plays in a manner that brought out strenuous objections. Balls which were hit down in front of the plate, just outside the foul line, but which rolled in he called foul, although the rule book distinctly states such hits to be fair. Alex Kay and Edgar LeBarr of Peterborough officiated on the bases.

How They Scored.

The visitors opened strong and it looked as if Dunkerly was having an off-night. S. Richards walked and Burke singled. The two pulled off a delayed double steal that made Dobson look bad and advanced on a passed ball. H. Richards was walked and stole second. Burke scored on Purdy's liner which hit a window and bounded back to Gimblett for an out. H. Richards scored on Stagg's grounder to the box. Montgomery singled but was forced by McCullough.

The Firemen quickly got the runs back. McNeely walked and scored on Westbrooke's double. The hitter took third on an error by Reid and scored on a grounder to the box by Weese. Nicholls was safe on error and took second on a passed ball. He scored on Crary's double. Crary stole third but was doubled when Gimblett lined to H. Richards.

The visitors got a hit but no runs in their half of the second. The home team had one man on but he was nipped off first. It was the only hitless inning for the Firemen.

The visitors got three more in the third. H. Richards and Purdy singled and scored on Stagg's double. Crary fumbled the hit long enough to let the hitter score. The next three men were easy out.

The Big Inning.

The Firemen got all three back and four more to pile up a lead that was never cut down. McNeely walked and stole second and third. Westbrooke struck out but was safe on the catcher's error. He stole second and Weese walked, filling the sacks. Nicholls slammed out a triple to tie the score and scored himself on a passed ball. Crary was safe on S. Richards' error and moved up on a wild pitch. He stole third and scored on Gimblett's double. Gimblett went to third on a wild pitch and scored after the catch of Delahaye's fly, the only one to be caught by an outfielder. Dobson was safe on an error and moved up on successive wild pitches to third scoring from there when Dunkerly tripled. The pitcher was stranded when McNeely struck out and Westbrooke hit to the box.

Dunkerly struck out four of the seven batsmen to face him in the fourth and fifth innings. S. Richards started the fourth with a single but a grounder and two strikeouts ended the inning, while nobody got on in the visitors' fifth.

The home team scored three runs in the two innings. In the fourth, after two were out, Crary was safe on an error and stole second and third. He scored on Gimblett's single. Delahaye followed with another single but H. Richards made a fine running catch to rob Dobson of a hit. Dunkerly started the fifth with a single. A wild pitch put him on second and then McNeely walked for the third time in the game. Westbrooke sacrificed neatly and a wild pitch let Dunkerly in. A play was made to the plate on a grounder by Weese, but was too late to get the runner. Nicholls forced Weese and was himself forced by Crary.

The Frontenacs made two in the sixth. Watts singled, but Reid forced him. S. Richards walked and the two advanced on a wild pitch. Burke struck out and S. Richards singled to score Reid and S. Richards. He took second on the throw to the plate but was caught when he tried to go on to third.

The Firemen got one. With two out Dobson doubled and Dunkerly tripled. H. Richards, who had moved in to catch, caught McNeely's foul fly.

Two more for the Frontenacs came in the seventh. Purdy struck out but Stagg was safe on an error and stole second. Singles by Montgomery and VanEllery, who batted for McCullough, sent in Stagg, and Montgomery scored on Watts' grounder. Reid struck out.

The home team was scoreless. Westbrook and Weese went out on grounders. Nicholls and Crary singled but Gimblett flied to Mongtomery.

S. Richards led off in the eighth with a triple but stood on the base and watched Burke, H. Richards, and Purdy fan.

The Peterborough boys scored two. With one out, Dobson singled and Dunkerly doubled. McNeely lifted to the box, but Westbrooke doubled to score the pitcher with the last run of the game. Weese singled on a hot one which Montgomery knocked down. Westbrooke tried to score from second on the hit and was out at the plate.

The ninth was soon over. Stagg singled and stole second. He went to third on a wild pitch but Montgomery and VanEllery struck out and Watts popped to Westbrooke.

CARDS ADVANCE FRACTION POINT OF LEADERSHIP

St. Louis Wins Eighth Consecutive Victory from the Giants

THIRD OF SERIES

Giants' Errors Accounted for Cardinals' Runs—Bell Knocks Homer

NEW YORK, Aug. 23 (Canadian Press).—The St. Louis Cardinals yesterday won their eighth consecutive victory and advanced within a fraction of a per centage point of the National League leadership when they took the third of the series from the New York Giants, 4 to 2. Giant errors accounted for the Cardinal runs with the exception of a home run by Bell.

Manager John J. McGraw, of the Giants, indefinitely suspended Captain Frankie Frisch, second sacker, because he left the club Saturday without permission. He arrived in New York late yesterday and declared his reasons for absenting himself from the team at St. Louis was due to poor health which was chiefly due to trouble with his legs.

"There's nothing else to it," he said. "I didn't have any run in with McGraw and have nothing to say regarding my suspension." Travers Jackson is acting captain of the Giants. Baseball writers have criticized Frisch's playing throughout the season and he has been fined several times for not running out infield drives.

The Brooklyn defence went to pieces in the eigth inning and Chicago scored three runs to shut out the Dodgers, 3 to 0. The Brooklyn team contributed three errors in the eighth which, with a base on balls and two hits, netted three runs. Manager Robinson of the Dodgers has released "Rabbit" Maranville as a move towards a youthful majority on the Brooklyn roster next year.

Cincinnati took two extra inning games from Boston, and made it a clean sweep of the series by winning the first game, 4 to 3 in 10 innings, and the second, 7 to 6 in 12 innings. The second game was a subbornly fought battle, which the Reds won in the 12th round by scoring two runs when Burrus muffed Critz's pop fly.

RUGBY SUCCESSES IN PETERBOROUGH

Short Sketch Taken from Publication of Canadian Rugby Union

It has been quite a number of years since a winning rugby team has been produced in Peterborough, but there is no doubt that if public support was given in two or three years rugby teams could be produced with the same success as our hockey teams of the past few years. There is no doubt that there are the players here to turn out good teams if they would come out and if public interest would only get behind the situation and boost.

A short sketch of some of the championship teams, taken from the official publication of the Canadian Rugby Union, which includes every recognized rugby union in Canada, including the Ontario Rugby-Football Union in which Peterborough teams play, may bring back pleasant memories of the old days when Peterborough teams were a force to contend with. It may also encourage these old players and old fans to get out and push behind the budding growth for more rugby here, for with more support it can be done. There are both the players and the supporters here to put it over.

In the senior series for the championship of the Canadian Rugby Union, Peterborough won the O. R. F. U. championship in 1907, and then won the next game from Ottawa University (intercollegiate champions) by default. In the finals of the C. R. U., they lost the championship of Canada to Montreal.

In the intermediate series, Peterborough won the championship of Canada in 1899 by winning first the O. R. F. U. and then beating Westmount (Quebec champions) in the finals. In 1901, Peterborough again repeated their success, this time beating Quebec (Quebec champions). In 1902 Peterborough won the O. R. F. U. championship but lost out to their old rivals, Quebec, in the Canadian finals.

In the interscholastic series, Peterborough has been well represented by good P. C. I. teams of recent years. In 1924 the P. C. I. were in the finals of this series but lost out in a game in Hamilton. In 1922 and 1923 they again shot high and only lost out in each case in the semi-finals to the team which, in the next game, won the championship.

So, with these past successes to inspire you, why not get behind rugby in Peterborough and come to the meeting at 8 o'clock on Wednesday, August 25, at the Y. M. C. A.

PETERBORO BOWLERS WIN THE WIGGINS CUP AT CAMPBELLFORD

Tom Curvin's Rink Won 13-10 Victory Over Cobourg Team

RECEIVE PRIZES

A. J. Meyers Trophy Went to Campbellford for Coming Year

(Examiner Corespondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 23. — Peterborough and Warkworth bowlers will continue in possession of two of Campbellford's bowling trophies for another year. They simply exchanged the A. J. Meyers and W. S. Wiggin's cups as a result of Friday's tournament. The complete scores from preliminary round to the final in the primary competition, for the Meyers trophy, in which C. Smith's rink of Warkworth defeated George Cairns of Peterborough by 16 to 10, have been reported.

After the Meyers Cup finals late Friday evening, the surviving rinks in the Wiggin's trophy competition battled through to the final that gave Tom Curvin's Peterborough rink a 13 to 10 victory over F. J. Skitch of Cobourg. In the semi-finals Curvin had eliminated A. G. Dawson of Port Hope by 15 to 7, and Skitch swung the gate for Bily Oke of Port Hope by 12 to 9.

The Curvin rink composed of Jack Wise, J. J. Howden, Jack Bacon and T. E. Curvin received motor rugs, and the second prizes to Skitch's rink were sets of Rogers' teaspoons.

Last year Curvin won the Meyers cup, and C. Smith of Warkworth the Wiggin's cup. Friday's tournament found them again successful finalists and cup winners, except that Smith annexed the Meyers' trophy. The circumstance of the results during the last two years is an unusual co-incidence, and indicates the ability of the winning quartettes. Peterborough made a bid for the Meyers' cup, but George Cairns and his rink started badly in the final game with Smith. Two of the three Peterborough entries finished in the money.

J. R. Wilkinson of the local club and W. DeLany of Cobourg shared the prizes of eight tins of cigarettes in a supplementary competition. Wilkinson was assisted by R. S. Smith as vice, George Ironsides second, and C. E. Wragg lead.

HOW TO SWIM

by Lillian Cannon

With breathing perfected, the arm stroke running naturally and the kicks fast and regular, the beginner can really begin the crawl.

The three things to be synchronized will not become so in a day, but the whole thing requires practice.

The fact that one swims the crawl, after a fashion, does not mean he has attained the racing stroke.

The kicks, breathing and arms must move with mathematical precision and until they do move with mathematical precision the best results will not be obtained.

The one suggestion to be given is to get the counts accurately and stick to these counts as closely as possible until real championship speed is attained.

DIAMOND DISPUTES

When must the team in the field call the umpire's attention to a batting-out-of-order play?

* * *

For the team in the field to profit by a batting-out-of-order play, it should first permit the improper batsman to be retired or hit safely.

After the improper batsman has done so, the team in the field should call the attention of the umpire to the slip. This must be done before a ball is pitched to the succeeding batsman.

The umpire shall then inflict the correct penalty by calling the proper batsman out.

COGS MUST WIN GAME TO-NIGHT

Winner Of Series To Meet Lindsay, Probably on Thursday.

The third game of the Cognawaga-Crescent series will be played at the Exhibition park this evening at 5.30 o'clock. Crescents have a game in the bag and can win the title by taking this contest. The Cogs, who have been playing great ball, will enter the fray with plenty of confidence, and it would be no surprise to see them pull out with a win. In the event of another game being found necessary, the teams will play again on Wednesday.

Arrangements are under way to have the winner meet Lindsay in a sudden-death game on Thursday.

PLAYERS FAIL TO APPEAR IN GORDON FINAL

Referee Decides Against Playing — Only Seven Men in Each Team

MISERABLE WEATHER

Encourage Dribbling Code Among Boys of the City and Schools

The deluge of rain accompanied by very strong winds on Saturday caused a percentage of each soccer team that were to play in the Gordon cup final on Nicholls Oval in the afternoon to put in a non-appearance when the kick-off hour was scheduled. No doubt the early part of the day was no criterion that a game would be played which was indicated by the Quakers and the Thistle being four men short in each eleven.

The players who turned up were agreeable to play but the referee made a final decision when he stated that it would be only a farce to play a final of any cup tie without a full quota of players. His action is of a "real sport," in the full sense of the word. It would also be a failure from a financial point of view, which has to be considered.

The playing pitch was in the very best of condition, except in the locality of the goal posts, but this did not prevent a number of enthusiasts from participating in a practice game.

A meeting of the executive will be held on Tuesday evening at Dan Campbell's home, at 228 Westcott St. when the referee's report will be received and considered.

Encourage Soccer.

During the past few weeks in many papers throughout Canada soccer has been discussed from the younger boys' point of view, and at a recent meeting in Tornoto, the officials of the O.F.A. asked for the assistance from legislators, club officials and players, for greater efforts to stimulate interest in the sport among the young was opportune, as the youngsters are about to set on another whirl. As one speaker put it, the great objective is to have the boys on every street corner playing the game. Of course the one big obstacle still to be surmounted is the keeping of interest in the game in the boys after they leave school.

Last year the Queen Alexandra school team carried off the public school championship, after a tie game by the odd goal, and it is anticipated that the usual activities of the school teachers in the soccer code will receive their attention when the fall session opens.

A number of the Central School boys have kept in the game through the juvenile league two from Prince of Wales and four from the Queen Alexandra team. But the Junior league has been missed this season by a lot of eligible players between the two stages—juvenile and senior. There are a few who have learned the dribbling code in this city, viz., Grant James, Halliday and T. Montgomery, of Masseys, the latter being considered one of the smartest goal-keepers in the senior league. Johnny Ward and Joe Mayette of the Thistle both learned the game here. The Quaker Oats does not contain a junior from the lower company, who received the rudiments of the pigskin in this district.

Youth Wins Out.

In the recent five-aside competition youth dominated the situation throughout the tussle, when three juveniles, Gravette, Cravell and Watkins of DeLaval Juveniles, along with Cross and Fowler, DeLaval Seniors made a stro. five.

Juveniles' Progress.

Throughout the season the DeLavals, last year's champions, have carried off the honors, so far this year, with Jones, DeLaval, leading the scoring list with nine goals to his credit with "Newt" Downer coming next with 3 goals; also Dyer and Gravette, DeLaval, in the sai. total.

In the Toronto public schools no less than 134 teams were in action, while in the city schools only six teams participated in a two schedule game in the final. Why not inaugurate a second division league in the schools so as to fotser the game and make good players for the higher grade.

The success or failure of the game in the Dominion depends on keeping the youngsters of to-day keyed up, for it may not always be possible to depend on immigration for new blood.

GAIN ONE POINT BY VIRTUE OF INDECISIVE GAME

Rangers Continue to Hold First Place in Scottish League

GLASGOW, August 23 (Canadian Press).—Securing one point from the Airdrieonians by virtue of the indecisive contest at Airdrie Saturday, the Rangers continued to hold first place in the Senior Division of the Scottish Football League, but in such a position as to face dethronement at any moment. A solid block of five undefeated teams, Dundee, Motherwell, St. Mirren, Celtic and Morton, are following close on the heels of the leaders, whose position was gained as a result of their mid-week game with Dunfermline, when they subdued the former second string club by two goals to nothing.

The season has not advanced sufficiently to endow any of the present encounters with much interest but the fortunes of the Cup-holders, the Celtic, will be greatly followed. Celtic made it two straight when they obtained the margin over Cowdenbeath, coming as it did on the top of their win over Kilmarnock a week ago. This last-named team are one of the four who have not yet registered a point, the others being Queen's Park, Dundee United and Dunfermline.

Honors were fairly easy as between home and away teams on Saturday, with five securing victories on their own ground and four on visiting territory; one game was drawn.

Some heavy scoring took place in the game at Partick, where Greenock Morton obtained an edge on the Thistle by the odd goal in nine, while at Aberdeen seven goals were scored, a couple only of these going to Clyde and the remainder to the home team. Airdrie divided six six goals evenly with the Rangers.

JAPAN WINS THE FINAL ROUNDS OF ZONE DAVIS CUP

Takes Laurels from Cubans Without Loss of Single Set

FIVE MATCHES

Sekio Tawara, Tennis Champion for Japan Is Star Player

MONTREAL, Que., August 23.—(Canadian Press).—Japan swept the five matches of the American zone Davis Cup final round with Cuba, taking the laurels without the loss of a single set to the representatives from the south, winning all contests in three straight sets. The Japanese concluded their triumphant march on the Mount Royal Tennis Club courts Saturday afternoon when Sekio Tawara defeated Rogelio Paris, 6-2, 6-0, 6-2, and ending the tennis parade when Teijo Toba, substituting for Takeioni Harada, downed Dr. Vicente Banet, 6-2, 6-2, 6-3.

Sekio Tawara, the youthful but sturdy player from the Imperial University, Tokyo, holder of the tennis championship of Japan, gave an excellent display against Rogelio Paris, the Cuban captain. The Japanese titleholder player mostly from the back court, and in a series of volleys with Paris, either forced the Cuban out of position to score on clever placements or else forced Paris to backhand his returns into the net. The latter lacked spirit in his play, frequently making no attempt to go after the strokes down the side lines.

Dr. Banet, a terrific driver on the courts, made a better stand against Teijo Toba, but the Cuban lacked the finishing touch to his strokes which marked his singles game last Thursday again Tawara. He frequently drove into the net in his efforts to return the vicious volleys of Toba.

In an exhibition match, which followed the two singles, Zenzo Shimizu, Japanese team captain, and C. W. Aikman, of the Mount Royal Tennis Club, defeated Takeichi Harada, ranking star of the Japanese team, and R. M. Watt, chairman of the Davis Cup Committee.

LIBERAL POLICY IS EULOGIZED BY THREE SPEAKERS

J. Wearing Says Byng Thought Canada Was Colony

TORY GESTURE

R. R. Hall and J. J. Duffus Criticize the Record of Arthur Meighen

That Lord Byng made an error in refusing the dissolution asked by Mackenzie King — an error which arose from his supposition that Canadians were still a subject people and Canada a Crown colony, was the opinion expressed by Joseph Wearing, addressing the enthusiastic rally of Liberal supporters in the Duffus building on Saturday evening. While fully recognizing the splendid services of Lord Byng to the Empire, Mr. Wearing asserted that Lord Byng was under the impression that he was living in the days of 75 years ago, when Governors, usually good old Tories, were sent out from England, and that the Governor-General thought he was merely making the usual Tory gesture in refusing to accept the advice of a Liberal Prime Minister. It simply meant that it was merely a kind of fiction to claim that Canada was a self-governing Dominion, and meant that Canada was still governed to some extent at least from Downing Street. If the Governor-General, in touch with Parliamentary affairs as he was, did not know that Mr. Meighen could not possibly carry on a Government, then he ought not to have been there, and the sooner they got some one other than Lord Byng the better. Mr. Wearing said he maintained this stand without any disparagement of the renown of Lord Byng. Who was the proper judge of the propriety of Mr. King's dissolution request—the Governor-General or the people at the polls? Mr. Wearing concluded by eulogizing the candidate and urging all Liberal sympathizers to rouse the indifferent voters and secure their votes for Mr. Duffus to ensure his return on September 14.

R. R. Hall, K.C., in a speech that fairly bristled with facts and figures, contrasted the record of Mr. Meighen in office with that of Mr. King in office. The acid test, he said, was not "What does he say," but "Tell me what he has done."

Both leaders had been twice Premier, Mr. King with the consent of the electors, Mr. Meighen never with the consent of the electors. Mr. Hall expressed the opinion that Mr. Meighen never would achieve office by the will of the electorate.

A Conservative, Sir Arthur Currie, commander of the Canadian troops in France, in a speech at Montreal, brought an arraignment of waste and extravagance against the Conservative Government under Sir Robert Borden as Premier, with Mr. Meighen as his chief lieutenant, and later under the Premiership of Mr. Meighen himself, after Sir Robert's retiral. The grand total of the unnecessary and wasteful expenditure amounted to 494 millions, one-fifth of the national debt, costing the country $25,000,000 per annum. On the other hand, the King Government converted an annual increase of the national debt into a surplus, reduced taxation to the extent of 114 million in four years.

Canada was a magnificent inheritance left to Canadians, and it was necessary that they should have Ministers in whom they had confidence. Having weighed Mr. Meighen in the balance and found him wanting, it was their duty to return Mr. King to power and to elect Mr. Duffus as representative for West Peterboro.

The candidate, who referred to the loss sustained by Liberalism through the death of George Jobbitt, explained the plans that had been adopted to perfect the party's electoral organization.

He criticized Mr. Meighen's selection as Cabinet Ministers of men who had been expelled from the party by Sir Robert Borden. Mr. Meighen had promised stable government, but one wondered what kind of "stable" to which he referred. It looked like a gypsy stable, for Mr. Meighen was changing his mind all the time.

Three hearty cheers for the candidate and for Mackenzie King concluded the gathering.

J. J. Hartley, president of the Association, occupied the chair.

CONSERVATIVES OUTLINE PLANS FOR CAMPAIGN

One Present Issue Is Exodus of Canadians to the States

FIVE SPEAKERS

Canada's Only Solution Is Placing Staple Government in Power

An enthusiastic rally was held in the committee rooms of the Conservative party on Saturday night in support of E. A. Peck, the candidate in the coming election. V. J. McElderry, president of the local association, occupied the chair. E. A. Peck, W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P.; J. F. Strickland, R. J. Soden, and D. G. Melton addressed the meeting.

V. J. McElderry

In his opening remarks, Mr. McElderry declared "We have a real fight this time. We have a clever industrious business man as our opponent, and we will have to get out and work to make the campaign a success." The speaker outlined the reasons for the present election, stating that while the Conservatives had 115 members, Mackenzie King who had only 101 members was enabled with the help of 24 Progressives, two Independent Liberals, and two Labor members, was enabled to carry on.

P. P. Sparks, of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, had been carrying on an investigation of the Customs department, he said. Mr. Sparks found that smuggling was going on and brought the matter to the attention of the Government on many occasions. Finally, he said, the scandal became noisesome and the Progressives who had obtained practically everything they wanted, bolted from the government ranks and consequently the Mackenzie King government was faced by a vote of censure. Mackenzie King endeavored to obtain a ruling that would enable him to dissolve parliament without facing this vote of censure.

The other issues in the campaign, he declared, were those that were dealt with so exhaustively during the last election. The country was still losing thousands of its best citizens to the United States and the industries were still crippled because of the low tariff, he said. The only alleviation of the situation was the Robb budget—it was well named, he declared, as it had only helped to rob capital and labor of its confidence in the country.

E. A. Peck

Since my nomination, a new candidate has come into the field; a prominent business man and a fair opponent," said Mr. Peck. As far as he was concerned, said Mr. Peck, the campaign would be carried on in a clean manner, with no personal issues between himself and his opponent.

There were two issues before the people, he declared. On was labor conditions, and the other was the exodus of Canadian born citizens to the United States. These were the issues at the last election and they were equally important now, he declared. Conditions had not improved, and labor still needed protection, he maintained. Mr. Peck dealth with the question of imports and exports at some length, showing that different commodities, in his opinion, should be manufactured here instead of being imported to the detriment of Canadian labor. He expressed the opinion that three-quarters of the people in the Dominion were in favor of the protective principle. Referring to the Stevens' charges in connection with the Customs Department, Mr. Peck stated that the committee dealing with these charges had brought in a report condemning the government for its negligence in this respect. "The knowledge of this condition of affairs was thoroughly known to Mackenzie King long before the Stevens' charges," he declared, "for the Canadian Manufacturers' Association had brought the matter to his attention in June, 1923."

"The Progressive party certainly showed no sympathy toward the Conservative party, judging from the way they voted, yet several of them broke away and voted with the Conservatives due to this scandal," he declared.

The solution of the problem was, in his opinion, to put in a government that would be stable and maintain clean records.

W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P.

Mr. Bradburn declared that he had no doubt but that Mr. Peck would do as well this time as before. Last year, he said, the people heard a great deal about the tariff and the number of people who were leaving this country for the United States. The same conditions exist today, he declared, "we must elect a government that will put on a tariff sufficiently high to take care of the working man." Mr. Duffus, he declared, was a good business man but he was on the wrong track. The Robb budget, which Mr. Duffus characterizes as a wonderful budget, may be a good thing, but where does it benefit the working man. "If the government had taken off the sales tax which affects every man and woman in the country, they would have been doing something worth while," he declared.

R. J. Soden

"This is a time to do some hard work and make assurance doubly sure that Mr. Peck will be re-elected," declared Mr. Soden. "This country, in his opinion, was the best country in the world, but in spite of that and the many resources which it had, thousands of its citizens were going to the United States to earn their living, he declared. "Mr. King tells you the country is prosperous—he tells you to look at the Canadian dollar—that it is above par. He explained how, in his opinion, this could be said of the Canadian dollar. "If a man has a 200 acre farm and each year clears enough money to pay for his cost of living. That man will break even, he said. But supposing that the man wants a bank balance and sells five acres of the farm, he will have the money. If this was kept up for a period of time the man would have a bank balance, but he would have no farm," he declared. Canada had in her hands the bread of the world and with the proper administration she could sell it anywhere she chose, he said. There was only one policy for the country, he said, "Wherever we have an abundance of raw material let us keep it in Canada and give our laborers work."

To the Editor of The Examiner—

Sir,—Why can't we have in Peterborough, the leading centre of population and industry in that great valley known as the valley of the Trent, someone or more who are able and willing to take up vigorously the question of completing the Trent Canal by having it opened at both ends?

Moreover this matter is of vital interest to this city. The Quaker Oats Co. here has developed a tremendous flour trade and the rail-freight on grain from Midland, etc., to Peterborough is so much greater than it would be if the canal were opened at the upper end that a very severe handicap is placed on The Quaker Co. in Peterborough in its flour competition with the great mills at Montreal and elsewhere receiving as they do the benefit of a through Welland canal system from the West. It cannot be expected that this Company which came here because of the then immediate prospect of a canal service will put up with this impossible handicap much longer. Last session was the first session of parliament that I know of in which no appropriation large or small was made towards the completion of the T.V.C. This marks the low water mark of Peterborough's energy and enterprise.

It is nonsense to say that a member from any of the 43 ridings tributary to the canal basin cannot do anything for this enterprise unless the government is sympathetic politically with him or them. As a matter of fact an Opposition member has an advantage. A government supporter hesitates to attack his own government for delinquency in that respect but nothing stands in the way of an opposition member. Perhaps I may be allowed to give some of my own experience also. One year when I was urging such an appropriation the minister put it on the list but warned me that I would have to defend it when the time came. When the day came a whole avalanche of Montreal district members attacked the project just as they did last session, and demanded that the money go to the Welland, etc. I had a vast lot of information on hand at that time and put up such a vigorous fight that my opponents were taken by surprise and gave way. We got the appropriation. This sort of thing occurs frequently. The T. V. C. has a host of enemies and apparently no friends. A concerted movement by Trent Valley members would mighty soon result in the completion of this work. Last session so bold and determined were the opponents of the canal that they described it in the most savage terms as a fake and even a menace and demanded that no further appropriations for its completion should be made and they got away with it. Not one word was said in defence of the canal.

What are we trying to do? To go to the wall in this great industrial district altogether and to lose some of our great industries instead of gaining more? No candidate should be elected who cannot or will not make it his lifework to press this matter to a finish. The new Welland canal has just been completed at a cost of $115,000,000 and at a depth of 25 feet but the St. Lawrence canals are as yet only 14 feet. Whilst this great through waterway is a great and necessary enterprise the transhipment of grain to smaller boats at Kingston is still a necessity and why, I would like to know, can we not have the transhipment of grain made at Midland, etc., in the same way with Peterborough as a milling centre? We seem to be content with a sort of pussy-in-the-corner style of living just now. Have we lost our former daring, our enterprise and our energy? New Brunswick has just opened new $50,000,000 waterpower system. It is built and owned by a private company with rates controlled by the province. As the prime minister of that province said New Brunswick instead of using its own capital to check private enterprise secured a huge private corporation of Americans which has brought in an immense outside capital into the province with the admirable results which we might expect. This company not only brought in this huge sum of outside capital but it is interested in developing customers for its power, a state of things in marked contrast to the Hydro project in Ontario and to the positive collapse of industry in Eastern Ontario. We must find some big men somewhere to represent us or we shall go down and out as we are certainly doing now. That we should fail to get any appropriation whatever towards the completion of our waterway is in ominous contrast to the energy displayed on the Welland route.

KING NOT CONCERNED.

George of Greece Not Expecting Restoration of Monarchy.

ATHENS, Aug. 23.— (Canadian Press.)— It is said here there is nothing to suggest that the revolution headed by General Condylis, which overthrew Theodorus Pangalos was actuated by a desire to restore the monarchy of King George, who for some time has been in England. He is reported to have been watching events in Greece with keen interest, but it is not credited with having any idea of a new monarchial movement which would be likely to lead to an invitation to him to return to Greece.

General Pangalos and those responsible for the iron handed methods of his regime, will be tried by a commission which is to be appointed to fix their responsibility.

TOO MANY RUGS IMPORTED SAYS MR. IVOR BROCK

Rotary Speaker Deprecates Bringing in Worthless Oriental Rugs.

CARPET WEAVING.

Egypt Was the Cradle of the Industry Rotarians Are Told.

"Last year a million dollars' worth of Oriental carpets was imported into Canada," declared Mr. Ivor Brock of the Brinton Carpet Company, in addressing the Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon at the Empress to-day.

"Neither Canadian manufacturers, nor anybody else, would object to bringing in some of these rugs," he continued. "A portion of these importations consisted of beautiful things, and if you could afford to have one in your home, you'd be foolish not to have one.

"But a great part consisted of inferior stuff made of impure and often unclean material and terrible in design. The magic label "Oriental" was used to sell them in preference to good domestic carpets."

Mr. Brock's address on the history of carpet making was full of interest. He pointed out that the art of carpet weaving was first developed in Egypt, although strangely enough, most of the figures used in the first designs were found to have originated in Yucatan.

The speaker traced the development of carpet weaving through the various stages, speaking of the development of the Brussels and Wilton and Axminster carpets, and of the progress of the industries in Canada, where Brussels and Wiltons had been manufactured for some twenty-five or thirty years.

Referring to the difficulties of starting a new industry, Mr. Brock said that he was not advertising but that there was a carpet being manufactured in Peterboro that was not a Brussels, not a Wilton, and not an Axminster, but that in luxuriousness and beauty surpassed anything made in the Dominion.

Canadian carpet factories had not been as busy during the past two years as they should have been, the speaker declared, giving as the reason the importation of foreign-made carpets against which Canadian manufacturers could not compete because of the low wages paid in the countries from which importations were made, and because of the exchange situation.

In concluding his address Mr. Brock said that he was glad to hear that Rotary was to discuss business ethics and made an earnest plea for more fairness and more general application of the Golden Rule in business.

The speaker was introduced by Rotarian S. R. Armstrong, and at the conclusion of his address a hearty vote of thanks was moved by Rotarian W. R. Morris.

Past President J. H. Seels who presided to-day, urged Rotarians to visit the Boys' Camp during the present week and take an interest in Rotary's "Learn to Swim" campaign.

NEW TORONTO, Aug. 23 (Canadian Press). — Six-year-old Helen Simons of Peterborough, who is visiting friends at 48 Seventh Street, New Toronto, received lacerations to her left arm, left leg and head this morning when she was struck by a motor car driven by Thomas Bragg, opposite Stop 8 on the Toronto-Hamilton Highway. After being attended to by Dr. Roberts, she was permitted to go home.

On investigating the case, Acting Chief of Police Weatherup found that the child, while playing with a number of other children, had dashed onto the highway.

DIOCESAN PILGRIMAGE TO SHRINE OF MARTYRS OF FORT STE. MARIE.

a short distance away, where ruins of the original buildings may yet be seen, returning in time for Benediction at half-past three o'clock, when a special blessing with the Sacred Monstrance, was given to the sick people who attended the pilgrimage in numbers. The train left the Fort at half-past five o'clock, arriving in the city shortly before nine o'clock.

After words of welcome, voiced by Rev. T. J. Lally, S.J., Director at the Shrine, who expressed the regret of Rev. Father Filion, Provincial of the Order, at being prevented from illness from being present, Pontifical High Mass was celebrated by His Lordship, Bishop O'Brien, assisted by Rt. Rev. Monsignor McColl as High Priest, Rev. J. McAuley of Ennismore as deacon, and Rev. V. Morrison, S.J., of St. Boniface, as sub-deacon. Present in the sanctuary were Rt. Rev. Monsignor Kelly of Cobourg, Rev. P. McGuire and Rev. P. Costello. Members of the Jusuit Order present, who live during the summer months in a small house adjoining the church, which is closed during the winter, included Rev. Bouvrette of Wauhashene, Rev. E. J. Devine, S.J., of Toronto, Rev. J. McGarry of Toronto, Rev. M. M. McNeill of Guelph, who contributed some very beautiful vocal solos to the services, and Rev. T. J. Lally of Guelph. Charles Kay acted as the Bishop's train-bearer, and acolytes for the Mass were B. Welsh, E. Grant, F. Grant, E. Wolff and J. Nolan. Rev. Father Finn accompanied the choir, which was augmented by members from the choirs of the Sacred Heart and Immaculate Conception Churches, and which sang in excellent voice the Mass by M. E. Downey and also the Benediction music, with Miss Hurley at the organ and Mr. J. Minicolo leading. Rev. Father Morrison and Rev. Father McAuley also assisted His Lordship at Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, when the devotional atmosphere which marked every step of this, the first officially organized Diocesan Pilgrimage to the Shrine of Fort Ste. Marie, seemed more marked than ever, the voices of the throng who filled every inch of the big church, rising loudly in invocations to the Blessed Martyrs.

Rev. E. J. Devine, S.J., of Toronto, Editor of the Canadian Messenger, gave the sermon, an eloquent brief resume of the work and sufferings of the early Martyrs whose memory is commemorated in this Shrine. He spoke of their labors in the cause of Christianity, their torture and death and of the final renunciation by their followers of the work among the Indians and subsequent withdrawl to Quebec, where relics of the Jesuit martyrs are preserved in the village of Lorette. He also spoke of the ceremonies of Beatification which took place in Rome last year, and of the hope for the early canonization of these pioneers of the Cross in the Dominion of Canada.

The new church of Fort Ste. Marie, with a seating capacity of fifteen hundred people, is well worth a brief description. It is not a wonderful or expensive structure, but the whole building seems to be appropriate in the extreme to its surroundings and to the atmosphere of the place. A more pretentious church would spoil the memories of these men whose later lives were passed in rude dwelling, and whose spirit still seems to linger over the hills and valleys of this Huron land of long ago.

Twenty-three steps lead to the brow of the hill whose ascent is approached by a steep slope, and here, rising triumphant to gaze far over the surrounding country is the Flemish-Gothic structure of grey stone, the Longford stone from Orilia, with its wide entrance and windows of wine-colored glass. Flanking the doorway on either side, watchful warders of the building which rises above the scene of their long drawn out martyrdom, are figures in bronze of the two stalwarts, Rev. Jean de Brobeuef and Rev. Gabriel Lalement. On the high altar within the same two figures appear in small statues, with a central figure in a statue of St. Joseph holding the Holy Child. And in colored plaster, a noble bas-relief plaque in one of the transepts repeats the story of the martyrdom of the two priests by the ferocious Iroquois. Placed against the wall of the other transept is a large oil painting, depicting the giving of the Cross to his disciple, St. Francois Xavier, by St. Ignatius Loyala, founder of the Jesuit Order.

The entire interior of the church is uniquely covered with a stained wooden substance, based on British Columbia cottonwood. From the peak of the domed roof to the baseboards square panels of this material cover every inch of walls and ceiling. The upper panels, outlined with basswood mouldings picked out in a small golden design, are done in golden oak, while the lower sections and the sides of the square pillars are in walnut finish. The main altar and the side altars, dedicated to the Sacred Heart and the Blessed Virgin Mary, are of dark oak, as also are the pews.

One of the most beautiful portions of the church is the glasswork. Stained glass representations of different saints, with flanking small glass panels ornamented with jewel-like motifs, fill the windows on either side, while the apse is pierced by slender colored glass windows of the same type, and in the transepts are large, rose windows, filled with brilliant glass-jewels of different hues.

The Stations are extraordinary. They were the gift of Bishop Fallon of London, and each one is a large oil painting, brought from Italy, depicting scenes in Christ's passion. Above the high altar is a large oil painting of the eight Martyrs, done by Rev. Mother Nelius, of the Congregation of the Sacred Heart in Montreal. Two beautiful small statues are the ones showing the Mother of Sorrows holding her Son, after He has been taken down from the Cross, and the statue of the Little Flower, topping one of the votive stands.

Another shrine to Saint Therese of the Holy Face, the Little Flower of Lisieux, is erected on the grounds, and proved a popular point of interest for the pilgrims yesterday, while nearby are miniature fountains piped from the same spring that served the Indians and their blackrobe companions three hundred years ago. Here the Jesuit Order owns two hundred acres of land, and to the church on the hill come the people from Midland, two and one half miles away and from Port McNichol, two miles in the opposite direction. Here will come the pilgrims from Hamilton on September 5th, in the second officially organized Diocesan Pilgrimage.

HEADLIGHT TEST STARTS TONIGHT

Kiwanis Plan Has Hearty Endorsation of Chief of Police.

DIMMERS NEEDED.

Kiwanians C. Elliot and Harry Dickin were busy this afternoon making preparations for the headlight and brake-testing scheme of the club, which is to be put into operation for the first time tonight, and drivers are invited to take advantage of the facilities which will be provided.

To each driver whose car passes the test or who has made the adjustments to comply with the legal requirements, a card will be given bearing the Kiwanis emblem and stating:

This is to certify that automobile number..... has had headlights and brakes tested with the following result"—space being left for the specification of the condition of the car.

Chief of Police Samuel Newhall, who was consulted by the club soon after the idea was first taken up, said today that the Kiwanis plan had been devised just at the right time, as the number of accidents caused by glaring headlights had been greatly on the increase and action was contemplated by the police. From personal observation, he was convinced that there were little more than two dozen cars in the city having headlights that came within the section of the Highway Traffic Act.

Many of the cars in the city were not equipped with dimmers, said the chief, and the high-powered lights, which were not deflected, made things difficult for other drivers. The Chief expressed the opinion that very few motorists used their dimmers at night while passing other cars.

As an example, he mentioned that on a recent journey from Port Hope he passed no fewer than seventeen cars, not one of which reciprocated his switching on of his dimmers. He also quoted a recent instance in which, setting out in pursuit of a motorist exceeding the speed limit, he found a bad motor mix-up beyond Bewdley in which a Peterborough lady had a leg broken. The Peterborough car had stopped to make some running repairs. Another pasisng motorist had stopped to lend assistance but had failed to put out or dim his lights. The lady crossing from one car to the other was knocked down by a third car, the driver of which had been temporarily blinded by the glare of the headlights, of the man who was doing his best to help a fellow motorist in trouble.

"Properly adjusted lights," concluded the chief, "will go a long way towards reducing accidents on the road, and the action of the Kiwanis Club, will, if it meets with a good response from the motoring public, be of great assistance to the police."

WHEAT HARVEST NEEDS WARMTH

Loss in Ontario Will Be Severe If Dampness Continues.

BELOW STANDARD.

TORONTO, August 23 (Canadian Press).—The success or failure of Ontario's wheat harvest is dependent upon several days of sunshine and wind to dry out the stocks of grain cut and standing in the fields, following heavy rains in the province during the past three days. Unless there is a quick change from cloudy and damp weather it is feared that the loss to Ontario farmers will be very severe as the grain will not be up to standard for milling purposes.

FIRE THREATENS SMALL VILLAGE

Wind Is Bringing Forest Fire Down on Tucket, N.S.

NO WATER HANDY.

YARMOUTH, Aug. 23 (Canadian Press).—The little village of Tucket near here was threatened with destruction at noon today with a raging forest fire sweeping down upon it from two directions, fanned by a brisk wind. The only hope of the villagers rested upon the prompt arrival of fire fighting apparatus speeding from Yarmouth with enough hose to draw water from the river, half a mile from the village. With no rain for weeks and all the wells and water courses dry, the fire has been burning several days, defying all efforts of the fire fighters. Last night the wind shifted and the flames were being rapidly driven against the village where the lack of water left the people helpless.

6,000 MINERS BACK AT WORK

Enter Pits in Midlands Area —Many Others Turn Back.

MINES PICKETED.

LONDON, Aug. 23.— (Canadian Press.)—For the first time in seventeen weeks coal is scheduled to be shipped out of the Midlands area to-day. Some 6,000 men of the the pits to-day and began production in Derbyshire and Derbyshire who signed to return to work, actually entered the pits to-day and began producing coal.

The mine owners expressed satisfaction at the situation and at the number of men who returned to work, considering the intensive campaign made by the union leaders to prevent a break in the ranks of the strikers. Union pickets, including many women, persuaded hundreds of men who arrived at the pit heads, not to go down in the mines.

22,500 VOLTS FAILS TO KILL

Two Linemen Are Badly Shocked While at Work Near Beaverton.

ARE RECOVERING.

BEAVERTON, August 23 (Canadian Press).—Although 22,500 volts of electricity passed through the bodies of Rod Thompson, lineman of the Hydro plant at Wasdell Falls, and James Ward, assistant at the Hydro station at Cannington, both men are still alive. Thompson is now in Hospital at Orillia, out of danger, and recovering from severe burns on the body, while Ward is able to follow his usual round of work in Cannington. The accident occurred on Saturday afternoon at a point where a branch line is tied up to the main power line from Wasdell Falls. The two men were sitting in an automobile operating a portable set in the course of helping with repair work after the severe storm of Saturday. In some manner the switch was turned on, and the electric current sped down the portable telephone set to the automobile where the two men were sitting. Thompson dropped and Ward tried to drag him from the fire, but as soon as Ward's feet touched ground, his body became a conductor. They were finally extricated and removed to hospital.

FORCE OF FIFTY MOUNTED POLICE SHUTS OFF RUM-RUNNING ACROSS DETROIT RIVER, WINDSOR REPORT

Acting Minister of Customs Is Unaware of Order Being Issued.

DOCKS WATCHED.

Legitimate Export Business Is Not Interfered With By Federal Officers.

OTTAWA, August 24. — When his attention was drawn to a Windsor despatch stating the Mounted Police had checked rum-running at Windsor, Ont., Hon. James D. Chaplin, Acting Minister of Customs and Excise, stated that he knew of no general or special order covering rum running at such border points as Windsor. "We are trying to carry out the law to the best of our ability wherever violations occur,' said Mr. Chaplin, "but no special order to my knowledge has been issued."

Windsor is Optimistic.

WINDSOR, Aug. 23. — Fifty "Mounties" who arrived during the week-end have shut off night-running to Detroit, and the "short-circuiting" business by which boot-leggers supply scores of bling pigs in the Border Cities, it is stated.

The legitimate export business of the score or more export docks is not being interfered with by the Federal officers who have stretched their lines frm Belle River to Amherstburg, but after-dark shipments have stopped, and no longer is the bootlegger able to supply his blind big customers, it is claimed. The Mounties slipped into the city late on Saturday night, and at once m de their presence felt. Nine fo the officers were assigned to duty at two of the La Salle docks, and as a result not a drop of Ontario brewed beer or any kind liquor crossed the international line, exporters declared yesterday.

QUAKE IS FELT AT PEMBROKE

Houses Shaken and Crockery Rattled By Sharp Shock.

NO DAMAGE.

PEMBROKE, August 24 (Canadian Press).—A sharp earthquake shock, followed by earth tremors lasting for about 30 seconds, was felt here about 12.40 o'clock yesterday. The quake appeared to pass from north to south. The first indication was a roar similar to a distant blast which shook houses in all parts of the town and set crockery and tinware rattling. No damage has been reported in this district, though the quake seems to have been rather severe in some localities.

VANCOUVER, B.C., August 24 (Special).—"I am convinced that Canada offers unlimited opportunities to immigrants from the Old Country," said the Marquis of Salisbury, chairman of the Empire Parliamentary Association and leader of the Conservatives in the British House of Lords, as he stepped off his special car here yesterday.

"The 3,000 family scheme," said His Lordship, "is progressing simply wonderfully, and I earnestly hope it will be possible in the future to procure British immigrants for Canada on a much larger scale."

The Marquis of Salisbury left this afternoon for Victoria, where he will meet on Wednesday the other delegates of the Empire Parliamentary Association who are attending the biennial conference in Australia. The party will sail the same afternoon for Australia.

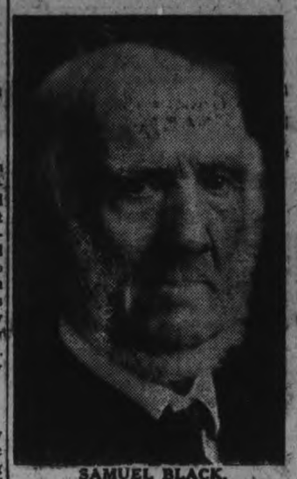
93 YEARS OLD



SAMUEL BLACK,
a pioneer of Northumberland County, who celebrated his birthday last week.

CELEBRATES HIS 93RD BIRTHDAY

J. Samuel Black, of Percy Township, Recalls Pioneer Days in District.

MANY DESCENDANTS

To count ninety-three milestones along life's highway is a privilege not extended to many of us, and particularly unique was the celebration of this event in the life of Samuel Black, one of Northumberland County's early pioneers, on Saturday last. About seventy-five of his children and descendants, with other friends, gathered at the old Black homestead, near Warkworth, to extend well-wishes to Mr. Black, who enjoyed the day as much as his great-grandchildren. A unique event on the day's program was the christening of one of the great-grandchildren, the three-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Watson, of Peterboro.

Another particularly pleasing event was the meeting of Mr. Black with his old-time pioneer friend, William Sandercock, of Bowmanton, near Rice Lake, Peterboro. Mr. Sandercock is ninety years old, just three years his life-long friend's junior, and over half a century ago these two established their farms together in the Rice Lake district. Here side by side, they had cleared the land, and with each other shared the hardships of early pioneer life.

It was in the year 1833 at Ballymena, county of Antrim, Ireland, in a mud-thatched Irish cottage, that Mr. Black was born. That he comes of a long-lived family is shown by the fact that his brother, James, who remained in Ireland, died only about two years ago, at the ripe old age of ninety-six years.

In the year 1846 Mr. Black decided to try his fortune in Canada, and sailed from Belfast on the sailing vessel, "John Howell." On board there were nearly 400 passengers, and after six weeks' voyage, they gained their first glimpse of the battlements of Quebec. Transferring to a river boat, the passengers came on down the St. Lawrence and up Lake Ontario to Cobourg.

Here the pioneer landed, and striking inland, he engaged himself to work on the farm of George Isaac, at Gore's Landing, Rice Lake. A few years later he purchased land and becoming married to Miss Mary Sherwin, settled in the district. About fifty years ago they took up a homestead in Percy Township, and the Black farm still remains in the family possession, now being owned by his son, James H. Black.

Recollections of the early days come easily to the old pioneer. He can clearly recall the stage coaches, the old wood-burning locomotives, with their large smoke-stacks, on the Cobourg-Harwood Railway. On his farm he can point out the first stone he rolled off the land, and also several trees that he planted along the roadway.

In the affairs of Percy Township he has always taken a deep interest and was for many years President of the Agricultural Society. For over forty years he has been an elder in the Warkworth Presbyterian Church, and when Church Union was consummated, he was one of the first to enter the United Church of Canada.

All the six children who survive were present at the birthday celebration. They are: Rev. J. A. Black, Plainfield, Ont.; Mrs. W. J. Harper, Warkworth; Mrs. James Armstrong, Warkworth; Mrs. O. M. Alger, Oshawa; James H. Black, Warkworth, and Mrs. C. L. Cryderman, Toronto.

Guards Pay Their Homage To Retreat From Mons

LONDON, Aug. 24.—Tourists present yesterday at the changing of the guard at St. James' Palace, a ceremony which always attracts and charms them, wondered what was the significance of a wreath borne on the Guards' colors. It was in memory of the famous retreat from Mons, twelve years ago. The Guards were among the first British troops to face the German advance through Belgium, and displayed great gallantry when, unsupported, they had to retreat from Mons before the overwhelming tide of Germans.

ENGLISH MINERS DESERT LEADERS RETURN TO WORK

Coal Brought From Mines in Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire.

ABOUT 6,000 MEN.

Resume Work on Seven and One-half Hour Day Basis.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—The suspension of coal mining in England, which has lasted four months, was broken yesterday, and coal was brought up from the mines in Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire. About 6,000 miners, in defiance of their official leaders, descended into the pits and resumed work on the seven and one-half hour day basis.

In the meantime, A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation, and his associates, are working hard to prevent the growth of this breakaway, which, however, has not been on such a big scale as the owners had hoped. A similar break in Warwickshire occurred early in the present dispute, but was speedily checked by the miners' leaders and active picketing efforts.

The break in the miners' ranks is limited to the two counties named: there is still no sign of the men yielding in Northumberland, Yorkshire or South Wales. Only a comparatively small percentage of the men who signed on descended into the pits in the early morning shift, others came on the shift and more are expected to resume work to-day. But there were evident signs that Secretary Cook's lightning tour through the counties had spread indecision among the men.

Both Cabinet Ministers and Labor leaders are absent from London and no attempt is being made at negotiations for a settlement.

It is evident that there is no present intention on the part of the Government to intervene in the dispute in any way, the belief prevailing among the owners and Ministers that the example of the miners in Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire will soon be followed in other coalfields.

Mr. Cook, in a review of the situation to the newspapermen, asserted that the breakaway had been definitely stemmed. He admitted that many thousands had signed on, but declared they did so under misapprehension of the terms and were reconsidering their action.

FRENCH OFFICIALS AGREE THAT THE TANGIER DISPUTE WITH SPAIN CAN BE SETTLED BY COMPROMISE

France Is Ready To Meet the Demands of Spain.

TO BLOCK INTRIGUE.

No Modification Is Needed of Pact With Great Britain.

PARIS, August 24 (Canadian Press).—A compromise on the question of Tangier, which will satisfy Spanish aspirations in that territory, is now thought possible in official French circles.

Negotiations over the international territory thus far have been confined to unofficial talk between the French Charge d'Affaires and the Spanish Foreign Minister, but the French are aware of the reasons why Spain wants a bigger control of Tangier and thinks that the wish can be satisfied.

Block Conspiracies.

The Spanish attitude is that the long war on the Riff, which cost Spain 40,000 men and several billion pesetas, was prolonged by intrigues that had their origin in Tangier. In order to prevent a recurrence of the conflict in Morocco, the Spanish feel that they ought to have some means of preventing Tangier from again becoming the centre of hostile plotting.

The opinion is held in French circles that satisfaction can be given Spain on that point, without modifying the status of Tangier, as agreed upon by the accord signed by Great Britain, France and Spain. It is suggested that Spain might be permitted to appoint a Spaniard as head of the Tangier police instead of a neutral as at present. This is felt would give Spain the authority needed for the control of plotters without abandoning the international organization of the city.

Premier Primo de Rivera recently was quoted in a Madrid newspaper as expressing the feeling that Tangier should be included in the Spanish zone in Morocco. This later drew a declaration from a member of the Fascist Cabinet in Italy that any solution of the Tangier question which did not include Italy's rights would be protested to the League of Nations.

MONSTER FISH LEFT ON SHORE

Was Following School of Herring—Stranded in Shallow Water.

SEVERAL TONS.

HALIFAX, N. S., Aug. 24 (Canadian Press).—While pursuing a school of herring off Lawrencetown, a huge fish 21 feet in length and weighing several tons ventured so near the beach that it got stranded in the shallow water, where its frantic movements only served to throw it nearer the land from which it was trying to escape. The monster's death struggles as the tide left it high and dry were witnessed by Aubrey Conrad, a farmer, and before long the news spread throughout district. Yesterday hundreds of cars crowded the roads leading to Lawrencetown, many coming from Halifax and Dartmouth, a few departed without a souvenir.

When the fish's teeth gave out, the disapointed curio seekers began to cut pieces from its body.

The monster is believed to be either a whale grampus or giant black-fish.

Wouldn't Disturb Parents Keeps Them Up All Night

WASHINGTON, D.C., Aug. 23.— (United News.)— Tony Kogok, who is 15, found everybody at home asleep when he returned from a moving picture show. He didn't want to disturb the family so he picked out a cool spot along the river front. The parents whom he didn't want to disturb stayed awake all night looking for him with the aid of the police in a search that ended at dawn.

Son Declares Krupp Works Make No More Armament

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 24 (A.P.).—Germany's famous Krupp Works at Essen probably will never manufacture arms again, in the opinion of Baron G. Frederick E. von Krupp, only son of the present head of the plant.

The young man, who recently completed his second year at Harvard, said his father was educating him eventually to take charge of the works. When he assumes control, he added:

"We won't make guns, for I don't believe in war. The plant now manufactures steel."

Baron von Krupp arrived from the East in an automobile presented by Henry Ford. He and his parents will sail for Honolulu in a few days.

Sorbonne Lectures at 4 Cts. Impart Culture Of France

PARIS, Aug. 24.— For 1 franc 33 centimes, about 4 cents, it is possible to-day to attend a lecture at the Sorbonne delivered by professors bearing the most famous names in contemporary French science, art, history and literature.

That probably is the record low price in the world for the opportunity to acquire higher learning. This is what it costs to attend the Summer vacation courses held especially to give foreigners an acquaintance with French culture.

These courses, which are usually attended mostly by teachers of foreign universities, are growing increasingly popular every year, there being over 500 enrolled this year, as compared with 360 in 1925. The list includes a large number of Germans as well as many Americans.

Town Clock Is "Sick" Repairs To Take Week

Peterborough citizens who have been making the town clock their authority for the time will have to depend upon their own watches for at least a week. The big clock that has ruled the city is at present on the sick list and the jeweller in charge of the case is of the opinion that it will take at least the time above mentioned before the necessary repairs can be effected.

BISHOP SEAGER IS CONSECRATED AT CATHEDRAL

Impressive Service Held This Morning in Kingston Church.

MANY CLERGY.

Church is Well Filled With People From His Diocese.

KINGSTON, August 24 (Canadian Press).—Rev. Charles Allen Seager, M.A., D.D., LL.D., late Provost of Trinity College, was this morning consecrated and installed as Bishop of Ontario in succession to the Right Rev. Dr. E. J. Bidwell, resigned. The service, which was most solemn and impressive, was witnessed by a congregation that completely filled the historic St. George's Cathedral. There were about fifty clergy present from the Diocese besides many delegates, while there was a distinguished delegation of clergy and laity from Toronto, Montreal, Ottawa and other cities were represented. The consecration service began at 11 o'clock, the processional hymn being "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name."

The Communion service was then celebrated by the Bishop of Huron, the consecrating bishop. The epistle was read by the Bishop of Ottawa, and the Gospel by St. John, 21: 15, by Bishop Hamilton of Mid-Japan. The sermon was delivered by the Bishop of Toronto. Following this, the Bishop-designate was presented to the consecrating bishop by the Bishop of Ottawa and the Bishop of Niagara, after which the Chancellor of the Diocese, I. B. Walkem, K.C., read the certificate of Dr. Seager's selection for the Bishopric and the certificate of the Metropolitan.

NO EVIDENCE OF COMBINE FOUND BY INVESTIGATOR INTO SYSTEM OF MARKETING CANADIAN FRUIT

Report Draws Attention To Lack of Proper Public Markets.

POOR ACCOUNTING.

Peterborough Included in List of Cities Visited During Inquiry.

OTTAWA, Aug. 24 (Canadian Phess).—Complaints made to the Federal Minister of Labor that the growers and consumers of fruits and vegetables in Eastern Canada were being injured by the operations of a "combine" in the distribution of these products have been declared to be without foundation by Lewis Duncan of Toronto in a report to the Minister made today. The report emphasizes the absence of adequate public marketing facilities, particularly in Toronto, also the lack of proper accounting to growers on the part of many of the wholesale houses.

The commissioner recommends:

That legislation be enacted making a jobber-broker combine unlawful; that persons handling domestic fruits and vegetables on commission be required to make, and for a definite period to keep proper and complete records of the disposition of goods entrusted to them for sale, and that it be made an offence to render false or misleading accounts of sales or other similar returns; that some proper official be given authority to receive complaints from consignors of domestic fruits and vegetables, to examine books and records of consignees, to record fraudulent practices and bankruptcy of such persons, and to take such action for the prosecution of offenders and protection of the public as may be required; that consideration be given to the creation of a market department with wide powers for the purpose of co-ordinating co-operative and other shipping effort, disseminating reliable market information and assisting the marketing of agricultural products on sound economic lines both in Canada and abroad.

The report is taken up largely with results of inquiries made in various business practices which have affected the fruit trade in Central Ontario; distribution to the United Kingdom, to Northern Ontario and other provinces, calling for no adverse comment. In Ontario the inquiry covered Toronto, Hamilton, London, Kingston, Peterborough, Brantford, Grimsby, Niagara, Beamsville, St.Catharines, Simcoe,

Office No Beauty Shop Dental Professor Says

PENNSYLVANIA, August 24. —Dr. Sheppard W. Foster, president of the American Dental Association, opened the second day of the American Dental Assistants' Convention at the Thomas W. Evans Museum and Dental Institute, University of Pennsylvania, with an address in which he said that dental assistants had not yet reached their proper plane but that great strides were being made in this direction.

"You are beginning to realize that a dental office is a place for skill and hard work and not a place for applying lipstick and rouge," he declared.

Dr. J. Saunders, delegate from Holland, the next speaker, described the increase in standing of dental assistants in Holland.

FOREST FIRES UNDER CONTROL

Fighters Say Tusket Village Saved From Destruction.

WIND DIES DOWN.

YARMOUTH, N.S., Aug. 24.—(Canadian Press.) — Reports last night of the forest fire threatening the village of Tusket, near here, with destruction, stated that while the blaze was still burning, the wind had died down and the situation looked more hopeful. Moreover, the tide was rising in the Tusket river, half a mile from the village, which would soon make it possible for the fire fighters to pump water. This afternoon, the tide being out, it was found impossible to get sufficient water from the river to combat the flames.

Men and apparatus were rushed to the scene from here yesterday when it became known that the flames were sweeping down on the village from two directions and that owing to many of the wells in Tuskett being dry on account of the draught, the residents were practically powerless to check the onrushing conflagration.

Last night it was learned that the fire had already burned over four miles of territory and that it had broken out in another spot, though how seriously was not ascertained.

WAR IN PACIFIC MAY COME SOON

Not Now So Imminent as in 1914, But Still is Possible.

AUSTRALIA COMPLAINS

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 24.—(Canadian Press).—Although the danger is not as imminent or acute as it was in 1914, influences are at work in the Far East which at any time might precipitate war, said Admiral W. V. Pratt, President of the Naval War College, in addressing the Institute of Politics today. A new world conflagration might be particularly welcome to Russia, he said, which depends on the adoption of the Soviet form of Government by other nations to bolster her political experiment.

H. Duncan Hall, professor of international relations at Sydney University, said that Australia has reason to complain of the United States policy in the Pacific. Her late entry into the Great War and her attitude toward debt settlement and the League of Nations are probable sources of irritation to Australians, he said. He added that the traditional distrust between Japan and Australia had been dispelled.

Police Capture Madman By Use of Tear Gas Bombs

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—The police brought tear-gas bombs into play yesterday morning before they could subdue Everett Holton, who had gone suddenly mad, and after barricading himself in his home in Richmond Hill, began to snipe at policemen as they appeared in front of the house.

Twelve policemen came to the scene in a hurry. Their coming was noted by the man in the apartment, for hardly were they in front of the house than a window opened, the rifle was pushed through the opening, and a clattering of shots sent the reserves to cover.

This sort of warfare was in progress when the emergency squad from the Classon Avenue Station arrived. One of the squad went quietly up the stairs and flung a bomb against the crack beneath the door. The draft carried the fumes into the room, for the retreating policemen could hear Holton coughing behind the door.

The policemen waited several minutes, but Holton did not emerge. The firing from the window, however, slackened. Having donned their gas masks, so that they would not be affected by the gas, the men went back up the stairs and hurled a second bomb against the crack. Holton could be heard coughing violently. Then the door was flung suddenly open, and Holton staggered from the room and fell headlong into the arms of the policemen.

Dr. Metz of Jamaica Hospital placed Holton in a strait-jacket and he was taken to Kings County Hospital.
